NEW YORK GOLD MEN

Democratic Leaders To Define Their Position on the Ticket.

A STATEMENT EXPECTED BY SATURDAY

The Belief Growing That Hill and Whitney Will Not Bolt, But Content Themselves with Denouncing the 16 to 1 Plank.

New York, July 16.—It is given out semi-officially that the gold standard democratic leaders of this state will define their position in regard to the Bryan ticket in a formal statement which will be made public before the end of this week. The first move towards preparing the statement was made last night when Senator Hill had a long talk with William C. Whitney and James W. Hinckley, chairman of the democratic state committee. Later Senator Hill went to Normandie-by-the-Sea, where he will meet Senator Murphy and several other prominent democrats in the next two days. By Saturday, it is expected, the statement will be ready. Senator Hill was seen by a reporter, but said he was not yet ready to talk for publication, but intimated that he would have something to say soon. "There has been no formal conference yet," he added. "Some of the state leaders have talked over the situation together, but there has been nothing like a general conference." "Will such a conference be held in the next few days?" was asked. "Be on the lookout," the senator replied. "When we are ready to talk the newspapers will be notified." The belief appears to be growing among the local democrats that Hill and Whitney will not bolt the Bryan ticket; that they will content themselves with denouncing the 16 to 1 plank and some other features of the platform, and appeal for the election of sound money democrats to congress and that they will then accept Bryan for the sake of being "regular."

JAY COOKE A SILVERITE.

Calls the Gold Standard a Miserable Delusion.

Philadelphia, July 16.—Jay Cooke, the veteran financier, who successfully placed millions of government bonds during the civil war, was interviewed concerning silver yesterday, and at once exploded in wrath against the opposition to it, which he called "a miserable, crazy notion." He said that if he had the doing of it there would be no room for a gold bug in this country that a single gold standard would ruin the land. He quoted, with approval, from Mr. Carlisle's speech of Feb. 21, 1878, in which the present secretary of the treasury spoke of a "conspiracy formed in this country and Europe to destroy by legislation or otherwise one-half of the metallic money of the globe." The demonetization of silver in 1873 was done, Mr. Cooke says, under a delusion. Most of the senators and representatives did not know what they were doing. Mr. Cooke says if the farmers knew of the awful danger they stand in they would rise in their might and sweep away the politicians. "If gold shall be the only basis of exchange the world's onward march, now rapid, must stop," he said. He announced that he will vote for McKinley with the hope that he and the republican party will see the error of the gold standard and immediately put silver back in the place it belongs.

An Address to Business Men.

Chicago, July 16.—The National Business Men's league has issued an address to the business men of the United States, urging them to take an active part in the campaign against the nominee of the Chicago convention. The address declares that the hard fighting must be done in Illinois, Indiana, and possibly Iowa, and calls upon the business men to take active steps to see that the silver men do not carry any of these states.

Wants Bryan To Visit Baltimore.

Baltimore, July 16.—Congressman Harry Welles Rusk, who is also chairman of the democratic city executive committee, has written a letter to William Jennings Bryan, democratic candidate for president, inviting him to visit Baltimore and promising him a rousing reception. In speaking of the outlook the chairman of the city committee said that the rapid growth of silver sentiment in Maryland had been a matter of great surprise to him.

Unitarian Chapel Dedicated.

Cottage City, Mass., July 16.—The Stevens Unitarian Memorial chapel on West Chop road was dedicated yesterday. There was a large attendance. The leading addresses were delivered by J. G. Tripp of Fair Haven and C. A. Sheldon of Providence. The sermon was given by Rev. George Batchelder, secretary of the Unitarian association of Boston.

A Divorce Law Declared Invalid.

Fort Scott, Kas., July 16.—The Kansas court of aepeals, all the judges concurring, has declared ineffective the law under which divorces have been granted in this state for over twenty-five years. It is estimated that from 35,000 to 50,000 divorces are effected. The decision also effects property rights and the custody of children.

Cotton Mill To Close.

Norwich, Conn., July 16.—Notice has been posted that the Falls cotton mill will shut down Saturday noon for a few weeks. Those employes who are living in the company's houses will not be charged rent while the mill is closed. Over five hundred hands are employed.

New York and Chicago Favored.

Cleveland, O., July 16.—The republican national executive committee have decided to locate headquarters both at New York and Chicago.

BEHRING SEA CLAIMS.

A Further Step Between This Country and England at Settlement.

Washington, July 16.—A further step was taken by Great Britain and the United States several days ago in the matter of consideration of the British claims against this country for seizures in previous years in Behring sea. The announcement was first made in the United Press dispatches a year ago that a treaty providing for the appointment of a joint commission of two to adjust these claims was then in process of construction between Secretary Olney and her majesty's ambassador, Sir Julian Pauncefote. This treaty was subsequently ratified by the senate. It provides, in addition to one representative on the part of each government, for a third commissioner in the event that the two original commissioners fail to agree. The British government has selected George E. King, one of the justices of the supreme court of Canada, while the United States commissioner is Judge William L. Putnam of the first United States judicial circuit. The commissioners will meet at Victoria, B. C., which was selected because of its proximity to the scene of the seizures, but probably not until next autumn.

GLENCAIRN WINS CUP.

We Lost the Seawanhaka Yacht Club's Challenge Trophy for Half-Raters.

Centre Island, Oyster Bay, L. I., July 16.—The third and deciding race for the Seawanhaka Yacht club's challenge cup for half-raters was sailed yesterday. The Canadian challenger, the Glencairn, won the race and cup. She demonstrated that she was a good boat in almost any weather, and dashed the last hope the local yachtsmen had of retaining the trophy. The official time at the finish was: Glencairn, 3 hours, 46 minutes, 51 seconds; El Heire, 3 hours, 52 minutes, 41 seconds. A big reception and dinner will be tendered Capt. Duggan, the owner of the Glencairn, upon his retuan to Montreal.

Steamer Pentagoet Libeled.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., July 16.—Steamer Pentagoet, at this port, has been libeled by a United States deputy marshal at the instance of the Boston Tow Boat company. It was the intention of the owners of this steamer, which was floated off Pasque island by the Boston Tow Boat company, to have her return to New York for repairs, but the wrecking company is not willing to have her go to New York unless its claim is secured.

Boulant Released.

Paris, July 16.—Boulant, the man arrested at Longchamps on the charge of having approved of Francois' presumable attempt upon the life of President Faure, was released yesterday, it having been proved that he did not use the words attributed to him. It was stated by the police that when Francoise dircharged his revolver Boulant exclaimed: "That's the sort of fellow for me. He has done the proper thing."

Were To Have Been Hanged To-day.

Jersey City, July 16.—Judge Lippincott, Sheriff Toffey and County Clerk Fisher were last night served with notice that the court of errors and appeals had granted a stay in the case of John Mackin, who killed his wife and his mother-in-law, and also in the case of Paul Genz, who killed Clara Arnim. Both men would have been hanged today had not the stay been granted.

Boxing Show Fake.

Hartford, July 16.—The boxing show at the Auditorium last night, managed by Holyoke people, was a fake from the beginning. Stanton Abbott refused to fight Tom Moriarty because there was not enough money in the house. Jennings Springfield, who was matched with Austin Rice of New London, did not show up.

Lamont's Statement on Fortifications.

Washington, July 16.—Secretary Lamont, who has spent the past few days investigating the works at Fort Hancock on Sandy Hook, will return to Washington to-day. As a result of the secretary's study of war problems on the ground he is expected to issue a statement on fortifications the latter part of this week.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

WITH THE ELECTRICIANS.

It is said that experiments are being made in Dresden, Germany, with storage batteries and underground conduits with a view to replacing the overhead system of propulsion in Chemnitz.

The Brooklyn bridge trustees have at length adopted electricity as a motive power. The superintendent advertised for bids for electric power, which were received; but it was considered that if the bridge trustees built their own power-house, the corporation would save $20,000 per year upon the cost by the bids received, and this idea is being seriously considered.

Secretary Herbert, Gen. Flagler, chief of ordnance, and other prominent army and navy officers recently witnessed an exhibition of a new electric signaling apparatus for use at sea and on land. The signaling device consists of a frame supporting incandescent lamps so wired as to form all the letters of the alphabet. This is attached to a keyboard frame similar to that of a typewriter, and pressure on any key switches the lamps so that any desired letter is shown in broad curves by lighted lamps.

A New Yorker has devised and patented electric-lighted bulletin boards, which are used with great success. The bulletins are made of ground glass, mounted in frames, in front of which are set parallel glass plates, one-eighth of an inch apart. The letters are of metal, enameled black, and are fastened by means of a spring on the back, which is thrust into the one-eighth inch slot between the parallel glass plates. Electric lights behind the white glass project the letters with wonderful clearness at night, and no weather can blur them.

FROM OVER THE WATER.

A new terramara, or prehistoric settlement, 500 yards long by 250 yards wide, has been discovered at Castenaso, near Bologna.

Sixty dollars fine for smoking in a non-smoking railway carriage was imposed on a Leeds theatrical manager lately. He had also sworn at the man who complained.

A good bull was made recently in parliament by Mr. Murnaghan, member for Tyrone, who on being stopped by the speaker, said: "I bow, sir, to your ruling and merely beg to reiterate what I was about to observe."

A birthday book has been made up by an enterprising London shopkeeper from the announcements of births in the newspapers. A little before the child's birthday arrives its mother receives a typewritten letter calling attention to the suitable gifts in the tradesman's stock, with wishes for many happy returns of the day.

Rontgen has published some new facts about his rays. He finds that all solid bodies can generate them; the only difference being in the intensity, the greatest intensity being produced by platinum. He finds that the insertion of a Tesla coil between the Ruhmkorff coil and the ray-producing apparatus is very advantageous, and that the X rays and the air traversed by them can discharge electric bodies.

MEN OF THE WORLD

If Abdul Hamid Kahn, sultan of Turkey, should lose his job he could probably get work as a cowboy. He has a stable of 2,000 horses and he can break a dozen glass vases with a revolver while galloping past them.

It is said that the attentions of King Leopold of Belgium to Emilienne d'Alencon and Mdlle. de Merode, two notorious Parisian beauties whom he has sumptuously established in Brussels, drove his unhappy queen to commit suicide.

Dr. Jameson is still attracting much attention in London. Publishers' agents are on his track all the time trying to get him to write a book, and an enterprising museum manager has offered him a princely sum to exhibit for a week.

"Old Hoss" McHenry, who has just died, was a celebrated Mississippi river steamboat mate, and it was on account of his vigorous method of bringing to time the roustabouts employed that the Tennessee legislature is said to have enacted a special statute forbidding "Old Hoss" to strike a roustabout with his fist.

FASHION FANCIES.

A debutante's pretty ball gown is made of white satin, with a broche bodice and a full baby front of pailletted net.

Colored shot silk capes and jackets of all kinds are to be the fashion this year, however much the economical may cling to black.

A little jacket cape is of navy blue cloth, with the double-breasted front ornamented by two rows of large pearl buttons. There are revers of blue velvet, and the high flaring collar is faced with velvet.

Dark shot silk blouses, trimmed with pale pink and ecru lawn, made as yoke trimmings with a renaissance scroll, which seemed to fit into the bend at the front of the shoulder, are shown in the London shops.

Real flowers are often carried round the top of low bodices, a spray falling on the skirt, but only a few flowers answer, such as yellow or pink roses of a hardy kind, pinks and carnations, or, in lieu of flowers, ivy leaves.

OPPOSITE MUSIC HALL.

BRYAN AT SALEM.

Reception to the Democratic Nominee at the Town of His Birth.

Salem, Ill., July 16.—Rain somewhat marred the reception extended to Mr. and Mrs. Bryan yesterday afternoon, nevertheless the court house square, when the reception was held, was densely crowded. A reception committee and several bands escorted Mr. and Mrs. Bryan from Mrs. Baird's residence to the park and their appearance was the signal for hearty cheers. L. M. Kagy presided at the meeting and after prayer by Rev. F. B. Young, a Methodist minister, he made a little speech complimentary to Mr. Bryan, who had been his class mate at the Illinois college, and predicting democratic victory in November. The three Allman sisters of Salem sang a song called "Illinois," written by their father to the air of "Baby Mine," and then Mr. Bryan was presented. After the cheering had ceased, he began slowly and distinctly, and when he referred to his father and mother's recent death there was much feeling in his tones. A reception was also tendered him in the evening in the court house square.

Naval Movements.

Washington, July 16.—The Oregon, the first battleship on the Pacific coast, was placed in commission yesterday. The battleship Texas, which has been under repairs at Norfolk ever since she collapsed in dry dock at the New York navy yard, will be commissioned the 23d inst. with her former officers. The Dolphin has been ordered to Washington to take Secretary Herbert away next week on his annual inspection of the New England coast.

Liquor Dealers in Politics.

Waterbury, Conn., July 16.—The National Liquor Dealers' association is organizing the liquor men in every city and town in the state for the purpose of looking after the interests of the trade in the coming elections. National organizer P. H. Nolan and Samuel Munch of this city, the state secretary, are actively engaged in the work. Meetings have been arranged for Danbury, Norwalk, Wallingford and Torrongtin.

Floated and Then Beached.

St. Johns, N. F., July 16.—The steamer Tormore, which went ashore at Cape Pine Tuesday night during a dense fog, has been floated. A pilot was engaged and an attempt made to reach Trepassey, but the steamer leaked so badly that she had to be beached outside the harbor to prevent her sinking. She is laden with coal.

All on Board Lost.

London, July 16.—A dispatch to Lloyds says that the British steamer Curfew, Captain Learmouth, has been wrecked in the Red sea and all hands on board lost. The Curfew was a composite screw steamer of 1,261 tons. She was built in the yards of W. B. Thompson & Co., at Dundee, in 1888.

Postmaster Sheridan Dead.

Elizabeth, N. J., July 16.—Patrick Sheridan, postmaster and well-known citizen, died yesterday of Bright's disease. He was 62 years old. He was appointed postmaster at Elizabeth in 1892 by President Cleveland. He served as a member of the town council here and as collector of Union county.

Immigration to Canada.

Toronto, Ont., July 16.—The Ontario government is looking into the matter of immigration and will take measures to prevent English philanthropic societies from sending vicious and diseased children into Canada.

Johnson Makes a New Bicycle Record.

London, July 16.—At the Catford track yesterday afternoon John H. Johnson, the American bicyclist, made a quarter of a mile from a standing start in 28 1-5 seconds, beating the record.

SPORTS

THURSDAY, July 16. Sun rises 4:38 a. m., sets 7:32 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:32 p. m. and 3:38 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Edward Vail, of Elmwood place, has learned to ride a wheel and enjoys the sport exceedingly.

Bicycle races and junior athletic games will be held in Washington Park on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Cora Laire and F. W. L. Fullerton rode over to Boynton Beach yesterday and spent the day.

R. Robinson, of Scotch Plains, collided with a wagon at the corner of Fourth street and Park avenue Tuesday afternoon. His wheel was wrecked.

The Crescent Wheelmen were to hold a regular monthly club meeting last night, but the warm weather kept the members at home and no quorum was present.

Richard and Ned Waring, of Park avenue, and Roy Phillips, of Madison avenue, spent yesterday at Boynton Beach. They rode over and back on their wheels.

Chas. Hazeltine, of Westervelt avenue, has just taken up the game of tennis. He is fast developing into an expert player and great things are expected of him.

Chic Madden, of this city, who was getting entries among the juveniles for a bicycle race, has given up the idea owing to the inability to get entries enough to guarantee their success.

A wheelwoman, dressed in white, was run into by a scorcher at the corner of Fifth street and Watchung avenue Tuesday afternoon. The street had just been sprinkled and the woman's dress was a sight.

Residents of Stone street are progressive and up to date. Four of them number are learning the intricacies of bicycle riding, they are Mrs. William Demarest, Mrs. J. H. Higgins, Charles Ammerman and Robert Hamilton.

As Miss Ella Benner and Mrs. Charles Sturtevant, of Orchard place, were wheeling along Watchung avenue last night, when an unknown man collided with Miss Benner. Both were thrown from their wheels, and the machines were considerably damaged. Neither was injured.

The Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, under whose auspices the annual meeting of the New Jersey division of the L. A. W. will be held at Paterson August 8th, has decided to hold a parade on that date, just before the meet. Six prizes will be offered, three to the clubs presenting the neatest appearance, and three to the clubs having the largest number of men in line.

The popularity of race meets this year has been an emphatic surprise to many people. It was generally thought that when Class B was abolished that the masses would lose all interest in the racing question. Just the reverse has been the case. The professional races this year have been well and honestly contested, and the ever watchful L. A. W. officials will keep it that way. There is no reason why cycle racing should not have just as much of a public following as baseball and horse racing. Nearly every State will have its racing circuit in '97.

LAWN TENNIS.

The junior tennis championships of the Park Club are the cause of a number of exciting contests. In the class A singles, William Roome has wrested the championship from William Townsend by a score of 6-4, 6-1. Fred Overton has challenged him, and they will meet next Saturday. In the class A doubles, William Roome and Fred Overton now hold the championship, having defeated William Townsend and Arthur Peck, 8-6, 6-3. The latter team have challenged the champions for Saturday.

A handicap tennis tournament in men's singles open to Plainfield and North Plainfield will be played Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock on the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. It will be a "Round Robin" tournament, each player meeting the other players. The matches will be continued Saturdays until finished. The entrance fee is fifty cents, and all entries must be left with Carl Pfeiffer, of Madison avenue, or G. H. Ryder, of East Front street, before 6 o'clock tomorrow evening.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Plainfield Athletic Club's baseball nine will go to Metuchen Saturday afternoon to meet the team from the Metuchen Athletic Club. The Metuchen nine is mostly composed of college boys, many of whom play on their college nines, and they are expected to put up a good game.

PLAINFIELD'S GREAT MEET.

The Coming Circuit Meet to Be the Greatest Ever Held Here.

The national circuit meet to be held at Plainfield on Saturday, September 26th, will be the greatest event of its kind ever held in this city. Already the Racing Board of the Crescent Wheelmen, which club holds the sanction for the meet, has been able to make the first preparations. There will be seven events, four amateur and three professional. Leading professional cracks, who have been following the circuit, will be here, while amateurs of note will attend, as the Crescent Wheelmen are known to give full value in prizes offered, besides treating visitors in an up-to-date manner. There will be one change from the usual list of events, and that will be in the addition of a two-mile tandem race, something entirely new to Plainfield audiences.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Harry McDonald and "Al" Runyon caught a few weakfish yesterday at at Seawaren.

Judson R. Giles and John Petrie went fishing at New Market Tuesday and secured a record breaking bass besides other smaller fish.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

The valuable trotter, "Frank," belonging to J. P. Emmons, of Prospect avenue, is foundered, and will be unable to do any more fast work.

The Elm Beetle.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The residents of Plainfield have heard a great deal about the elm beetle this year, and a considerable sum of money has been spent in the endeavor to prevent its destructive work, but his name is legion and a vast army has escaped the effect of the "spraying," which was to save our elms. The larva have enjoyed two months of favorable weather and a luxuriance of foliage to feed upon, and are now coming down the trunks of the trees and taking up pleasant quarters in the rough bark, where in one week they will change from the pupa or chrysalis stage to that of the beetle, which, in the event of escaping destruction from the "Economic Entomologists," will go back to its feeding grounds and deposit another brood. It behooves the sprayers to take him while he is napping, by working on the tree trunks with some other vile compound than London purple.

The Woodpecker.

Street Railway Officers.

The annual meeting of the Street Railway company was held in this city this morning, when the following officers were re-elected: President Thomas Nevins; vice president, J. T. Fritts; secretary and treasurer, Chandler W. Riker; directors, J. B. Brown, J. T. Fritts, Thomas Nevins, Jr., Cortland Riker, Adrian Riker, Chandler W. Riker, and Thomas Nevins; superintendent, J. H. Adlemann. The condition of the road was discussed and the company expressed their satisfaction of the same.

Randolph Property Secured.

It is understood that the syndicate of capitalists who have purchased the property near the Park club have at last secured control of the Randolph property, owned by Frank S. Runyon, on West Front street, near Liberty street, thus providing an opening for the proposed new thoroughfare on to Front street. The transfer has not yet been made, however, and this afternoon Mr. Runyon declined to say anything about the matter.

"Cholly, why is it that people say: 'As funny as a goat?'"

A Play on Words.

"Those rabbits remind me of Sullivan, the prize fighter."

"Because they are knocked out?"

"No, because they are dead game."—Truth.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

PICKINGS OF VERSE

A Day in June.

Behold the gently waving grass
All varnished o'er with green,
While creeping through the crevices
The wild rock flowers are seen.

The sunbeam glancing from on high
Floods all the world with light;
The air is dancing to and fro
On pinions of delight

How grand, how beautiful is earth,
When nature's wealth is spread;
I fain would worship every tree
That waves above my head.

Hark! the air is filled with sounds
Sweet as a seraph's song,
The woodland hills are sending forth
Their echoes loud and long.

The sky is gorgeous with the hues
Of summer's infant day,
The very light leaps forth in joy
And stretches far away.

My pulses bound with pure delight,
With nature's throbs attune,
A song of praise wells from my heart
For this perfect day in June.

—Ladies' World.

His Sweetheart.

My sweetheart—she just loves me through every shining day;
She's a rose to me in winter an' the sweetest
rose in May;
I never mind the seasons; they're always fair to see;
A rainbow's in the heavens, for my sweetheart—she loves me!

My sweetheart—still she loves me; no matter where I roam,
I see her eyes, like bright blue skies, that woo an' win me home;
And never where my footsteps stray
wherever I may be,
Will any skies seem dark, for still my sweetheart—she loves me!

My sweetheart—she just loves me! I see in her bright eyes
All that I've heard of Heaven, and it's nearer than the skies!
The seasons change, but what to me is fruit of flower or tree
When we go through life together and my sweetheart—she loves me!

—Atlanta Constitution.

A Church Heroine.

She sat in her pew as straight and prim
As a puritan maiden could.
And she turned the leaves with her fingers slim
As though she were really good.
But although she murmured each solemn prayer
And said her responses right
There was something wrong in the sacred air
That clouded her spirits bright.

Again she knelt by her mother's side:
But this time when she arose 'twas plain
She had fought and conquered her sinful pride
And was humble and good again.
But no one knew of the awful strife
She had conquered and quelled alone,
When she saw her rival as "big as life"
With a bonnet just like her own.

—N. Y. World.

A Gloomy Outlook.

From cloudless skies the sun is flinging
Warm kisses to the earth;
From verdant trees gay birds are singing
In ecstasy of mirth.

The summer zephyrs, drunk with pleasure,
The leaves and grasses toy;
The green leaves dance a merry measure,
The grasses nod with joy.

But though the sky and earth are brimming
With happiness and light,
A vague and darksome fear is dimming
A sickening soul with blight.

For ere yon sun shall make its flitting
The clay that soul doth wear
Has an appointment for a sitting Upon a dentist's chair.

—Chicago News.

A Cheering Suggestion.

With apple blossoms now the trees are white,
But lovely woman squirms
To think that pretty soon they will be full of canker worms.

Each new-born day is now a new delight,
A joy, a glad surprise;
But soon the summer air will be alive
With swarms of flies.

Yet, what's the use of fretting now because
The summer will be hot?
It's much more sensible to take the good
Of what we've got.

So make the most of life while it is fair,
And do not fear or dread
The evils of the future. When they come
You may be dead.

—Somerville Journal.

Lip Service.

Lord, hear my lips, and not my heart!—
Untempted lips that purely plead
Allegiance to the better part;
Oh hear the word, and wait the deed!
As winds will shake some wretched reed,
Perchance to spare, perchance to kill,
My wavering heart 'twixt word and will
Is shaken still.

Then let my loyal lips be heard
Above my heart's rebellious cry.
If anything in me hath erred,
It is my heart, it is not I!
Pass not my prayer and pledges by;
My patient lips shall steadfast sue,
That stubborn citadel subdue,
And make them true.

—Louise B. Edwards, in Harper's Magazine.

Our Wages.

My board and clothes and a place to sleep
Are all that I can earn.
I rise with the lark and work till dark,
And save at every turn.
I strive, and yet all I can get,
Though I brab, and grasp, and keep,
And house, and hoard, is just my board
And clothes and a place to sleep.

My lot would seem a sorrowful one;
But there are others who
Work twice as hard their gold to guard,
For just these wages, too.
And smile or frown, or king or clown,
Or genius rare or cheap,
Not one of the horde gets more than his board
And clothes and a place to sleep.

—Nixon Waterman, in L. A. W. Bulletin.

A Love Song to Jenny.

Maidens, maidens—there are many,
Here, and over sea;
But my heart goes out to Jenny,
And her heart comes home to me!

Blithe she is, and fair as any,
Where the fairest be;
And I know that I love Jenny,
And I know that she loves me!

Poor I am, with scarce a penny;
Riches woo, but she
Hears the heart that beats for Jenny
And comes home with love for me!

—Atlanta Constitution.

His Suit.

She smiled upon his suit, and yet
He was not pleased, forsooth;
It was a matter of regret
To this most stylish youth.

He might have been a millionaire
And did not care to wed.
She could not lose such chances rare—
She had a level head.

Although he loved the maiden sly,
His feelings were acute,
He wore a loud plaid—that is why
She smiled upon his suit.

SUDDEN ILLNESS ENDS IN DEATH.

Aaron P. Sutton Taken Sick Monday and Died Yesterday.

The many friends of Aaron P. Sutton will be shocked to hear of his death, which occurred last night at 6:30 at his home on Liberty street, after an illness lasting since Monday. Previous to this time Mr. Sutton enjoyed excellent health and never complained. On Monday he was working on a job in the borough when he was suddenly taken with illness. He was taken home and Dr. Zeglio called. His illness seemed to be stomach trouble, and on Wednesday he rallied and hopes of his speedy recovery were assured. But this was followed with an attack of heart trouble, from which he could not seem to rally. Everything possible was done, but to no purpose, and last evening he succumbed to the inevitable.

Mr. Sutton was 59 years old and was born at Fairmount, Hunterdon county. His early years were spent at that place, where he learned the mason trade. Later he was married and moved to Dunellen. He moved from the latter place to this city about ten years ago. For the past twenty-five years he has done work in this vicinity. He was a veteran of the late war and a member of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., of this city. He was a staunch and faithful Christian man and a member of the First M. E. church. Mr. Sutton was a man of even temper and was admired and well thought of by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. A widow, two daughters and two sons survive him. One of the daughters is Mrs. Amos Vail, of Dunellen, and the other is unmarried and lives at home. Of the sons, Willard V. Sutton, is married and lives on East Third street, and Fred Sutton lives at home. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

DEPARTURE REGRETTED.

Congregational Sunday-school Recognize C. E. Boss's Faithful Services.

The following resolutions have been unanimously adopted by the Sunday-school of the Congregational church in grateful recognition of the faithful services of Charles E. Boss, who was superintendent of the school for three years:

Whereas, Our superintendent, Chas. E. Boss, is to remove from the town, and can therefore no longer be with us,

Resolved, That we, the members of the Congregational Sunday-school, feel deep regret at Mr. Boss's departure, considering our loss to be a very great one; that we appreciate greatly his faithful labors for the good of the school; that we assure him of our great respect and warm regard for him personally, and that we pray that God's richest blessings may accompany him wherever he may go.

Resolved further, That a copy of this resolution be sent to Mr. Boss, and a copy spread upon the minutes of the school.

Democrats Couldn't Break the Lock

The new Elizabeth Board of Education failed last night to break the deadlock over the office of secretary. The six Democrats were evenly divided in their preferences and owing to the absence of Commissioner Bennett, Democrat, who holds the balance of power, nothing could be done. The Republican secretary is safe for another week.

Killed on the Rail.

Engine 218, while going up track No. 5 to the Elizabeth yard yesterday afternoon to get a circus train, struck and killed Andrew Daly, the night track walker, opposite the section house. He was sitting in the middle of the track. His body was taken to Jensen's morgue, Elizabeth.

To Sail for Europe.

James Martin, State Arbitration Commissioner and editor of the New Jersey edition of the New York Tribune, will sail for Europe Saturday on the Campania. He will be gone about a month.

Children's Lawn Party.

A children's lawn party was held on the lawn adjoining Mr. and Mrs. Henry Windham's residence, on Somerset street, Wednesday evening. It was arranged by Joseph Blatz, Jr., and the lawn was very prettily decorated with flags, Chinese lanterns and bunting. Tables were located in convenient places for ice cream, cake, etc., and it is needless to say there was an abundance for all. Among those present were Amelia Widemeyer, Harry Hedden, Master Kirch, Miss Lizzie Maurer, Freddie Hipp, Katie Kielly, Violet VanDeventer and Anna Hurlich.

BY IMPRINT OF A HEEL.

PLAINFIELD POLICE THINK THEY HAVE A DUNELLEN BURGLAR.

A Man Now Serving a Sentence for Carrying Concealed Weapons Will Answe to the Charge of Breaking and Entering.

Just two weeks ago this morning, someone entered Adam Dealaman's store at Dunellen. He escaped. The Plainfield police investigated the case and now have woven a net of evidence about a man who is now serving a sentence at the county jail for carrying concealed weapons that leaves little doubt as to who attempted to burglarize the Dunellen store.

As Patrolman Hartpence was patroling his beat near Netherwood, on the morning of July 3, at about 3:15 o'clock, he met a man at the corner of Belvidere and South avenues. The man had no hat and as all respectable citizens are supposed to be in bed at that hour, the officer hailed the stranger and investigated his case. His answers were not satisfactory and on searching the policeman found a revolver hidden in his pocket. The man was locked up and came up for trial before City Judge DeMeza later in the morning.

As was told in the Daily Press at the time the man gave his name as James Williams and was sent to Elizabeth for thirty days.

That same morning, sometime between twelve and two o'clock, Dealaman's store was entered. The uninvited visitor made his way in over the transom to the front door. When it came to getting out, he tried to use the rear window as his exit. He pushed up the back window but found a heavy blind barring his passage. The bolt worked with a catch which the burglar did not understand so he gave up trying to work it and made an attempt to force the blind. He secured a good hold in the room and used his heels as battering rams. After several crashes the blind gave way but the heel of the stranger had left its imprint in the soft wood. The breaking of the blind started Mr. Dealaman's burglar alarm which is connected with his sleeping apartments upstairs. Mr. Dealaman, shot gun in hand, looked out of the window in time to see his visitor crawl out of the window.

The distance was so short that he did not want to fire for fear of killing the man, but waited until he had nearly reached the gate. Then Mr. Dealaman blazed away, there was a yell and the stranger ran away.

When Chief Grant heard of the burglary he instantly suspected Williams and went up to investigate, accompanied by Sergeant Kiely. The marks left by the heel on the window blind especially attracted attention. The nails in the heel were arranged in a peculiar manner that was shown plainly on the wood. An exact copy of the heel mark was made and Chief Grant took it to Elizabeth where it was found to be exactly the same as the heel to Williams' shoe. The snoe was finally taken to Dunellen and there fitted the print exactly.

An examination was then made of the prisoner and two shot wounds were discovered on his arm and one on his side.

Yesterday Detective Keron and Captain Grant went to Dunellen, where they accompanied Mr. Dealaman to Justice Storms' office and Mr. Dealman swore out a warrant for the arrest of Williams. Williams has now twelve days more to serve, but will be arrested the moment he is released at Elizabeth.

Better Lighting.

The North Plainfield Township committee at a meeting held Wednesday evening, ordered that a contract be entered into with the Plainfield Electric Light Company, for eleven electric street lights, to be placed on Somerset street, between Johnston Drive and Demler's store. This is a much needed improvement and one that the public will duly appreciate. That section of Somerset street should have been lighted long ago.

Fell Off the Train.

While Leon Washburn's circus train was on it way to Long Branch last night an employe fell off the train north of the Port Reading crossing and Long Branch railroad. He was slightly hurt about the head. He walked to Perth Amboy and was sent to Long Branch on a freight train this morning.

Dr. Kinch Married.

The marriage of Miss Anna Belle MacIntosh to Dr. Frederick Kinch, both of Westfield, has just been announced. The groom is well known in this city, and his many friends extend congratulations.

—Justice Nodyne rendered judgment this morning in the case of French against Scribner, on contract, and an execution was issued. Wm. G. DeMeza represented the plantiff.

A DAY BY THE WAVES.

No Mishap to Mar the Annual Excursion of Trinity Sunday-school.

By the choppy sea waves at Asbury Park the members of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school spent a merry time yesterday. From the time the train left this city in the morning until its return in the evening there was no mishap to mar the pleasure of any of the party. Though there was fourteen cars on the train, there were really only ten filled, as the threatening weather early in the morning deferred many timid ones from going on the excursion.

The varied attractions at the Park provided entertainment enough for all the different dispositions of the excursionists. Of course the juvenile members participated in all the hurly-burly methods of amusement such as merry-go-rounds and the like, others of a more sedate manner occupied sightseeing positions on the piazzas of the hotels, some took dips in the rolling surf and many boarded the trolley cars and enjoyed a breezy trip to Pleasure Bay.

The committee in charge of the excursion was as follows: E. H. Bird, E. J. Cooley, H. C. VanEmburgh, W. F. Oliver, F. E. Smith, H. W. Marshall and E. E. Anthony.

YOUNG M'KINLEY SUPPORTER.

Plainfield Has the Distinguished Honor of Having the Most Youthful.

Plainfield has the distinguished honor of containing within its borders, Major McKinley's youngest supporter for the presidency of the United States. This youthful citizen is the little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Murray, of West Ninth street, who is not quite two years old at present. When the child first began to learn to talk, his grandfather taught him to say "McKinley," when asked who he was going to vote for.

Mr. Murray wrote to the Republican canditate telling him of the staunch supporter he had and received a letter from the father of the famous tariff bill thanking his youthful follower and wishing him success. The letter is now preserved among the most cherished possessions of the child.

WON'T PAY FOR WATER.

Contractor Honan Sued by the Plainfield Water Supply Company.

Honan, the sewer contractor, and the Plainfield Water Supply Company have had a little scrap. The trouble was over the water used in flushing the sewers and sewer trenches which the company wanted pay for but which remuneration Honan refused to give. An attachment was issued on the money now in the hands of City Treasurer Titsworth, and due Honan for laying the sewer.

The matter came up in Justice Nash's court yesterday afternoon but Honan did not appear or make any attempt to defend himself. Justice Nash gave judgment to the corporation for $119.07 and costs. The $119.07 is the estimated cost of the water used. Unless the case is appealed, the Plainfield Water Supply company will get the money.

Freeholders Too Slow.

The citizens of Finderne and vicinity are very indignant over the delay in the completion of the river bridge. Since last February they have been inconvenienced and nothing has been done towards the new bridge except the building of the wingwall on the north side. The business of the new creamery has been badly crippled owing to the inability of the farmers over the river to get communication with it. The freight business at the Central Railroad station has fallen off materially. It is reported that legal action is about to be taken by citizens agains the Somerset Board of Freeholders in order to compell them to hurry the work along.—Unionist-Gazette.

Musical and Literary.

The Young Peoples Union of the Mount Olive Baptist church, gave a entertainment in the church last eveing, for the benefit of the society. There was a fair attendance and the programme consisting of dialogues, humorous sketches, vocal and instrumental solos were well received. Those who took part in the affair were F. I. Whiting, R. L. Whiting, E. W. Hawthorn, James Miller, Harry Kingslow, Wm. Burton, Ephraim Wilson, Miss Etta Kingslow and Miss Sadie Doyle. Fred White presided at the piano. After the entertainment refreshments were served in the Sunday-school room by the young women of the society.

Endeavor Leaders.

The following chairman of committees will serve the Chistian Endeavor Society, Disciples of Christ, till January 1st, 1897: Lookout, J. H. Staats; prayer meeting, Mrs. Jennie Staats; social, Mrs. H. Van Middlesworth; flower, Mrs. L. Wilson; music, H. Van Middlesworth.

SAMUEL P. MULFORD DEAD.

A Former Well-Known Plainfield Boy Passes Away at Manhattan Beach.

The death of Samuel Potter Mulford, aged thirty-five years, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Mulford, of East Fifth street, occurred yesterday afternoon at Manhattan Beach, where he and his wife and boy Harold were stopping. He and his family went to the Beach on June 24th and the next day Mr. Mulford was taken ill with typhoid fever. The fever broke, but other complications set in and the best medical aid could not restore his health.

Mr. Mulford was next to the oldest of the children and was born and brought up in this city. He attended the public school and was a sort of a leader among the boys. He had a jovial, even disposition and was a favorite among his acquaintances.

In early life he learned to play the banjo, and those who remember Van-Deventer's Hall, and later occupied by the Y. M. C. A., will call to mind his appearances there in several the various minstrel troupes that were in existence at that time composed of home talant. As he grew older he formed a great attachment for horse racing, and for the past fifteen years, during which time he has been away from Plainfield, he has been interested in that sport. He was married nine years ago to a Miss Rowell, of New York, and his son, Harold, is now about six years of age. Mr. Mulford was particularly fond of his family and home. Although his business kept him away during the day he could always be found at home every evening. He traveled quite extensively with his family, and spent last winter in California, returning last April. For two seasons in recent years he spent his summers at Hotel Netherwood.

The funeral services will be held from the home of his parents at 403 East Fifth street tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

EUCHRE AT THE REVERE HOUSE.

Guests of the Popular House Enjoy a Pleasant Evening.

A charming euchre party was given by the guests of the Revere House last evening. The large parlors were filled with beautifully gowned ladies and their escorts.

Among those participating in the game were Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Plass, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Halsey, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Taft, Mr. and Mrs. Boese, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Harbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. George B. DeRevere, Mrs. Henry Brevoort, Mrs. Tweddle, Mrs. Fowler, Mrs. Roome, Mrs. Emily Pound, Miss Maud Fowler, Miss Belle Halsey, J. Hamilton Jaffray, Jr., Herbert Plass, Harry Halsey and others.

The prizes were beautiful and costly, Mrs. H. C. Plass winning first lady's prize, Mrs. Boese, second prize; H. C. Plass, first gentleman's prize, and D. F. Harbaugh, second prize. The consolation prize was awarded to Mrs. Henry Brevoort. After the game refreshments were served, and dancing followed.

DEATH OF A NOTED DOG.

A Siberian Wolfhound Bred by the Late Czar of Russia.

The Siberian Wolfhound, "Iran Romanhoff," the property of Percy C. Ohl, of this city, was found dead in his kennel this morning. He was the first of this rare and beautiful breed of dogs to come to this country, and was bred by the late Czar of Russia, who personally named him after the Commodore of the Russian Navy, and presented him to Lieutenant King, of the United States Navy. This dog has won a number of prizes, and was familiary known as the $10,000 beauty. His sudden demise was a great surprise, as he was in excellent health and condition. Mr. Ohl had just arranged for the dog's sale at a large price, and was to have been delivered Monday.

THEY WILL TRY PERSUASION.

Westfield Sunday Observance League Decides on Milder Measures.

The Sunday Observance League which tried to close all places of business in Westfield on Sunday and issued a circular threatening dire things to all who do not observe the blue laws, has decided to change its plans. Its threats did not succeed. A conference was called to discuss the plans with the Christian Endeavorers and at a meeting last night it was decided to try persuasion and to ask each offender individually to observe the letter of the law.

A MIDSUMMER FESTIVAL

THE BICYCLE, TROLLEY AND BAND TO BE THE ATTRACTIONS.

Councilman Frost at the Head of a Movement Which Will be Unique in History of the Country's Amusement.

Plainfield is going to have something new, new not only to Plainfield but to the rest of this country as well. It is to be a "Midsummer Night's Festival" and is to be held on the evening of Tuesday, July 28th. There is no stream of water in Plainfield large enough on which to hold a carnival as is done at Cranford, Rahway and New Brunswick, so Plainfield's summer is to include her three attractions, open-air concerts, bicycle riding and trolley riding.

The plan for the "Festival" originated with Councilman George H. Frost and is arranged to take the place of one of the open-air concerts that are being given this summer under his supervision.

The plan is to place the Plainfield Cornet Band, of which N. H. Guttman is leader, on one of the open cars on the street railway and stop at various points along the route and give several selections, thus, instead of the people coming to the open air concerts, the concerts will come to them. The car will cover all four branches of the railway and give all an equal share of the music.

In connection with the moving band stand, it is Councilman Frost's idea that there shall be a grand bicycle parade. The band car will start from the corner of Watchung and North avenues at 8 o'clock, and at the same time the long column of cyclists will start. There are at least four thousand cyclists in Plainfield and North Plainfield, and as many more in the surrounding towns and villages. It is hoped that most of these will turn out. The riders will accompany the car until it stops, when they will also halt and take a brief rest while they listen to the music. It is expected to have the band car move part of the distance at a slow rate, while the band is playing.

The residents along the line of the trolley will decorate with Chinese lanterns, and otherwise illuminate. All the bicycle clubs in the vicinity are invited to turn out in a body, and every bicycle rider is especially requested to decorate his or her wheel for the parade. Social, political and other clubs are asked to turn out and carry transparencies with suitable lettering. It's hoped that both political parties will be well represented. Those who aided in the success of the Crescent Wheelmen's parade two years ago by decorating their wheels so handsomely, will do the same on this occasion.

All clubs and parties who intend to start in the parade are requested to their names and number of riders to The Daily Press as soon as possible.

Besides being an enjoyable affair to Plainfielders, it will be of considerable benefit to local business men, as a large crowd of outsiders is sure to be attracted to this city. So everyone should turn out and aid in making Plainfield's first "Midsummer Night's Festival" a grand and glorious success, and something long to be remembered and talked about.

A Place for Men of Small Means.

Apropos of the inquiry in last night's Press, regarding the difficulty experienced by many persons who desire to save money but who do not have the $5 required by the savings banks to start a deposit, we are informed that the Hope Chapel Branch of the Provident Fund of New York provides a means for helping just such persons. Any amount is received for safe keeping, and when sufficient has accumulated it may be withdrawn and deposited where it will draw interest, none being paid by the Fund.

Boom in Brick Buildings.

Richard A. Boyce, of North Plainfield, has nearly completed his contract to furnish 14 000 brick for Geo. R. Leland's house on Verdon avenue; also his 30,000 contract for Mr. Perrin's new house on Myrtle avenue, and 15,000 for Seaman Williams for a new house on Sixth street, near Clinton avenue. He has recently been awarded the contract for 17,000 brick to be used in the construction of a house and barn for R. Stelle, on Stelle avenue.

Improvements at Netherwood.

That great improvement in the Netherwood district, the flagging of the sidewalk on South avenue, between Richmond street and Belvidere avenue, is about to be completed. All that now remains is 179 feet between Woodland and Belvidere avenues in front of the Kinyon property, and that is to be flagged at once.

"Wake up, Jacob, day is breaking!" so said De Witt's Little Early Risers to the man who had taken them to arouse his sluggish liver. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THOUGHT TO BE RAILROAD THIEVES.

Three Suspects Arrested on a Coal Train Early This Morning.

Three colored men were taken off an east bound freight train on the Jersey Central Railroad this morning at 3:30 o'clock by Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson. A telegram was received by the police from the railroad authorities asking them to arrest three men who were trespassing on the train. The officers responded and arrested the men as requested. They made no resistance and were locked up at once. The train crew told the officers that these men had attempted to rob the cars, successfully or unsuccessfully they could not say, but, at any rate, they had broken the seals on several of the cars.

The three colored men came up for trial later this morning. They were quite young, all apparently less than 20, but none of them knew how old. The largest and oldest looking thought he was "'bout 14 years old sah." They left their home in South Carolina last Saturday night intending to work their way to New York to find employment and last night climbed into a lumber car to sleep. The conductor of the train was present and testified that they did not break the seals on any of the cars, as was supposed. When brought up for trial the trio stood side by side, with knees shaking with fear, abject pictures of misery, in their ragged, toil-stained clothing.

They gradually recovered from their fear and told the judge something about themselves. In reply to a question as to whether he had ever been arrested before, he replied "Yes sah! I reckin it was for cuttin' up de de street one night," and then he grinned. One of the others was once locked up for fighting, so he said, while the third had never been initiated.

The judge gave them their choice between a fine of $2 and ten days, but as it was impossible to find two cents on the trio, with even a microscope, they went down to Elizabeth jail for the ten days. Altogether their journey north was not a pleasant one.

A LASSIE IN FRANCE.

Staff Captain Marshall Tells of Her Work in Paris.

The cool evening and an attractive speaker combined to draw a large crowd to the Salvation Army barracks on West Second street last evening. The speaker of the evening was Staff Captain Edith Marshall, who is in charge of the auxiliary department in the United States with her headquarters in New York city. She was an entertaining speaker and held the attention of her hearers through her short address. She acted as leader of the meeting from the start and, after conducting the regular devotional services, assisted by Adjutant Taylor and the Central Victory Boys, told something of her own as a cadet in Paris, and later as a commissioned officer in Switzerland.

Her experiences in Paris were particularly thrilling. She told of the numerous persecutions there and how a party from the Army, among whom was herself, were pursued by a howling mob and only saved at the last moment by the providence of God. She spoke of the work in Switzerland and her account of the methods there was very interesting.

When she had finished the Victory Boys took up the collection and then, while several of their number rendered different selections, ice cream and cake were present.

MIDSUMMER DANCE.

A Cool Evening Makes the Catholic Club Affair a Success.

One of the best social events of the season was the dance held last evening in the Catholic Club Hall under the auspices of the Board of Governors. It has been a long time since a dance has been enjoyed in that place, but the one of last evening was perfect in every particular. The weather was cool and pleasant and the attendance was very large. Prof. O'Rielly's orchestra furnished excellent music for the merry dancers. An unexpected feature was the singing by a colored quartette composed of David Martin, Oscar Nelson, Walter Carter and Waton Randolph. During the evening Walter Carter gave ad exhibition of the buck dance. The singers were beartily applauded by the audience.

The committee of arrangements was composed of the following: Michael Mack, chairman; Patrick Casey, treasurer; Cornelius Guinee, secretary; William Classen was on the door, and Thomas Carty looked after the refreshments. Those assisting were Dennis Galbraith, Hugh McDonnell, J. J. Kenney, James Carty and Charles Ward.

Borough Mayor Hegeman returned last night from Buffalo and left this morning for Philadelphia.

BAY STATE MOURNS

News of ex-Gov. Russell's Death Was a Terrible Shock.

GRIEF GENERAL ON EVERY SIDE

Flags in Boston at Half Mast and Other Symbols of Mourning Displayed—His End Peaceful and Probably Came While He Slumbered.

Boston, July 17.—From all parts of Massachusetts come tidings of the deep grief that prevails over the sudden death of ex-Gov. W. E. Russell. The news came as a terrible shock. Flags are displayed at half-mast today on the state and city buildings, and many other tokens of mourning are displayed from private dwellings and business houses. At the state house the news of the death of the "Boy" Governor came as a thunderbolt, and the report was at first disbelieved. The acting governor was not at his office. Col. Thomas, the acting governor's secretary, said: "What! Gov. Russell dead?" When assured of the fact the colonel could scarcely speak for a few moments. "Then all I can say," he said, "is that Massachusetts is indeed unfortunate. To the commonwealth the death of Gov. Greenhalge was a great enough blow. This news will prostrate her. I can scarcely believe it. A brilliant man, who has proved himself most loyal to the truest interests of his country—and that in very recent days—has been taken from us without warning. His character is too well known to need eulogy. I speak as a republican when I say that Massachusetts has lost a worthy son. In the presence of death party lines disappear. Russell was dear to his state. He will truly be missed." It was the same everywhere. To see tears when the news of the brilliant young statesman was announced became a common sight. Everyone was staggered by the announcement; everybody hoped that it might be merely a false rumor. When the news was confirmed beyond peradventure the officers and employes at the state house were grieved beyond expression. Upon receiving notice of the death of ex-Gov. Russell, Mayor Quincy ordered all flags on public buildings placed at half-mast.

DEATH CAME PEACEFULLY.

Ex-Gov. Russell Probably Passed Away While Asleep.

St. Adelaide de Pabos, Que., July 17.—Little Pabos, where ex-Gov. W. E. Russell of Massachusetts died in a tent during Wednesday night, lies near the entrance to the bay of Chaleur, a large inlet of the gulf of St. Lawrence. It had always been a favorite resort for salmon fishermen. It is reached by a small steamer from Quebec. Just what hour the ex-governor passed away is not known, but it is the belief of the physician who examined the remains that death came several hours before the body was discovered. That death was peaceful was evidenced by the position of the remains when found. The eyes were closed and the bed on which Governor Russell's body reposed was not unusually disarranged, which leads to the belief that death came from heart failure while he slumbered. Gov. Russell, his brother, Henry E. Russell, and Col. Francis Peabody of Boston arrived at Little Pabos Wednesday for a few days' fishing. They pitched their camp in the woods near the settlement of Little Pabos. Their tent was divided into two rooms, one of which was occupied by the governor and the other by Henry Russell and Col. Peabody. The party retired early, as they intended to start about daylight for the fishing place. Col. Peabody and Henry Russell were astir early and were surprised that the governor had not put in an appearance when they were ready to start.

The Remains Started for Home.

The remains were brought down from the camp last night, reaching here at 11 o'clock. The Canadian steamer Admiral arrived here about 6 o'clock this morning. The body was placed on board the Admiral on her arrival and transported to Dalhousie, where it will be put on a train for Boston, which, it is expected, will be reached Sunday morning. The coroner's jury pronounced heart disease the cause of death.

WILLIAM EUSTIS RUSSELL.

Sketch of the Life of the Late Young Governor of Massachusetts.

The Hon. William Eustis Russell was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1857. He was educated in the public schools and in Harvard college, where he was graduated in 1877. He then began the study of law under his father, Charles E. Russell's direction, and took a course of three years in the Boston University law school. While a student there he won the prize offered by the late William Beach Lawrence for an essay on "Foreign Judgments, Their Extra-territoral Force and Effects." He was class orator at the graduation exercises. He received the first "summa cum laude" degree as bachelor of law ever given by the university. He was admitted to the Suffolk bar in the April term of 1880. Mr. Russell was only 28 years of age when, in 1885, he was elected mayor of his native city, having already served as councilman and alderman. In 1888 he was nominated for governor, but was defeated by Ames. He polled nearly 1,000 votes more than were cast for Mr. Cleveland for president. It was in this year that Mr. Russell gave evidence of his gifts as a stump speaker. He worked and talked incessantly, going about from one place to another.

Twice Re-elected Governor.

He was renominated for governor again in 1889. This time his competitor was Gov. Brackett. Mr. Russell, at the end of a vigorous campaign, reduced the plurality of his opponent from 29,000 to 6,775. Next year, on his next trial, he was elected by a plurality of 9,000. In his inaugural message he suggested many reforms in state management. Russell was re-elected governor of his state twice. He retired at the end of his third term to resume the practice of law. Ex-Gov. Russell's name was mentioned this year by his admirers in New England as one which would look well at the head of the democratic national ticket. At the Jefferson celebration in Monticello early in the year the ex governor made a strong declaration in favor of the gold standard. He was associated with Senator Hill and ex-Secretary Whitney in the contest over the platform at the recent Chicago convention, and kept his state in line with New York against the silver men. Mr. Russell, while mayor of Cambridge, married Miss Margaret Swan. He leaves three children, two of them boys, the oldest being 8 years of age. Mr. Russell died only moderately well off.

His Youthful Appearance.

His youthful looks, and to a certain extent youthful manner, which he retained to the last, were of great advantage to him in his public life. What his critics called his "professional boyishness," and his "lack of years as a stock in trade" gained for him the support of the younger and more energetic element. But there was nothing juvenile about Russell as an administrator. He gave ample evidence of his tact by remaining on friendly terms with those who were around him when he first came into office as governor. He was surrounded on all sides by republicans during the three years he held office. With a single exception every republican on the state ticket, saving only the head, was elected, so that while the governor was a democrat every other state officer from the secretary of state down was a republican. The sole exception during those three years was the election of a democratic auditor. In business and political matters Mr. Russell had the reputation of being cold, calculating and self-contained, but his personal manner was genial and friendly. One of his most remarkable gifts was a phenomenal memory. It has been said of him that he could compose a speech, dictate it, and, without referring again to the paper, deliver it at a meeting with hardly any noticeable variations. Russell's public messages and other documents of a similar nature were in their way models of lucidity and terseness.

Other Causes of Popularity.

One of the reasons for Russell's popularity lay in the fact that not only did he look like a young man, but as a young man he took a keen interest in all sorts of sports. He was a good horseman, a good shot, hunted, fished, danced well, played tennis, and at one time was a valuable member of a football team. The following is a specimen of his way of doing things: On one occasion, when the state troops went into camp, the governor, who was commander-in-chief of the land forces and admiral of the state of Massachusetts, went with them as plain "Mr. William Russell." He lived in a tent, messed on the supplies furnished by the state, and would allow no special consideration for himself. It was only upon the day set for the formal inspection that he donned silk hat and frock coat and took his place at the head of his staff in his official capacity. When the ceremony was over he put his dignity away with his clothes. The result was that Russell became immensely popular with the militia of his state, and the citizen soldiers were always ready to give their votes to him.

MR. CLEVELAND'S GRIEF.

Spoke Very Feelingly of the Death of Ex-Gov. Russell.

Buzzard's Bay, Mass., July 17.—While the president was fishing a telegram was received from a personal friend in Boston announcing the death of ex-Gov. Russell. The president was very much shocked and spoke very feelingly of the sudden death. In conversation with a representative of the United Press after his return the president made the following tribute: "My personal relations were so intimate and close with ex-Gov. Russell that I could not but be terribly shocked at the news of his sudden death. While this intelligence has caused me to mourn a personal loss, I cannot forget Mr. Russell's eminent public service and his attributes of bravery and patriotism, which made him so valuable a citizen, especially at this time, when courageous adherence to right and unfaltering advocacy of sound principles are so much needed. It may therefore be said that the country has suffered a bereavement. The people of Massachusetts cannot fail to mourn throughout the length and breadth of the commonwealth the untimely death of a son whose career at all times reflected honor upon his nation and state." The president sent a letter of condolence earlier in the day to Mrs. Russell at Magnolia.

Bicycle Firm Goes Under.

Washington, July 17.—Joseph A. Thorn, trading as the Thorn Manufacturing company, bicycle manufacturer of this city, has made an assignment. The liabilities are estimated at $14,500 and assets $1,200. Most of the leading creditors are out of town bicycle supply companies.

Gets a $2,000 State Position.

Albany, July 17.—Clarence R. Neherer has been appointed by State Engineer Adams as resident engineer of the Erie canal at Rochester to fill a vacancy. The salary is $2,000. Mr Neherer was formerly division engineer of the New York & Pennsylvania railroad.

Her Dig.

I've heard about the mean things women can pleasantly say to each other, but could scarcely keep my countenance when listening to two of my sex parrying verbal hatefulness the other day.

"There comes Ida Comstock," said my companion.

"Friend of yours?" I inquired.

"Oh, we pretend to be!" was the reply, "but she's a cat and she'll give me a dig before we part."

"Well, you are prepared for her, at any rate," thought I, but said nothing. Up floated Miss Comstock.

"Sweet day; so glad to see you," and all the rest of it. While prolonging her good-by she remarked, smilingly:

"What an awful swell you are! that's such a pretty dress! that color used to be so fashionable."—N. Y. Recorder.

Cause and Effect.

"How old are you, sonny?"

"Twelve years old."

"You are very small for your age. What's your name?"

"My name is Johnny Smith. My father is a baker on Third avenue."

"So your father is a baker. I might have guessed it by your size. You remind me of his loaves."—Tammany Times.

[illegible] Astor,
[illegible] her nose,"
[illegible], who was reading a daily paper.

"What an absurd remark for a sensible man to make," said Mrs. Murray Hill, tossing her head.

"Nothing absurd about it. This society reporter writes: 'The fair young debutante has an exquisitely molded face, of which two dark hazel eyes are the central feature.' Now I want to know where her nose is situated?"—Texas Siftings.

A Queer Proceeding.

Mrs. Nextdoor—One of my windows is stuck, and I can't get it up or down.

Little Boy—Ours gets the same way sometimes.

"Who fixes them?"

"Papa."

"How does he do it?"

"I don't know. Quick as papa starts in to fix a stuck window mamma sends me out of the room."—Good News.

The Exception.

Though in this rapid transit age
To shorten all things is the rage,
Though novel, sermon, poem and play
Grow brief'er with each hurrying day,
One bulwark still defies endeavor—
A kiss is just as long as ever.

—Life.

Of Course She Would.

"I offer thee," exclaimed the prince in the story, "my crown. Wilt share it with me?"

The beauteous maiden smiled.

"Sure thing!" she answered. "Why shouldn't I? They are wearing men's styles in everything."—Town Topics.

That

Tired Feeling is exceedingly common and dangerously significant. It is a warning which must be heeded, or, as with the express which fails to regard the danger signal, disaster must follow. It is a sure indication of thin, weak, impure blood. It is certain admonition that the blood is not properly feeding the nerves, tissues and organs of the body. Weak, nervous, men and women are found everywhere. Men strive too hard to "keep their business up," women work too much "on their nerves," all have too little sleep, there is excessive drain on strength and nervous energy, and all complain of that tired

Tired

Feeling

By purifying and vitalizing the blood, Hood's Sarsaparilla furnishes abundant supply of nourishment for every nerve, organ and tissue of the body. This fresh supply of nerve strength overcomes nervousness; the new vigor in the blood soon banishes that tired feeling; the tone given the stomach creates an appetite, cures indigestion and dyspepsia. Losing Flesh

You naturally lose flesh in the summer and running down is so easy. You get a little weaker each day without hardly noticing it. There is loss of appetite, headache, weakness of the muscles, disturbed sleep, weakness of memory, and these are the beginning of nervous prostration. Iron and tonics and bitters may afford some temporary relief, but what you need is a food for body, brain and nerves.

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites, furnishes just the nourishment needed for those who are run down and pale and thin and weak. If you lose flesh in summer take Scott's Emulsion now. Don't wait till fall or winter before beginning.

CLEVELAND'S RIOTS

More Troops Called to the Brown Hoisting Works.

ANOTHER CLASH WITH THE BIG MOB

Police Forced To Drive the Wagons Conveying the Non-Union Workmen—Many of the Crowd Pricked with the Soldiers' Bayonets.

Cleveland, O., July 17.—The strike situation at the Brown Hoisting works assumed so dangerous a phase last night that three more companies of troops were hurried to the scene just before quitting time and are still encamped in the works. Early in the afternoon crowds began to assemble and stood about sullenly, defiant of police orders to move on. There was so much evidence of a pre-arranged plan, every street leading to the works having its own division of the mob, that the authorities in hot haste sent for more troops. When the sixty three men who had been at work were placed in vans to be driven home from the works it was found necessary to charge the mob twice before a passage could be made for the wagons. The drivers had refused to leave the stables with the vehicles and policemen did the driving. During the melee jeers and threats were hurled at the workers, police and military and some stones were thrown. The severest fighting was on Hamilton street, and in the charges about forty strikers were pricked by the bayonets. After a passage had been forced the militia had all it could do to keep the mob back.

FOR GALLANTRY IN ACTION.

Congressional Medal Awarded to Robert M. Boody of Haverhill, Mass.

Washington, July 17.—Robert M. Boody, now of Haverhill, Mass., formerly first lieutenant of company B, Fortieth New York volunteers, has been awarded a congressional medal of honor for most distinguished gallantry in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862. This officer, then a corporal, at great personal risk, voluntarily saved the lives of, and brought from the battlefield, two wounded comrades. In action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863, this officer, then a sergeant, voluntarily, and at great personal risk, brought from the field of batte, and saved the life of, Capt. G. W. Corse, company C, New York volunteers.

New York Democratic State Convention.

Normandie-by-the-Sea, N. J., July 17.—A representative of the United Press saw chairman James W. Hinkley of the New York democratic state committee last night and questioned him regarding the selection of a date for the democratic state convention. Mr. Hinkley said: "I will issue a call within the next two weeks for a meeting of the state committee at which the time and place of our state convention will be determined. Members of the committee with whom I have talked favor Saratoga as the place, and about September 9 as the time."

Whitney Against the Ticket.

New York, July 17.—The following telegram, which is self-explanatory, was received by the United Press last evening: "Will you be kind enough to correct the statement that I desire the endorsement by the state organization of the Chicago ticket. There are no possible conditions or circumstances that would induce me to vote for it or assist it. W. C. WHITNEY."

Wm. H. House Found Guilty.

Pittsburg, July 17.—The jury in the cases of William H. House, ex-assistant city attorney, yesterday afternoon rendered a verdict of guilty. Mr. House was charged with aiding and abetting in the embezzlement of city funds. Ex-City Attorney Moreland escaped trial on the same charge by entering a plea of guilty when the case was called for trial last Monday.

Ended His Own Life.

McKeesport, Pa., July 17.—Frederick Steckel, a prominent business man and one of McKeesport's best known German residents, was found dead in his room last evening. A bullet hole in his head and a revolver at his side indicated that death had come by his own hand.

Storrs Agricultural College.

Hartford, July 17.—The trustees of Storrs Agricultural college met at the capitol yesterday and arranged for completing the new wards and girl's dormitory at the college. They also passed resolutions on the death of ex-Lieut.-Gov. Hyde of Stafford, a trustee of the college.

New Fire Insurance Company.

Albany, July 17.—State Superintendent of Insurance Pierce has authorized the Colonial Assurance company of New York city to commence the transaction of fire insurance in this state. The capital of the company is $200,000, with a paid-in surplus of $100,000.

The Pope Slightly Ill.

Rome, July 17.—The pope is suffering from a slight cold, which has affected his voice, which is at no time very strong. For this reason he was obliged to postpone the reception he intended to give yesterday to the new French ambassador to the vatican.

Mare Island Navy Yard.

Washington, July 17.—The navy department will to-day call for proposals for the construction of the extension of the quay wall at the navy yard at Mare Island, Cal., for which congress appropriated $30,000, bids to be opened August 15.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Fair Saturday and Sunday; Warmer Sunday.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 81 Degrees.

During the past year the exports have been $100,000,000 more than the imports.

The inevitable has happened. Mrs. Fleming has announced her determination of taking to the stage.

The Daily Press holds a sum of money for the Fresh Air Camp which the treasurer of the King's Daughters can procure by calling at the business office.

The commission created by Governor Griggs to inquire into the question of the equal taxation of railroad and canal property began work in Jersey City yesterday.

The Summit Herald, which was purchased recently by Edward W. Gray from the estate of Dr. David M. Smythe, has been sold to John Clift. Mr. Clift was editor and part owner of the Madison Eagle.

"Enterprise" is the term applied to The Daily Press by the Bound Brook Democrat referring to the feat of this paper in printing papers with a half column account of Bryan's nomination fifteen minutes after the nomination.

Benjamin F. Howells, Congressman from the Third district, has appointed Charles L. McKeag, of New Brunswick, a son of Hugh McKeag, a prominent Republican, to the vacancy in that district in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

The Weekly Public Opinion, of New York, prints this week a symposium of carefully selected press comment from 123 leading newspapers in all parts of the country on the Democratic Convention and the issues of the campaign. Of these 58 are Democratic, 28 Republican, and 37 are Independent journals, or special organs, farmers, single taxers, etc. Of the 58 Democratic papers, 32 repudiate the platform, 24 of these also emphatically rejecting the candidates. Eleven, either by implication or in plain words, advise Democrats to remain within the party line and vote for the ticket with a reservation, if necessary, regarding the financial plank; 2 declare for McKinley; 3 demand an independent ticket; 15 declare for the platform and candidate with free silver. Of the 28 Republican papers, 4 declare for silver, while 1 say the Democratic party is dead or hopelessly disrupted. Of the 37 Independent and special journals, 15 reject the platform and candidates; 9 declare for McKinley; 10 declare for Bryan, and 3 demand an Independent Democrat ticket.

CROP BULLETIN.

Conditions Favored Growing Crops—Oats in Fine Condition.

The weekly crop bulletin, from the State Weather Bureau, at New Brunswick, says:

The observers and crop correspondents report for the week ending Monday, July 13, 1896, that the temperature and rainfall have been above average and the sunshine largely deficient. These conditions have greatly favored growing crops, but were unfavorable for the harvesting of wheat, rye and grass, until Saturday, since which time the conditions have been much better. Oats, the State over, are in fine condition and ripening rapidly. The following heavy rainfalls were reported: Belvidere, 7:57 inches; Papakating, 5:17 inches; Newark, 5:33 inches (3:46 inches on the 6th) and Livingston, 3:10 inches.

Miss Mirian F. Choate, of Greenwich, Conn., who has been visiting at the home of her uncle, John M. Whiton, of Central avenue, returned to her home this morning.

Mayor Brakeley is spoken of by the residents as a man of conscientious scruples, fearless in his municipal doings and a lover of law and good order. His many good acts since he has held the reins of government speak for themselves, so it is useless to here enlarge on them.

The borough of Dunellen is perhaps as well controlled, so far as its police force is concerned, as any borough of its size in the country. The present chief marshal, Albert W. Warden, was for eight years previous to his appointment a constable here, and on this account he was and is well versed on the doings of Dunellen's populace.

I'ts no wonder the VanEmburgh circus located at Dunellen. The concern had not a cent of license to pay, outside of $6 for peddling privileges. This license holds good for a year, so the same show can come back in the fall, as the manager says they will, without a cent's extra license fee. The circus paid no land rent, for this was given gratuitously by the railroad company.

Dunellen is sadly in need of a lockup, so the authorities there say. For instance if an unruly customer is found on the street at night the marshal first has to skirmish around and find a justice of the peace, and if the offence is so grevious as to have the prisoner committed, it costs about $2 for carriage hire to take the prisoner to New Brunswick. This money, of course, comes from the Board of Freeholders, but it is argued that a "short time" prisoner could be kept in a borough lockup much cheaper than transferring him to the county jail, where so much additional cost is attached. A lockup for the borough is a necessity.

NEW MARKET.

THEATRICAL.

Fineness of the weather and the crowds of people that go to Manhattan Beach every evening assist Edward Rice in making Evangeline a success. Rice has spent $15,000 on the production and searched the country to find beautiful girls for his chorus. He will probably double his money and discover that all his girls are married before the end of the summer. Apart from the fact that it gave prosperity to E. E. Rice, when he was a young fellow, "Evangeline" has been the cradle of fame for many players who now possess a world wide reputation. Among the actors who, at one time or another, learned the rudiments of their profession in this famous extravaganza, are twenty-three comedians who now head companies of their own or are star performers. Among them were Wm. H. Crane, Henry E. Dixey, Nat C. Goodwin, Sol. Smith Russell, Pete Dailey, Richard Golden, W. A. Mestayer, Willie Edouin, Sadie Martinot, Alice Harrison. Annie Boyd, Virginia Earle, Mollie Fuller, Louise Montague and Fay Templeton. "Evangeline" started these now celebrated actors to toddle along the path that has led them to triumph.

Miss Weber, of East Third street, who has been enjoying a vacation, returns to her position at White's dry-goods store Monday.

It would be hard to convince a man suffering from bilious colic that his agony is due to a microbe with an unpronouncable name. But one dose of DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure will convince him of its power to afford instant relief. It kills pain. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

HOW TO FEED BABY.

Prevalent Cholera Infantum Distresses Mothers.

Sickness Due More to Faulty Feeding than to Heat—May be Prevented by Putting Child on a Diet of Lactated Food.

"On the 31st of October, 1894," writes Mrs. Thomas J. Jones of Whitehall, N. Y., "I was blessed with triplets. I was unable to nurse them, so had to use artificial foods. I first tried cow's milk, and after that three brands of baby foods, but my babies did not seem to do well on them. A neighbor who had used lactated food advised me to give it a trial. I did so.

"I could see a change in my babies at once. They rested better at night. Before I used your lactated food, I did not know what a night's sleep was since the babies were born, but after using it two days, I was able to do all my work without any help or trouble.

"In six months, they gained seven, eight, and eight and a half pounds. I could not recommend your lactated food too highly, and hope that other mothers will be helped as I have been with your lactated food, which I know they will, if they use the food."

Mothers are often brought to the verge of despair during hot weather because baby refuses to take food or throws it up. One of the marked superiorities of lactated food over other infant foods is repeatedly spoken of in letters of mothers all over the country: Lactated food is taken eagerly, more often greedily, by babies who are deprived of their mother's milk, and in hosts of insances it is evidently preferred by them to breast milk when the latter has become thin and poor either from long nursing or hot weather.

Cholera infantum that is now raging is best prevented by lactated food. This dread disease is due more to faulty feeding than to heat.

Lactated food is used in all the large homes for children throughout the United States, and in families that possess every means for securing the best for their children; and yet it is easily within the reach of the most modest household in the land.

COULDN'T CORNER HIM.

An Incident of a Visit of the Late W. E. Russell to Plainfield.

The death of ex-Governor W. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, recalls to the mind of a Plainfield friend and admirer an amusing incident in the former's life, which happened in Plainfield during the summer of 1877. Mr. Russell and J. Herbert Johnston, son of John Taylor Johnston, were classmates at Harvard college and during the summer of 1877 Mr. Russell accepted an invitation extended by Mr. Johnston to visit him at his home on East Front street.

Mr. Russell was given a corner room and the first morning of his visit, the Misses Johnston thought they would play a joke on their young guest.

Accordingly, they locked his door and rang the bell for breakfast. Young Russell hastily arose and prepared for his morning meal. Finding the door locked, he concluded at once that it was a practical joke. But he made his exit from the room just the same. He went to the window and jumped to a veranda nearby and from there he dropped to the ground, a distance of 20 feet, without injury. He walked into the dining room and took his seat at the table without a smile and in a most matter of-fact way. Shortly afterward when he saw a smile playing around the mouths of his host's sisters, he remarked that they should not try to corner him as he was liable to get out. The joke caused considerable fun and laughter and the ex-Governor never forgot it.

William J. Roome and family, of Sycamore avenue, will leave in a few days for Point Breeze Camp, New Hampshire, to be absent during the month of August.

Why is It,

if catarrh is a constitutional affection, as those claim who have a blood tonic to sell, that physicians, in extreme cases, frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from it? Catarrh is a climate affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm, in all cases of catarrh, is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and a perfect cure after short continuance.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Perservance Lodge, No 74, K. of P., meets tonight.

—Fred Bettman, of Willow avenue, has recently become the owner of a new driving horse.

—An effort is being made to extend the trolley to Scotch Plains before cold weather arrives.

—Chief of Police Eldridge, of Atlantic City, has begun war on the nickel-in-the-slot machines.

—Senate Lodge, No. 3542, Knights of Honor, met last evening and transacted routine business.

—Cleverly devised glass counterfeits of silver dollars are fooling some people in South Camden.

—The Plainfield street railway company signed a contract yesterday for four new open cars; also for five new closed cars.

—Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 118, I.O. R. M., will hold an important meeting this evening. Every member is urged to be present.

—John H. Kitchen, of Somerset street, staked out a cellar for a new house on West Third street near Plainfield avenue.

—"Atlas," the Central Railroad directors private car, passed through Plainfield yesterday afternoon on the 2:07 train for New York.

—The new east wing to the Potter Press Works is now in running order. This will relieve the over-taxed main building to a noticeable extent.

—The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church will meet this afternoon as usual in the chapel of the church.

—Some persons have remarked that it would be an excellent plan if readable signs were placed on the trolley cars, giving people an idea of their destination.

—The traffic on the Central Railroad from Plainfield to the seashore is particularly heavy at present, but the employes of the road handle it in an expert manner.

—There will be a special sale tomorrow of bluefish, weakfish, codfish and porgies at the new fish market just opened on Somerset street by Coddington & Ackerman.

—At the meeting of the Saengerbunds last evening the new by-laws and constitution were adopted and plans were formed to celebrate the tenth anniversary next fall, which will be an auspicious occasion among the Germans.

—Go to Tier's and order cream for your Sunday dinner, as he has the largest assortment in the city. They are: Lemon, vanilla, strawberry, chocolate, bisque, banana, peach, French vanilla, orange ice, lemon ice, pineapple ice, raspberry ice.

—The dispensary box presented to the police department by the King's Daughters, of this city, is still on exhibition at J. Hervey Doane's jewelry store. It is supposed that in case any of the contents should be needed during the night it would be necessary to hunt up Mr. Doane or one of the clerks and have him open the store. The box should be kept in a more convenient place.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Horse Fell in the Well.

A peculiar accident happened to a sorrel horse owned by Wm. Emmons, of Willow and Giraud avenues, yesterday. The animal was ailing and had been turned out to graze near the barn. A barrel of water stood outside the building where the horse could quench its thirst. Seeing an open door the horse deliberately walked inside and broke through the flooring into a seventeen foot well partly filled with water. Mrs. Emmons heard the noise and she in turn notified her husband. The latter summoned seventeen of the neighbors and field hands nearby and by their united efforts the animal was lifted bodily from the well. Strange to say the horse escaped with only a few scratches.

BOND ISSUE RUMOR

Secretary Curtis' Visit to New York Starts the Report.

CALLS AT MORGAN'S BANKING HOUSE

Another $100,000,000 Government Issue Soon Expected in Wall Street—Syndicate Said To Be Ready To Take the Loan.

New York, July 17.—The critical illness of Cornelius Vanderbilt, the head of the Vanderbilt family, together with the rumor of another government bond issue has had great effect on the stock market, and at times conditions of demoralization were evident. The Vanderbilt stocks have suffered considerably during the past twenty-four hours, the bear party making vigorous attacks upon prices. The cause of the rumor of a new government bond issue was the presence in this city of assistant secretary of the treasury W. E. Curtis and a reported visit by him to the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. On the stock exchange the rumor took the form that J. P. Morgan & Co. and August Belmont & Co. had notified the government of their willingness to take $100,000,000 of the 4 per cent. loan of 1925. The fact that the gold balance of the treasury is several millions below the reserve line and that government bonds have been very weak lately, caused a great deal of credence to be attached to the rumor, as it was believed that in view of the disturbed financial conditions there would be no unnecessary delay on the part of the government. Fifty thousand dollars in gold was withdrawn from the subtreasury yesterday for shipment to Canada.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, July 17.—Gold withdrawals yesterday amounted to $449,000, leaving the reserve at the opening of business to-day at $95,166,292. Most of the gold withdrawn was for export.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEW LOAN.

Eight Million Dollars To Be Expended for Public Improvements.

Philadelphia, July 17.—Select council yesterday passed the ordinance creating a new city loan of $8,000,000. The measure passed common council a couple of weeks ago, and as the mayor is favorable the bill will become a law as soon as he signs it. The loan will be the largest ever floated by the city, and will increase the total municipal debt to about $38,000,000. The money will be expended for public improvements.

Mrs. Parnell Going to Ireland.

Bordentown, N. J., July 17.—Mrs. D. T. S. Parnell will sail for Ireland on the 25th inst. She will go on the American liner Waesland, which leaves Philadelphia. Mrs. Parnell has disposed of her famous Ironsides mansion and lands, comprising 215 acres to a syndicate, presumbly to provide a site for the State Industrial school for colored youths, as well as for other purposes. The purchase price was $32,000, including a mortgage of $7,000.

Crucified by the Khalifa's Orders.

London, July 15.—A dispatch received here to-day from Wady-Halfa reports that the messenger who carried the news to the Khalifa at Omdurman that his army had been defeated at Firket was immediately put to death by crucifixion. The khalifa announced that the same fate as that which befell the messenger would be imposed upon any one who mentioned Firket in his hearing.

Carl Browne a Populist Delegate.

Washington, July 17.—Gen. Jacob S. Coxey's late lieutenant, Carl Browne, who married Coxey's daughter Mamie, the representative of the "Goddess of Liberty" in the Coxey labor parade in Washington on the 4th of July last year, will head the populist delegation from the District of Columbia to the St. Louis populist convention.

Hill Not Yet Ready To Talk.

Normandie-by-the-Sea, N. J., July 17.—Senator Hill stated this morning to a representative of the United Press that he had no statement prepared for publication giving his views upon the work of the Chicago convention. When the proper time arrives, he said, he will be heard from. Senator Hill spent last evening quietly with Major Hinckley.

Exempt from Inheritance Tax.

New York, July 17.—A decision has been rendered by Surrogate Fitzgerald sustaining the report of David W. Clure, appraiser, holding the $5,000,000 bequest of Jay Gould to his son George Gould was exempt from the collateral inheritance tax, on the ground that it was a bequest to George Gould, in return for valuable services rendered to his father.

Attacked by a Discharged Stableman.

Cincinnati, July 17.—Ed Corrigan the race horse owner, was viciously attacked yesterday by John Phillips, a negro stableman. Phillips had been discharged by Corrigan. In a spirit of revenge he slashed his former employer several times with a knife and escaped. Corrigan's injuries are not serious.

American Bark Ashore.

Zanzibar, July 17.—The American bark John D. Brewer, Capt. Sjogren, from New York April 14 for this port, Aleppey and return, is ashore at Pangawan. Assistance has been sent to her.

General Wilson To Speak in Ohio.

Washington, July 17.—Postmaster General Wilson will deliver an address at Chillicothe, O., next Thursday, the occasion being that city's centennial.

FLORAL SYMBOLISM.

The bell flower is symbolic of gratitude.

The American cowslip indicates devotion.

The candytuft is an emblem of indifference.

The oat plant is in Italy regarded as emblematic of music.

The honey flower is in Mexico considered symbolic of secret love.

The blossom of a pear is in Australia considered indicative of affection.

The lotus in India is emblematic of life; in ancient Egypt it was a death flower.

The moss rosebud is in Peru considered as a symbol of the confession of love.

The common columbine is, among the English common people, symbolic of folly.

The peach blossom indicates submission, though why nobody has been able to guess.

The purple columbine, in both England and Scotland, is symbolic of determination.

The snowball is symbolic of winter, its name and appearance evidently suggesting the idea.

The horse chestnut is indicative of luxury. The idea was probably suggested by the size of the burrs.

The crabapple blossom, in the country districts of Prussia, is regarded as an emblem of inconstancy.

Pliny says that the almond blossom was regarded by the young people of his age as an emblem of hope.

The white daisy is emblematic of innocence, the color of the flower probably suggesting the symbolism.

LADY WRITERS OF THE DAY.

Mme. Stepniak is writing a biography of her late husband, to which there will be numerous contributions from the exile's friends. Prince Krapotkin will edit the Russian section of the book.

The most prolific writer in Russia is said to be Mme. Irma Fedossova, a peasant of the province of Petrossawodsk, who has given to the world more than 10,000 poems. How good they are is not related.

The English comic weekly, Judy, is to be edited by a woman, Miss Lilian Debenham, who is also the owner of the paper. Miss Debenham will have an opportunity to prove whether or no she possesses the humorous quality which is said to be lacking in women.

Alice S. Wolf, who is the author of "A House of Cards," makes in this way her first appearance in book form. Her short stories are, however, very well known in California, and especially in San Francisco, where she lives. Her new story is of life in that city.

Miss Lily Dougall, author of "Beggars All," has written a new novel, "The Madonna of a Day," and English critics pronounce it the best story she has yet told. The heroine is a selfish young journalist who, traveling along the Canadian Pacific railway, is lost in the wilds and wanders to a lawless mining camp. It is pronounced cynical but witty, original and showing talent of a high order.

GEOGRAPHICAL LORE.

Vienna is 4,115 miles from Washington.

Chicago is 900 miles west of New York.

Boston and New York are 217 miles apart.

Tucson, Ariz., is 1,608 miles from St. Louis.

Cairo is 5,848 miles southeast of Washington.

Gibraltar is 3,150 miles southeast of Washington.

It is 1,077 miles from New York to Jacksonville, Fla.

Jerusalem is 5,495 miles east of our national capital.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

Chocolate Icing.—Six ounces icing sugar, one ounce grated chocolate, two tablespoonfuls water. Put into a pan, stir well, and when melted use.

Coffee Icing.—Six ounces icing sugar, one tablespoonful strong coffee, one tablespoonful water. Mix the ingredients, warm them in a saucepan, and pour over the cakes.

Manheim Biscuits.—Two eggs, six ounces flour, three ounces sugar, six drops of aniseed. Mix the ingredients together, roll out thinly, cut the paste in fingers, and bake in a quick oven.

Orange Icing. — One-fourth pound icing sugar, one tablespoonful orange juice. Put into a small bright pan, melt the sugar, but do not let it boil; when as thick as cream, pour over the cakes.

Cream Cakes.—Six ounces flour, four ounces butter, a pinch of salt, cream. Put the flour on a board, mix in the salt and butter thoroughly, make into a stiff paste with cream, roll out, cut into rounds, bake in a quick oven, and serve hot.

AT THE JEWELERS'.

Fancy dishes in silver for bonbons come in a variety of shapes and sizes and show pierced borders.

The variety of decorations on Doulton and royal Worcester rose jars afforded a wide field for selection.

Ebony appears to be having its own way, whether it be paper knives, clocks, brush backs or other handsome addenda.

Pretty emeries for milady's workbasket are incased between two silver shells. Other styles represent acorns, strawberries, tomatoes, etc.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

McKINLEY'S CAMPAIGN.

Is Fairly Under Way by August—Lively Speaking Proposed.

Canton, O., July 17.—J. H. Manley, N. B. Scott, Powell Clayton, Cyrus Leland, C. G. Dawes and Henry C. Payne of the republican national executive committee and Gen. Osborne, the secretary of the committee, came to Canton last evening to call on Major McKinley. Mr. Hanna did not come owing to the recent sudden death of his brother-in-law. The members of the committee who are here dined with Major McKinley and then discussed with him the plans adopted by the committee in executive session at Cleveland. There will be frequent meetings of the committee during the campaign. The headquarters in New York will be occupied a good deal of the time by Messrs. Hobart, Manley and Quay. It is understood that Mr. Quay will devote a good deal of time to the situation in the south, a section of the country with which he is exceedingly familiar. Messrs. Payne, Leland, Dawes and Clayton will be much in evidence at the Chicago headquarters and will have charge of very important work there. It is proposed to have a lively speaking campaign, but the date for the formal opening has not been decided upon, nor has the place been chosen. The selection for the time and place of the first great rally will be determined somewhat by the developments of the next three or four weeks. The work of preparing and publishing the documents and most of the printed matter intended for distribution will be intrusted to the congressional committee in Washington. Headquarters, both in New York and Chicago will be opened within two weeks, and the campaign will be fairly under way by the 1st of August unless some unforeseen obstacle occasions delay.

POPULIST PLATFORM.

Ideas of Two Californians To Be Submitted to the St. Louis Convention.

San Francisco, July 17.—E. W. Wardell, chairman of the populist central state committee, and J. Taylor Rogers, Mayor Sutro's secretary, have prepared a platform which it is proposed to present to the national populist convention, to be held in St. Louis next week. The financial plank is as follows: "We demand a national money, issued directly by the general government only, as a full legal tender for all debts, and issued without the agency of any private corporation or bank, and in circulating volume subject to law and responsive to our needs, and speedily to be increased to $50 per capita of the entire people. Such money shall consist of gold, silver and paper, each dollar thereof endowed with the same function imparted solely from the stamp thereon and not dependent for its money value upon the price of the material used. Each dollar shall be interchangeable with, but not redeemable, in, the other, and shall be denominated respectively gold, silver and paper money, all national debts being payable in either, at the option of the government. As the United States is a free and powerful nation, and the financial and industrial liberty of its citizens should be independent of the action of any other government, we demand the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver by the United States at their present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without reference of any foreign nation. We demand that all national banks be abolished, and in lieu of them that the government establish a postal bank in each city, town and village of the United States containing a population of 1,000 or more." The platform also declares for the recognition of Cuba and against the refunding of the Pacific railroad debt.

BRYAN AND BLAND

Their Meeting an Interesting Incident in the Former's Journey.

EXCHANGED FLATTERING CORDALITIES

Circumstances, Not Merit, Said Mr. Bryan, Caused His Nomination Instead of the Selection of Mr. Bland—Speeches Made at Several Points.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 17.—The meeting yesterday of Mr. Bryan and Richard P. Bland was probably the most interesting incident so far in the democratic presidential nominee's journey homeward. Mr. Bland had boarded the train in the Union station at St. Louis, but he kept himself in a forward car until the train had started. Then he entered the parlor car in which the Bryan party had seats, and made his way to where Mr. Bryan was standing. Mr. Bland wore a long linen duster over a suit of black clothes. He stretched out his hand to the presidential candidate, and there was the warmest hand grasp between the victor and the defeated. "How are you, Mr. Bryan? I congratulate you," said Mr. Bland. "How are you, Mr. Bland? Thank you," said Mr. Bryan. "Your nomination took a big load off my mind," said Mr. Bland, warmly. Mrs. Bryan was presented to the veteran of free silver, and after some general conversation the two men withdrew and talked earnestly together for some time. Within an hour later there was some additional exchange of cordiality between Bland and Bryan. The train stopped at a little place called Washington where a knot of people had gathered to see the nominee. Standing on the platform of the parlor car with Mr. Bryan beside him, Mr. Bland said to the crowd: "I want to introduce to you the next president of the United States. I served four years with him in the house of representatives and I know he is as true a friend of free silver as I am, and I want to say that if I had had the selection of the silver candidate for president of the United States, this gentleman would have been my choice." Mr. Bryan showed some feeling as he responded: "If this nomination had gone by merit," he said, "it would have gone to the man who for twenty years in the face of great opposition has kept alive the silver cause and in the hour of victory he will be more entitled to credit than any other man in the nation." Mr. Bryan told the audience that circumstances, not merit, had been the cause of his selection, and he closed with the statement that "Had Mr. Bland secured the nomination he would have had no more loyal supporter in the United States than I." This incident was repeated at several stations where stops were made. Mr. Bland left the party here, where he made a speech last night. A big reception was given Mr. Bryan here.

TURKS AT IT AGAIN.

They Violate the Armistice Agreed Upon and Kill Women and Children.

London, July 17.—In the house of commons last evening George N. Curzon, under secretary for foreign affairs, announced that a complaint had been made by the Christian insurgents in Crete that the Turks in that island had further violated the armistice which had been agreed upon between the Turks and the Christian rebels by making an attack upon the town of Apokorona, where many persons, including women and children are reported to have been killed.

Leaves His Body for Dissection.

Baltimore, July 17.—The body of an unknown man, supposed to be W. T. Church of Detroit, Mich., was fished out of the harbor yesterday. A man's hat and coat were found on the wharf. A note found in the pocket contained the intelligence that the writer, despondent over long continued misfortune, had drowned himself. It directed that the body be turned over to the College of Physicians and Surgeons for dissection.

Salvation Army in Camp.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 17.—The fourth annual state camp of the Salvation army was formally opened at Bennett park in this city last evening and the meeting will continue for ten days. Four services will be held each day. Consul Booth-Tucker will be present at the meeting, accompanied by a number of staff officers from the national headquarters in New York city.

SPORTS

FRIDAY, July 17. Sun rises 4:38 a. m., sets 7:32 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:32 p. m. and 3:38 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mr. Bartlett, of the Gormully & Jeffries Cycle Manufacturing Company, was in town yesterday.

Harry Cuming, George Coard, Walter Long and Roy Radford rode down to Asbury Park yesterday expecting to return today.

"Gentleman" Harry Maddox, who has been training with his "Grasshopper" wheel on the Crescent Oval, returned with his trainer to Asbury Park yesterday.

The Atalanta Wheelmen have decided upon the following events for their race-meet, which will be held at Waverly, on August 22d: One mile novice, one-half mile handicap, one mile open, one mile handicap, one mile 2:25 class, and one and one-half mile tandem, scratch. These are all amateur events, the race committee having decided to omit the professional races.

Bicycles will cut a great figure in the political demonstrations this fall. A Conecticut man has invented an attachment which will safely carry an ordinary kerosene torchlight. It is probable, however, that lanterns will be used instead of the lamps, because the effect is prettier, and the unpleasant odor of burning oil is done away with. Already these attachments are being manufactured in large quantities. During former Presidential campaigns torches, uniforms and other accessories to parades were furnished by the National or local committees. The drain upon the funds was comparatively light. Now the question arises will the campaign managers be able to furnish bicycles to paraders?

AROUND THE BASES.

Tony Lusardi's "Young Crescents" were defeated at baseball yesterday on the grounds near Greenbrook by "Perce" Brown's invincible nine by a score of 19 to 0.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Your article in Monday's paper, which severely criticises the conduct of the Raritan ball team in the game with the Y. M. C. A. last Saturday, does the Raritans an injustice. Very naturally there was some "kicking" on our part, as there is in all contests of this kind, but we only attempted to gain what we thought was our rights. At no time did we mean to be ruffianly nor do I think the spectators so considered us. Trusting that you will permit this letter to appear in your columns in refutation of the criticism directed against us last Monday, I am very respectfully yours,

Thomas P. Gallagher,
Captain of the Raritans.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Joseph Haurand spent yesterday fishing at New Market and came home with a big catch.

Charles Vail captured a snapping turtle at the Feltville pond Tuesday that he claims weighs thirty-three pounds.

Game and Fish Warden Charles P. Sebring made a tour of inspection yesterday of the New Market and New Brooklyn ponds.

Geo. Fisher, of West Third street, while fishing at New Market yesterday caught nine turtles, two of which were captured at once.

LAWN TENNIS.

The tennis courts of the Park Club are being well patronized these pleasant afternoons.

The single tennis championship trophy of the Park Club again changed hands yesterday afternoon, when Chas Dupee, former holder of the trophy, defeated Percy Sandford, who had taken the trophy from Dupee several days ago. The winners score was 5-6, 6-1, 6-4.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Charles Johnson, the popular young real estate dealer of Dunellen, has purchased the pacer Alonzo, 2:26, from his former owner in Westfield.

Charles C. Brower, of Park avenue, has just received a new $200 "Faver" pneumatic sulkey for the sorrel gelding "Highland Boy." He also received a set of trotting harness for the same horse.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

$800 IN GOLD DROWNS A MAN.

At the burning of a steamboat on the Hudson river many years ago, many of the passengers were drowned. Among the bodies brought up from the bottom of the river by grappling was that of a man known to have been an excellent swimmer. Around his waist was a belt containing nearly $800 in gold. That told the story.

"In old and chronic cases of indigestion (dyspepsia or gastritis—it is all the same) the sufferer develops a great variety of symptoms and often dies—poisoned by the products of his own torpid and inflamed stomach. His food, instead of being digested, and so furnishing strength and physical substance, ferments and putrefies within him. The chief process of life is arrested at a vital point. The more he eats the worse off he is. And yet unless he can be fed he must also perish. People do so die, daily, by thousands, but we doctors seldom have the moral courage to give the cause its true name less we should be laughed at for our inability to cure so 'simple' a thing as indigestion. Simple? Why, it is the capstone of all complaints—and the mother of most of them."—So writes a famous English physician.

Some of the symptoms alluded to are these: Loss of appetite, distress after eating, heartburn and palpitation, giddiness, foul taste in the mouth, the rising of nauseous acids and gases into the throat, furred tongue, spots before the eyes, unaccountable weariness and fatigue, sluggish circulation, weakness and nervous prostration, constipation or diarrhœa, discolored skin, etc.

The sufferer's friends often advise him to cheer up, to throw off his lethargy and eat freely. Bad advice. He knows better. "No," he answers, "I cannot, my food does me no good." He is right. Food now is gold in the spent swimmer's belt.

Take light nourishment, followed immediately by a dose of the Shaker Digestive Cordial—a new and radical remedy discovered and prepared by the Shakers of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.—the essence of medicinal herbs and plants cultivated by them alone. Then continue with it. Relieves at once and soon cures. Pleasant to the palate and adapted to all constitutions.

Trial bottles—which prove its merits—at ten cents. For sale by nearly all druggists.

Paid Dearly For His Fun.

Patrick Lyons, who tried to pulverize the upper part of Patrolman Fraleigh's cranium some time ago, came up for trial in the city court this morning. Through his counsel, Walter L Hetfield, he pleaded guilty, but asked for mercy on account of his previous good character. The judge said that didn't go, as he had been arrested on the same charge once before, so he fined him $15.

Presented Past Officers With Jewels.

Unity Lodge, No. 101, K. of P., presented Past Chancelor Frank Putnam with a handsome Past Chancelor's jewel at their meeting Wednesday evening. Keeper of Records and Seal Dunavan made the presentation speech, and Mr. Putnam responded with a few well chosen words. At the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., last evening a Past Councilor's jewel was also presented to Past Councilor Isaac Squires, as is the custom of the Council.

—The case on contract of O'Mott against Kellar was tried in Justice Newcorn's court this morning and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff. The case of White against Coddington was adjourned for one week.

SUBSTITUTE FOR A BICYCLE.

"It is less dangerous than the bicycle, and I am certain it will do me just as much good."—Demorest's Magazine.

Persons who have a coughing spell every night, on account of a tickling sensation in the throat, may overcome it at once by a dose of One Minute Cough Cure. L. W. Radolph, 143 West Front street.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

DUELS AND DUELISTS.

Fighting Fitzgerald was successful in 18 duels before it was discovered that he always wore a coat of mail. For years his fame in society had rested on his invariable success as a duelist, and this discovery was his undoing.

The most tragic duel in England was between Lord Byron, grand-uncle of the poet, and a kinsman. It was fought in a tavern room by the light of one tallow candle. Lord Byron was tried for murder, but got off on manslaughter, from the penalties of which he escaped because he was a peer of the realm.

No duelist could ever be made smile over the famous story of the Englishman and Frenchman who were to fight a duel in a pitch-dark room. Not wishing to kill his man, the Englishman fired up the chimney when the word was given, and, to his surprise, brought down the Frenchman, who had hidden there. When this story is told in France it is always the Englishman who is up the chimney.

During the occupation of Paris by the allies there were duels every day, the Frenchmen usually being the challengers and the victors, as they were very skillful with the small sword. Sometimes, however, they made a mistake, as when they jeered at an English officer over losing his leg at Waterloo. The jeerer discovered that the loss of his leg did not interfere in the least with the Englishman's aim.

TITLED WOMEN OF EUROPE.

The princess of Wales has lately had her picture painted. It is remarkable in that it is the first time she has consented to be represented wearing the large sleeves of fashion. The portrait is said to be wonderfully pretty.

The queen's daily drives while she is staying at Cimiez are taken in an open victoria preceded by an outrider on a gray horse and followed at a distance by a member of the French detective force, also on horseback.

It is probable that the widowed Empress Frederick of Germany may spend the next two years in England near her mother, the queen. If so she will live at Ditton Park, the beautiful place near Windsor of the late duke of Buccleuch.

Lady Sophie Cadogan, the daughter of the Irish viceroy, is the constant companion of her brilliant mother, who dispenses the hospitality of the Dublin castle so well. Lady Sophie is not a blond like her mother. Her type of beauty combines an exquisitely fair complexion and clear-cut features with dark hair and eyes. She is noted for her gracefulness.

GAVE THEIR HEARTS.

Richard Coeur de Lion bequeathed his heart to the canons of Rouen cathedral. The heart was surprisingly large, and when disinterred six centuries later had withered to the semblance of a leaf.

When Mme. Vermenoux (Neckar's friend) died, as yet a young woman, she bequeathed her heart to Jacob Meister, making him at the same time swear that he would by his will direct that it should be buried with him in his grave.

In the parish church at Hammersmith is buried the heart of Sir Nicholas Crispe, a wealthy London citizen. He left a sum of money for the purpose of refreshing his heart once a year with a glass of wine. This was done until the heart disintegrated.

Sir William Temple directed that his heart should be buried under a sun dial in his garden. Napoleon desired that his heart be conveyed to Parma to Marie Louise, but he did not foresee that only a year after his death she would enter a ballroom attended by the duke of Wellington or that she would marry her chamberlain.

DUPED BY A BAD CHECK

FORMER PROSECUTOR WILSON IN THE MESHES OF THE LAW.

Accused of Giving a Check to Miss Betts as Security for $1,400 in Cash When He Had No Money in the Bank.

William R. Wilson, former prosecutor of the pleas of Union county, was arrested Thursday in Elizabeth on the charge of the larceny of $1,400 preferred by Miss Mary L. Betts, a granddaughter of Mary A. Betts, of West Ninth street.

The Betts estate held a mortgage on property owned by one Lawrence Ussing. Last Tuesday Miss Betts, in company with Ussing, called on Wilson for the purpose of collecting the money and satisfying the mortgage. Ussing paid a part of the money in certified checks and $1,400 in currency. Wilson suggested that it was too large a sum for a woman to carry around with her. He said that it would be better for him to give her a check for the amount, and that he would deposit the money in the bank, where she could get it the next day. He made the check out on the First National Bank, of Elizabeth. Then it occurred to him that the hour was late, and he could not get the check certified that evening. At the bank next day Miss Betts says she was told that the check was worthless, as Wilson had no money there.

Then Miss Betts went back to Wilson, who told her that he had deposited the money in the First National Bank, but unfortunately a note had come due there about the same time which he owed, and part of the money of Miss Betts had gone to meet it.

Wilson's next assurance to Miss Betts was that he would have the money for her in a couple of hours. At the expiration of the two hours she went back to his office, where he said he had been disappointed and that she would have to wait until the next day.

That night July 15th, Miss Betts consulted A. S. Patterson. Later in the evening Wilson appeared in Plainfield with a smooth story, stating that there was left in bank $950.00 of Miss Betts' $1,400. Mr. Patterson demanded and received checks for $950 and $450 and retained possession of the original check for $1,400 and compelled Wilson to pay two days interest on the latter amount together with Miss Betts expenses.

On the morning of the 16th of July Miss Betts and Mr. Patterson presented all the checks in turn at the bank, but certification was declined on each.

The bank president stated that Wilson did not have one cent in bank on either July 14th, 15th or 16th.

The matter was immediately placed in the hands of R. V. Lindabury, of Newark, resulting in the arrest of Wilson at 4:30 p.m Thursday. Wilson got wind of the proceedings and sought out Mr. Patterson and begged for time. He offered $535 on account but the offer was declined and the arrest was made. Immediately thereafter Mr. Patterson said he would take the $535 on account, and Wilson paid it over.

It was after this final disappointment that Miss Betts caused the arrest of Wilson. Justice Neal held him in $1,000 bail.

Mr. Wilson stated yesterday afternoon that he had paid out $535 on account of the money he owed, and said the balance would be paid tomorrow.

LITTLE GIRLS GOOD TIME.

Ninth Birthday of Ellena T. Woodcock Celebrated Yesterday.

Ellena T. Woodcock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Woodcock, of West Seventh street, celebrated the ninth anniversary of her birthday yesterday afternoon in a thoroughly enjoyable manner. She invited a number of her young friends to her home and the time was passed on the lawn in playing games, etc., after which they adjourned to the house where sandwiches, cake, lemonade and ice-cream were served. The decorations were pink and white.

In the centre of the table was a large birthday cake, decorated with nine pink and white candles. The waitresses who helped to serve the little people were Marion Woodcock, Nellie Berry, Annie Littell and Ada Fountain. Those present were Grace Weeks, Edith Runk, Jean, Jack and Will Douglass, Florence and Elizabeth McClay, Rose Woltman Gideon and Guion Fountain, Evelyn and Herbert Hillman, Russell McIntyre and Master Alexander Ross.

No Evidence Against Him.

Edward Dooley was brought up in the city court this morning on complaint of a female neighbor, for using indecent language. As there was no evidence against him he was discharged.

WANTS A PAROLE.

Robert Randolph Anxious to Have His Son Released From Prison.

Robert Randolph, colored, is circulating a petition among the citizens of Plainfield for the the purpose of presenting it to Gov. Griggs. The petition asks that Mr. Randolph's boy Alonzo Randolph, may be pardoned from State Prison.

It will be remembered that a few years ago, the boy, while in an intoxicated condition, attempted an assault on Mr. and Mrs. Richard Day's young daughter, in the rear of their house on East Front, street and to save the boy from lynching it was deemed best to take him secretly to Elizabeth in a closed carriage. The boy was sentenced to State prison for 15 years. His father can get him a job at $9 per week and is anxious to have him paroled. If this was done he would still be under the direction of the State authorities and if he failed to behave himself he would quickly be re committed.

Already a large number of the best people in town have signed the petition through Mr. Randolph's solicitation.

WASHED BY SEA WAVES.

Will Be Those Who Went on the Excursion to Rockaway Beach.

A better day than today could not have been chosen for the excursion of Watchung Lodge, No. 167, International Association of Machinists. The destination was Rockaway Beach, and the sail to that place from Jersey City is a delightful one. A train of thirteen cars, eight of which were comfortably filled, carried the excursionists away from Plainfield at eight o'clock sharp.

Just as the train was about to leave, a little barefooted lad named Carney Shepard climbed up the steps of one of the cars.

"Are you going?" asked the conductor.

"I dunno" was the reply and then the train pulled out and the lad, whose entire possessions did not amount to ten cents, smiled blandly on the crowd at the station.

Monte Scott Suspended.

Chairman Gideon, of the L. A. W. racing board, has issued his regular weekly bulletin. It is the most voluminous of the year. The most important announcement is the suspension of Monte Scott, of Providence, R. I., formerly of Plainfield, pending an investigation of his standing as an amateur. Scott won the time prize in the last two Irvington-Millburn races and he is one of the best distance riders in the country. Hadfield's suspension is also formally announced.

Sunday Prosecutions Fail.

City Attorney Swift, of Elizabeth, has stopped the prosecution of liquor dealers arrested for violating the Sunday law before Police Justice Neill Five trials and an equal number of acquittals yesterday have discouraged him. There are thirty-one more cases to be tried, but Justice Neill said he did not know when they would be called, and he was doubtful if they would ever come to trial, as there was little hope of convicting any of the accused dealers.

Cut With a Circular Saw.

Theodore J. Mason, of Watchung avenue, a careful and trustworthy employe in R. H. McCullough's of North Plainfield, was working on what is known as a circular or hand saw, on Thursday afternoon at five o'clock, when his right hand accidentally caught in the machinery and it was badly lacerated. Dr. Probasco dressed the wound, but it will be a long time before the patient will have the use of his hand again.

A Special Service.

EVERYONE ENTHUSIASTIC

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S FESTIVAL WILL BE A BIG SUCCESS.

Frank L. C. Martin Will Act as Grand Marshal and Will Make All Necessary Details for the Bicyclists.

When the Daily Press found its way into the homes of Plainfield's citizens yesterday, the news that Plainfield was to have a "Midsummer Night's Festival" was read with great interest. The people have appreciated Councilman Frost's efforts to give them open air concerts, but the expression of gratitude was unanimous for his efforts to bring the concerts to their homes.

The idea of the bicycle parade was well received by the cyclists. The wheelwomen were especially pleased with it, their only worry being that there would be no place for them. But Councilman Frost is too good a general to leave the women out, and there will be a special division for them.

He has now placed the entire arrangement of the bicycle parade in the hands of F. L. C. Martin, Plainfield's pioneer bicycle dealer, and if there is any man in the State capable of making a success of it, Mr. Martin is that man. He will act as Chief Marshal and, with an efficient corps of aides, will control the vast army of wheelmen that will invade Plainfield on the night of the "Midsummer Night's Festival," which is Tuesday, July 28th.

Everybody in Plainfield and all the surrounding towns that rides a wheel of any size, shape or kind, is invited to take part in the parade.

The news of the "Festival" was especially pleasing to those living along the line of the trolley and most of them declared at once that they would do their share of decorating.

The store keepers were well pleased at the news for such an event is bound to bring considerable trade from out of town beside enlarging the regular local trade.

Altogether, everybody is greatly pleased with Plainfield's midsummer event and it promises to be something long to be remembered.

THE CLUB HOUSE SELECTED

The Crescent Who Choose the Old Martin Homestead as Their Home.

The Crescent Wheelmen have at last selected a permanent clubhouse. The matter came up before a special meeting of the Board of Governors last evening and it was decided to secure the old Martin homestead, on Wert Second street next to the corner of Park avenne, now the property of Assemblyman W. R Codington.

The location is an excellant one for a club house and the building itself seems particularly adopted for one.

It will be overhauled and thoroughly equipped with everything that will enhance the comfort and pleasure of the members. The size of the building makes it impossible to have a bowling alley there, and its loss will be felt by many of the members, as the bowling contingent is a large fraction of the club.

Reception in Honor of Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Knowlton, of 450 West Fifth street, gave a reception last evening in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lynch, of London. The evening was most pleasantly passed in a social manner, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lynch, of London; Miss Lynch, the noted contralto singer, of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. George J. Tobin, Mr. and Mrs. M Cashin, Miss S. Gilligan, Miss May Flanagan, Miss Lizzie Flanagan, M. Whalen, Charles J. Ward and others.

Has the Lockjaw.

On Sunday, July 5th, Eugene Hoerster, of Somerset street, was thrown out of his wagon, as the result of runaway horses. He sustained severe and painful injuries to his arm at the time, and ever since he has been confined to his house. Recently lockjaw set in and his illness has become very serious. Dr. Zeglio is in attendance and is doing all that is possible for his patient. Yesterday it was not expected that he would live through the day, but this morning his condition was slightly improved.

—In clearing off the sewer farm there has been a large quantity of trees cut down, which, when sawed into the proper lengths, will make excellent fuel. This wood can be had free of cost to those who will remove it from the farm. For permission to do this Clarence Slape, superintendent of the farm, should be seen.

—Work was started today building an addition to Leal's School on West Front street. This is necessary owing to the increased number of students enrolled, and several classrooms will be added.

CUT WITH A JACK-KNIFE

A COLORED MAN STABBED WITHOUT APPARENT PROVOCATION.

A Party Had Been Rushing the Growler and When the Drinking Ended, James Morris Made an Attack on Henry Lewis.

A man usually has some object in stabbing another human being, but still no one seems to be able to tell exactly why James Morris stabbed Henry Lewis, last evening, at the home of William Laing, 305 Arlington avenue. Morris, the only man who can tell, is not to be found by friends or foes. The leading participants in this affair are colored.

William Laing is employed by the Plainfield Produce Company as driver. Henry Lewis is his next door neighbor, living at 301 Arlington avenue. He was in the employ of Fulper, the grocer, until the latter failed and since then has been working by the day. Yesterday, Lewis was helping Laing, as the latter's wife was ill and Laing himself was not feeling exactly right. Thanks to Lewis, Laing finished his work early and went home.

Jane Somerset, also colored, lives with them and last night James Morris and his wife came, expecting to board with Laing.

Lewis and his wife came over to spend the evening and somebody got a growler of beer to add to the pleasure of the occasion. When that was empty, Lewis "rushed" it at the request of the others. Instead of getting the quarter changed that had been given him, he used ten cents of his own.

When he came back he wanted his change, but no one had it. When the contents of this growler and some stronger spirits had followed the example of the first, Mrs. Morris suggested that Lewis "chase the duck" again. The latter refused, however, and said he was going out to have the quarter changed. Dr. Long was in an upper room attending Mrs. Laing and Mrs. Lewis and Laing were there also. The Morris family then issued their ultimatum to the effect that, if no more beer was forthcoming, they would depart. Lewis remarked that there was no objection to the latter action and started for the door. Morris grabbed Lewis by the arm as the latter reached the door. Lewis wanted to know what the matter was and then Morris walked away. As Lewis turned toward the door again he saw the other man rushing at him knife in hand. Lewis thought the knife was intended for his heart, and by a quick turn presented his right breast instead of his left.

The knife, which was a large sized pocket-knife, had a blade about three inches long which was completely buried in Lewis' side. The blade was drawn downward making the cut about four inches long.

Lewis cried that he was stabbed and Laing came rushing down stairs. He ordered Morris out of his house, whereupon the latter left for parts unknown.

Dr. Long dressed the wound, which was quite a a serious one, as an artery was cut, and later in the evening Lewis bled so freely that the wound had to be redressed. He was confined to his bed today.

The affair happened about 9 o'clock and neither of the men were drunk, although both had been drinking a little.

Flies Worry a Horse.

A German woman left her horse and wagon standing on West Second street, opposite Trinity Reformed church this morning. The horse was tied with the reins and an extra arrival of flies caused the animal much uneasiness. In consequence he became tangled in the harness and fell down in the street. Harry Bush, now located at the West Second street fire house, and James Huntington saw the accident and rushed to the scene where they succeeded in getting the animal on his feet. There was no damage.

Kicked By a Horse.

Peter McDonough, the horseshoer of West Third street, was kicked on the head yesterday afternoon by an unruly horse, and badly injured. Mr. McDonough was putting on the finishing touches to a horse's front shoe, when a horse which had been tied too close lifted its front hoof and planted it on Mr. McDonough's head. The injury is most painful but not considered dangerous.

"Mac" Sprained His Wrist.

P. J. MacAndrews, yardmaster at the freight house, sprained his wrist last evening while trying to gain the mastery over a two-wheeled vehicle, commonly called a bicycle.

BABIES CAMP ALMOST READY.

But Before It Is Opened it Will Be Necessary to Have Certain Things.

The managers of the Children's Camp desire to inform the public that they hope to have the Camp ready to receive sick babies by the last of next week.

As soon as the work is completed the ladies will furnish it and will give a tea at the Camp, when they hope all who are interested in the work of caring for the sick babies (and they hope everyone will be) will come and inspect all that has been done.

While kind friends have donated many necessary articles as well as money with which to carry on the work, there is needed a small refrigerator for iced milk, possibly some one might have a nursery one that they are through with; a small cooking oil stove for the nurse to use in preparing light lunches and a pair of andirons for the fire place that a gentleman friend of the Camp had built.

The question of how the babies are to be taken to and from the Camp has not yet been decided upon. It may not be generally known that the Camp is only to be used during the day, and it will therefore be necessary to have a two-seated covered wagon and a horse with which to transport the babies. Has anyone such a vehicle they would loan or hire for the summer, and a horse that would be loaned for its keep at a livery stable?

Any suggestions as to means of carrying out this plan will be gladly received. They hope by another year the work will be so well established the Camp will have a conveyance of its own. All donations of money will be received by Mrs. Frank Sprague Martin, 219 Hillside avenue, Chairman of Finance Committee, and other donations will be called for if word is sent to Mrs. Frank Harder corner ninth street and Madison avenue.

JERSEY WHEEL COMPANY.

H. E. Rider Will Conduct the Business in the Future.

H. E. Rider has purchased the stock and business of the Jersey Wheel company, located at 147-149 North avenue, and will continue the business, carrying a full line of bicycles, bicycle sundries and supplies, sporting goods, etc. One of the special features will be the storage and care of wheels. Competent men will be in charge of the repair department. Miss VanCleef and Mr. Woodruff, who have been in the employ of the company since it started, and who have made many friends, will be retained by Mr. Rider, who will probably give the establishment a new name and add other features of interest to cyclists. The Jersey Wheel company will carry on the manufacture of wheels at their factory, corner of Washington and East Fourth streets.

Fractured Her Leg.

Mrs. Post, wife of Patrolman Charles Post, of South Second street, while riding her wheel on Plainfield avenue last evening, after dark, was run into by a man on a wheel. Mrs. Post was thrown off and sustained a fracture of the right leg, just above the ankle. The man who ran into her did not stop, but increased his speed. Mrs. Post did not know him and would probably not recognize him if she should see him. Patrolman Hartpence appeared soon after the accident and assisted Mrs. Post home, after which a physician was called and set the broken bone. The accident will necessitate careful treatment and it will be some time before Mrs. Post will be able to walk.

Bad Language Called.

A quarrel that started on the night of July third came up before City Judge DeMeza this morning for settlement. The prisoner was Cornelius Larkin and he was charged by Nicholas Kelly with calling him a long list of foul and indecent names Kelly could not produce witnesses to prove that Larkin was the one who had used the language, although it was very evident that plenty of bad language had been used, so the Judge dismissed the complaint.

Told a Story of Hard Luck.

William Dobe, aged thirty-seven and John Chmber, aged ninteen, were arrested last evening by Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Fraleigh for riding on a freight train. They told a story of hard luck and sentence was suspended on then.

Vandeveer Pardoned.

Benjamin Vanderveer who was sentenced to State Prison from county in 1885, for 20 years for the murder of a child, has been pardoned.

JOSHUA'S SWIFT CHASE

WHEN A FUSILADE OF SHOTS OCCURRED THE ACTOR FLED.

A Disciple of Thespis Wins the Heart of a Country Girl and Then Suddenly Loses it By an Act of Cowardice.

Courage born of anger and jealousy and emphasized with a revolver last night won back the affection of a man's fickle sweetheart.

The angry man was Joshua Lenkert, a farm hand employed by John Lander, a farmer living near Bound Brook, and the fickle young woman was Lander's daughter Susan.

An actor, who called himself Janeway Jennings, came from New York a few weeks ago and engaged board at the Lander farm. Susan had shown a decided fondness for Lenkert, who, though a farm hand, is a good looking and intelligent youth. But there was no more courting for Joshua after the actor arrived. He monopolized all of the time of the pretty country girl and went walking with her, while Joshua denounced the man under his breath and resolved to punish him for stealing Susan's heart.

"I may be only a gawky farmer," Joshua said to a friend, "and I don't dress like that play actor fellow, but he'll be sorry he ever came here." Joshua even went so far as to purchase a new suit of clothes at a Bound Brook store, but, although he arrayed himself in these and a new derby hat, Miss Lander failed to smile upon him as of old.

While Joshua was milking the cows Thursday night Jennings proposed to Susan that she take a rid with him. "We'll go over to New Brunswick," he said, "and get some good ice cream. Bound Brook cream isn't good enough for a pretty girl like you."

Lenkert heard the remark and flushed with anger, but said nothing. After Jennings had harnessed one of Lander's horses to a buggy and driven away Joshua carried his milk pails to the house, put a pistol in his pocket, hurried back to the barn, led out a horse, sprang on its bare back and started in pursuit.

After a gallop of half an hour Joshua came in sight of the buggy. The vehicle was near New Brunswick. The hood was down and Joshua could not see the occupants of the buggy. Pressing his horse forward until he was able to look in the buggy, Joshua saw a sight that infuriated him. Susan's head was on Jennings' shoulder.

Drawing his revolver, Lenkert leaned over his horse and sent three bullets through the buggy top.

The actor leaped from the buggy and fled. Susan sat silent until Joshua had returned the pistol to the pocket. Then, with a glance in the direction the actor had taken, she said:

"I hate a coward! Joshua, will you forgive me?"

Joshua was all forgiveness. Tying his horse to the back of the buggy, the farmhand took the actor's place beside Susan, and they returned to the farmhouse.

Jennings returned to the farm yesterday, packed his trunk, and left for New York.

WIDOW WANTED THE BUSINESS.

Proprietor of a Fruit Store Died and a Contest Results for the Stock.

The "Orange" on Somerset street was the scene last evening about 8 o'clock of a very lively time and the end is not yet.

It appears that a man named Hermann owned and conducted the business at the above place, and he and his family occupied rooms above. It will be remembered that some time ago Hermann died, and also Mrs. Hermann's infant baby. David Hermann, a brother, who claimed to be a partner took the business, and the widow left town soon afterward.

Last night the widow Hermann appeared and wanted possession of the business claiming that it rightfully belonged to her, as her husband left it to her. David refused to transfer the business and the widow sought City Judge DeMeza and the latter issued a writ of attachment on the store goods and Constable Taynor served it, and as a result the store is closed pending settlement.

Mrs. Ballington Booth to Speak.

Mrs. Ballington Booth, wife of the commander of the American Volunteers, will address a meeting to be held in the First Baptist church Thursday evening, held under the auspices of the local post of American Volunteers. She will be assisted by Major Trumbull, leader of the national staff band, who will render several selections on his cornet.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W Randolph, 143 West Front street.

ARBITRATION PLANS

The Correspondence Between United States and Great Britain.

LITTLE SUBSTANTIAL PROGRESS MADE

Views of the Two Governments So Explicitly Stated That Future Discussion May Be Confined To Narrowing the Few Divergencies of Method.

Washington, July 18.—The efforts of the United States and Great Britain to agree upon a general arbitration treaty for the settlement of all controversies through the establishment of a permanent tribunal, as well as the progress of diplomatic negotiations towards solving the Venezuelan problem, are set forth in thirteen communications just made public by the state department. While they constitute the first authoritative disclosures upon these great questions since President Cleveland's famous Christmastide message to congress, it is disclosed that previous press reports of the negotiations between the two governments have accurately outlined the course of events. Little substantial progress towards a generel arbitration treaty is disclosed by the documents. An outline in part of the proposed procedure is laid down and the views of the two governments are so explicitly stated that future discussion may be confined towards narrowing the few divergencies of method. The further fact is made apparent that the United States has not relaxed its vigilance in demanding a just settlement of the Venezuela boundary question and has rejected the British proposals for abritrating that dispute under terms involving the surrender of any part of Venezuela's claims.

Venezuela Matter.

The correspondence opens with a letter from Ambassador Bayard to Lord Salisbury dated February 27 last, stating that his instructions continued to indicate an urgent desire to have the Guianan boundary question removed as soon as practicable from the atmosphere of possible controversy, and proposing an entrance forthwith upon negotiations at Washington between the British ambassador and the secretary of state. Lord Salisbury, in reply, on March 3, said his government readily concurred in the suggestion and had sent instructions to Sir Julian Pauncefote directing him to discuss the question either with the Venezuelan representative or the United States acting as the friend of Venezuela.

Salisbury's Plan for Arbitration.

Lord Salisbury's instructions to Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated March 5, form the third document and are devoted to the system for general international arbitration, negotiatfons for the establishment of which had been ruptured by Secretary Gresham's death. Lord Salisbury submits the following: "Heads of a treaty for arbitration in certain cases: 1—Her Britannic majesty and the president of the United States shall appoint two or more permanent judicial officers for the purpose of this treaty; and on the appearance of any difference between the two powers, which, in the judgment of either of them, can not be settled by negotiation, each of them shall designate one of the said officers as arbitrators, and the two arbitrators shall hear and determine any matter referred to them in accordance with this treaty.

Umpire for Arbitrators.

2—Before entering on such arbitration the arbitrators shall select an umpire by whom any question upon which they disagree, whether interlocutory or final, shall be decided. The decision of such umpire upon any interlocutory question shall be binding upon the arbitrators. The determination of the arbitrators, or, if they disagree, the decision of the umpire shall be the award upon the matters referred. 3—Complaints made by the nationals of one power against the officers of the other; all pecuniary claims or groups of claims amounting to not more than £100,000, made on either power by the nationals of the other whether based on an alleged right by treaty or agreement or otherwise; all questions affecting diplomatic or consular privileges; all claims for damages or indemnity under the said amount; all alleged rights of fishery, access, navigation or commercial privilege, and all questions referred by special agreement between the two parties, shall be referred to arbitration in accordance with this treaty, and the award thereon shall be final.

Territory and Territorial Claims.

Any difference in regard to a question of fact or of international law, involving the territory, territorial rights, sovereignty, or jurisdiction of either power, or any pecuniary claim or group of claims of any kind, involving a sum larger than £100,000, shall be referred to arbitration under this treaty. But if, in any such case, within three months after the award has been reported, either power protests that such award is erroneous in respect to some issue of fact, or some issue of international law, the award shall be reviewed by a court composed of three of the judges of the supreme court of Great Britain and three of the judges of the supreme court of the United States; and if the said court shall determine, after hearing the case, by a majority of not less than five to one, that the said issue has been rightly determined, the award shall stand and be valid, but in default of such determination, it shall not be valid. If no protest is entered by either power against the award within the time limited, it shall be final. 5—Any difference which, in the judgment of either power, materially affects the honor or integrity of its territory, shall not be referred to arbitration under this treaty except by special agreement.

Secretary Olney, in reply April 11, declares that Lord Salisbury's proposals are welcomed with the keenest appreciation of their value and of the enlightened and progressive spirit which animates them. So far as they manifest a desire that the two great English speaking peoples of the world shall remain in perpetual peace, he fully reciprocates that desire on behalf of the government and people of the United States. But by the direction of the president he proposes the following substitute for Lord Salisbury's articles four and five. 4—Arbitration under this treaty shall also be obligatory in respect of all questions now pending or hereafter arising, involving territorial rights, boundaries, sovereignty or jurisdiction, or any pecuniary claim or group of claims aggregating a sum larger than £100,000 and in respect of all controversies not in this treaty specially described. In the case of controversies provided for by this article, the award shall be final if concurred in by all the arbitrators. If assented to by a majority only, the award shall be final unless one of the parties within three months from its promulgation, shall protest in writing to the other that the award is erroneous in repect of some issue of fact or of law. In every such case the award shall be reviewed by a court composed of three of the judges of the supreme court of Great Britain and three of the judges of the supreme court of the United States who, before entering upon their duties shall agree upon three learned and impartial jurists to be added to said court in case they shall be equally divided upon the award to be made, and the award so affirmed or so rendered by said court, whether unanimously or by a majority vote, shall be final. If, however, the court shall be equally divided upon the subject of the award to be made, the three jurists agreed upon as hereinbefore provided shall be added to the said court; and the award of the court so constituted, whether rendered unanimously or by a majority vote, shall be final.

Opportunity for Experiment.

In conclusion, Secretary Olney says: "It only remains to observe that, if article 4 as amended, should prove acceptable, no reason is perceived why the pending Venezuela boundary dispute should not be brought within the treaty by express words of inclusion. If, however, no treaty for general arbitration can now be expected, it cannot be improper to add that the Venezuela boundary dispute seems to offer a good opportunity for one of those tentative experiments at arbitration which, as Lord Salisbury justly intimates, would be of decided advantage as tending to indicate the lines upon which a scheme for general arbitration can be judiciously drawn."

CONVENTION BULLETINS.

The Western Union Will Report the Work of the Populists Free of Charge.

New York, July 18.—The Western Union Telegraph company has arranged to send a free bulletin service over the country from the populist and bi-metallic conventions, which meet in St. Louis next week, just as it did from the late republican and democratic conventions. The St. Louis and Chicago bulletins were sent to some 15,000 offices, and were given to the press and the public free of charge. The Chicago bulletins of the democratic convention, distributed over the various circuits from the New York office alone after they were received there, amounted in the aggregate to more than 193,000, or about 2,500,000 words.

Meteor Wins a Drifting Race.

Bangor, Ireland, July 18.—The Royal Ulster Yacht club regatta took place yesterday afternoon. The event in which the greatest interest centred was the race for yachts over 20 rating, for which all the crack British boats and Emperor William's cutter Meteor were entered. There was scarcely any wind, however, and the race degenerated into a drifting match, in which the German boat again showed her phenomenal qualities. The Meteor held the lead until the breeze died away altogether, which caused the other boats to give up the race. The Meteor drifted home.

Objectionable Marks Upon Freight.

Providence, July 18.—The supreme court has granted an injunction against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company to restrain it from putting objectionable marks upon freight consigned to one of the wholesale concerns in this city. This is looked upon as a test case. The marks are letters and numbers stamped in red and are understood to denote the time of arrival in this city. The retailers object to the disfigurement, and the wholesalers have made the protest.

Connelly Challenges Everhardt.

New York, July 18.—Eddie Connelly of Boston has issued a defi to box Jack Everhardt, Charley McKeever or Horace Leeds at 135 pounds. Harry Kehoe of New York, his backer, stands ready to post $500 as a side bet on the issue. Connelly's cartel is specially directed at Everhardt and Ernest, the latter having been awarded some time ago a decision over the Bostonian.

The Stranded Steamer Colombia.

Pescadero, Cal., July 18.—The Pacific Mail steamer Colombia is still fast on the rocks and cannot be saved. The first change in the weather that brings in a heavy sea will tear her to pieces. Her compartments are awash up to the between decks, and the additional weight of water holds the ship down more steadily on the reef.

Vanderbilt's Condition.

New York, July 18.—The condition of Cornelius Vanderbilt, the millionaire railroad magnate who was stricken with paralysis on Tuesday last, was slightly improved this morning.

IN THE REALM OF NATURE.

The joints endure much use because they are constantly lubricated by an oil secreted by glands especially adapted to that purpose.

In tropical forests so large a proportion of the plants are of the sensitive variety that sometimes the path of a traveler may be traced by the wilted foliage.

There is no doubt that the hair of the scalp protects the head against external cold, and also prevents the loss of heat through the very low thermal conductivity of the hair cylinders and of the cushion of air mingled with them.

Some of the medical journals report a new affection of the eyes, caused, it is said, by the prevailing method of seating in street cars. The effort to fix the gaze upon passing objects causes an annoying strain and twitching in the external muscles of the globes.

A cure for rinderpest is said to have been discovered at Salisbury, in Rhodesia. It consists in keeping the animals from drinking water and dosing them with linseed oil. Cattle in the first stages can be cured by purging them, washing the mouth with paraffin and salt, and applying Stockholm tar to the nostrils.

Prof. King asserts that insects freeze solid during the winter and thaw out when warm weather comes. Others claim this has never been demonstrated. If once the power of evolving heat is lost, life goes with it. At least this is a great principle in biology. There are liquids which do not freeze under a low temperature, and these may possibly enter into the insect organism.

How to Live a Century

In an address on old age, recently published in the British Medical Journal, Sir James Crichton Browne, M.D., LL.D., says: "Man is entitled to live one hundred years."

Many men have lived a century and not one of them has ever committed suicide. Note that fact. It is a simple question of wear and repair. Accidents excepted, a human life is measured by the body's power to build itself up as fast as use tears it down. In health this is done.

But disease attacks it. Appetite and digestion fail; strength declines, flesh melts like snow. What can stop the wasting and replace the loss?

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of lime and soda.

It is a body-builder. It is the essence of the elements and principles that feed, nourish, reconstruct. It is fuel fat for the vital fire; it makes red blood; it stops the wasting; it puts back the lost flesh.

Hence its brilliant results in cases of anaemia, bronchitis, chronic gastric and intestinal disorders and consumption. The oil (easily digested and assimilated) forms flesh and tissue; while the lime promotes the growth of bone. It is like an architect in wood, in stone and in iron—all at once.

In Scott's Emulsion the taste of the oil is fully disguised. It does not nauseate the most delicate stomach.

No other emulsion is "just the same as," or "as good as" Scott's. There is a radical difference.

Accept no substitute.

WITH PUBLIC HONORS

Funeral Arrangements for the Late Gov. Russell Completed.

WIFE AND MOTHER RETURN HOME

Cambridge Anxious To Pay a Last Fitting Tribute to Her Distinguished Son—The Remains Due at Boston To-morrow Morning.

Boston, June 18.—The arrangements for the funeral of ex-Gov. Russell have been practically completed. Dr. W. D. Swan, brother-in-law of the deceased, arrived home in Cambridge last evening from Magnolia, the summer residence of the ex-governor's family. Mrs. Russell and the children did not return to Cambridge with Dr. Swan, but arrived this morning. Mrs. Charles Theodore Russell, sr., accompanied by her son, Charles Theodore, and her grandson, Charles Theodore, arrived home from the White Mountains last evening. The aged mother had been told of the death of her son, but she bore up bravely under the terrible shock. The mother and wife with the brothers and sisters talked over the funeral arrangements this morning. The Boston & Maine officials have notified the family that the train carrying the remains will be given the right of way on the railroads under its control, and will also notify the family as nearly as possible when the body and its escorts arrive in Boston. This will be early Sunday morning. The desire that there shall be a public funeral is universal among the citizens of Cambridge, and the members of the family, unless they change their minds, will not interpose an objection. The funeral will take place from the Shepard Memorial Church, corner of Mason and Garden streets, and Rev. Alexander McKenzie, the pastor, who who arrived in Cambridge last evening, will officiate. The plan arranged is to have the funeral on Tuesday. The First Corps of cadets, of which the ex-governor was at one time a member, will attend the funeral, and Company B of the Fifth regiment and Company B of the First regiment, the Cambridge militia companies, will also act as an escort. Word was received in Cambridge last night to the effect that if possible President Cleveland would come to Cambridge from Gray Gables to attend the funeral. The family has received hundred of messages of condolence from different parts of the country.

SYMPATHY AND RESPECT.

Flags at Half-Mast at Dalhousie, N. B., When Gov. Russell's Body Arrived.

Dalhousie, N. B., July 18.—The body of ex-Gov. William E. Russell of Massachusetts, who died suddenly at Little Pabos, arrived here on the steamer Admiral yesterday from that place. It was received with every token of respect and sympathy. Flags on the public and many private buildings were at half mast, and many of the leading citizens of this place were at the wharf on the arrival of the steamer. The body was in charge of Col. Russell, brother of the deceased, and Col. Peabody. A special train for St. Johns was ready, and the remains were at once transferred to it. They will go from St. Johns to Boston on a fast train to-day.

BRYAN AT LINCOLN.

Most Enthusiastically Greeted by Thousands at His Home.

Lincoln, Neb., July 18.—When Wm. J. Bryan and his party reached here last night the thousands in waiting at the depot simply went wild in their enthusiasm. Tin horns, steam calliopes, firecrackers, whistles and everything else that would add to the din were used. It was with great difficulty that a passage was made to the carriages in waiting for the presidential candidate and his family. They were then driven to their home, and after a short rest went to the Hotel Lincoln. From the hotel a civil and military parade escorted Mr. Bryan to the state house. Standing upon a platform built outside the capitol, he delivered his speech, and, although it was raining, the enthusiasm of his auditors was not diminished, and his remarks were frequently interrupted by applause.

Raines Law Special Agents.

Albany, July 18.—The state civil service commission has completed the examination of the papers of candidates who are desirous of being appointed special agents by State Excise Commissioner Lyman. Of the 654 candidates who tried the civil service competitive examination for special agents held June 24, 245 passed, 38 of whom are veterans, who have preference in all appointments made.

Flight of a Peruvian Rebel Leader.

London, July 18.—A Lima, Peru, dispatch to the Times says that Seminario, the leader of the rebels at Yquitos in the Loreto district, has fled, leaving the treasury empty. The rebellion in that district is now ended.

Gov. Morton and Party in Camp.

Paul Smiths, N. Y., July 18.—Gov. Morton and his party, consisting of twenty persons, are now quartered here. They are occupying the H. McK. Twombly camp on the upper St. Regis.

The Cleveland Celebration.

Hartford, July 18.—Mayor Preston has called a special meeting of the common council for this evening to vote an appropriation for a delegation of members to go to the Cleveland celebration next week.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Fair Tonight and Sunday; Slightly Warmer Sunday.

At 7 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 81 Degrees.

There is assurance from borough officials that the extension of Watchung avenue on the borough side will be finished and in use by the first of January next.

It is probable that Dr. Whalen, who has been acting as deputy under the late Postmaster Sheridan, of Elizabeth, will be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the latter.

The proposed bicycle parade and trolleized band concert is a unique event in local life and ought to receive the hearty encouragement of every Plainfielder who delights in attractions other than those furnished in the ordinary humdrum of existence. No town in the country is more imbued with bicycle enthusiasm than this city and any affair in which the wheel is to play a part is assured of success so long as the weather clerk smiles and stays the rain drops.

An Ohio manufacturing concern, which has been experimenting with profit-sharing plans for eleven years, has finally evolved a plan radically different from profit sharing and more like a permanent wage increase, with a provision for withholding the increase from the more negligent workmen. At first the commonly-talked of plan of dividing a certain portion of the profits among the workmen was tried, each employe sharing according to his earnings. The first dividend to employes was declared at the end of six months, and was at the rate of 13.47 per cent. on the wages paid. One workman received $275 in dividend. But it was found that the men did not take much interest in this plan, so it was modified and the men were arbitrarily classified according to the interest they were understood to show in their work and their efficiency, the most active receiving a larger share than the others, and all dividends being withheld from those who were noticeably careless. The money so withheld did not go to the firm, but was added to to the part allotted to the workmen and divided among them. Then the firm became a corporation and the plan was changed. The average amount paid had been a 12 per cent. dividend, so it was decided to pay a uniform rate of 12 per cent. on wages, the right to withhold dividends for neglect being retained. Employes are helped to buy stock if they wish. Employers and employes are said to be satisfied with this arrangement.—Post.

HE'S FOR FREE PIG IRON.

A. P. Hall Tells McKinley How to Build on Bryan's Logic.

Major McKinley was interested the other morning in a letter from a Georgia man, A. P. Hall, of Atlanta, who is a 16 to 1 man, but does not want any half-way measures. He says:

I accept the arguments of the advocates of free silver and agree with the remedy so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. I am in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of pig iron at a ratio of 16 to 1 by the United States alone, and can prove by the best authority that such a policy on our part will raise prices, put plenty of money in circulation, give the honest debtor a chance to pay his debts, thereby making the whole country prosperous.

The writer proves by liberal quotations from Bryan and Senators Jones and Stewart that the free coinage of pig iron and the stamp of the Government would make its bullion value the same as its mint value. He also proves by the same authorities that there need be no fear of a contraction of the currency, for if gold and silver should be driven out by the baser metal, there is plenty of pig iron to take their places, and so to give the people plenty of money.

He declares that wages would be compelled to rise, because no man would be fool enough to work for $1 a day who could make $1,000 a day by picking up rusty nails and old horseshoes and taking them to the mint for coinage.

Major McKinley was much amused by this letter, and thinks it is one of the happiest hits evolved by the present situation.

AN ORDINANCE.

An ordinance to amend an ordinance, entitled "An ordinance to create and define the duties of a Board of Police and a police force," approved February 28th, 1882, and amended April 7th, 1884.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That Section 2 of the ordinance to which this is an amendment be amended so as to read as follows:

Sec. 2. The Board of Police may hold such meetings at such times and places as they may determine and appoint, and shall have full authority and control over the city jail and other buildings used for police purposes, and over the entire police force, subject, however, to the ultimate control of the Common Council. The said Board of Police shall have power to hear and determine complaints against policemen charging misconduct or disobedience of any of the rules and regulations established or which may be established for the police force or police department, and in case of conviction, the said Board of Police may order deduction from the pay of the policeman so convicted, not exceeding five dollars for each offense and the deduction so ordered shall be made from the next installment of salary to fall due to such policeman.

Sec. 3. That Section 3 of said ordinance be amended by adding thereto the following:

The said police force shall rank as follows—Captain, Sergeant, Roundsmen, Patrolmen, Doorman, and the duties of the several members and officers of said police force shall be those prescribed by the laws of the State, the ordinances of the city, and the rules and regulations that may from time to time be prescribed and established by resolution of the Common Council for the better government and discipline of the police department.

Sec. 4. That Section 4 of said ordinance be amended by striking out the word "Mayor" where it first occurs in that section, and substituting in the place thereof the words "said Board of Police."

Sec. 5. That there be added to said ordinance the following section, viz:

Sec. 8. In case any complaint shall be preferred against any policeman, charging him with incapacity, mis-conduct, non-residence or disobedience of the just rules and regulations established or which may be established for the police force or police department of said city, and the Board of Police shall be of opinion that said charges, if proved, ought to be followed by suspension without pay or removal from office of said policeman, said Board of Police shall thereupon file said complaint or a more formal complaint to be drafted by the Counsel to the Corporation, if said Board shall so direct, in the office of the office of the City Clerk either before or after hearing before the said Board of Police, as said Board of Police may elect, and refer the proceedings thereon to the Common Council. The Common Council in either case upon receiving the complaint shall cause not less than three day's notice to be given to the person charged, of the time and place, when and where the Common Council will proceed to publicly examine into said charges and to afford the person so charged a fair trial upon said charges and every reasonable opportunity to make his defense if he has or chooses to make any. At the time and place fixed for such public examination and trial, or at such time or times to which the same shall be adjourned, the said public examination and trial shall be had before the Common Council by the oral examination of such witnesses pro and con as may be offered in accordance with the statute in such case made and provided, and in case as the result of trial the person so charged shall be found guilty, the Common Council may order deduction of pay, reduction of rank or suspension or removal from office. It shall be discretionary with the Common Council whether to permit the defense to be conducted by counsel.

Sec. 4. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances, so far as they are inconsistent herewith, are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council July 6th, 1896.

Approved by the Mayor July 10th, 1896.

A. GILBERT, Mayor.

Attest—J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

if catarrh is a constitutional affection, as those claim who have a blood tonic to sell, that physicians, in extreme cases, frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from it? Catarrh is a climate affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm, in all cases of catarrh, is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and a perfect cure after short continuance.

—The Plainfield Catholic Club will give another dance at their clubhouse on the evening of Thursday, August 6th.

—The Christian Endeavor services at the First Baptist church last evening were conducted by Rev. Arthur Crane.

—Mrs. Sylvester Lane, of West Third street, has a night blooming cereus of thirty buds which is attracting considerable attention.

—The work of opening Watchung avenue from the brook to Jackson avenue in the borough will probably be started about Oct. 1st.

—Crushed stone has been spread on the bridge on Somerset street. There are several other places on the same street which needs attention.

—At the meeting of the borough fire, water and lamp committee this evening, the new fire house for Prideville will come up for consideration.

—A. G. A. R. devotional service is being planned to be held at an early date in the W.C.T.U.rooms. Rev.Mr. Livermore will probably deliver an address.

—District Deputy L. S. Pocock and staff, of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., went to Rahway last evening to install the officers of the lodge at that place.

—Rev. Dr. A. Moldenke, of New York, will preach at the German Lutheran church tomorrow morning. Rev. Mr. Kionka, the pastor, will preach in the evening.

—The excursion of St. Mary's church will be held next Wednesday to Glen Island. There will be music on the boat and at the Island, furnished by Prof. O'Reilly.

—At the last meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., a settlement of the excursion accounts was made, when it was learned that the Post came out even to a penny.

—The Oriental Bicycle Club, which is composed of colored young men and women of this city, will give a promenade concert at T. A. B. hall on next Thursday evening. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music.

—If you want a welsh rarebit without going to Wales for it, you can get one well cooked and well served by dropping in some night before 12 o'clock p. m. at Stephenson's new restaurant on North avenue near the station.

—David Drake, of Prideville, says that as yet nothing has been done toward organizing a fire company in the above locality. Unless some one takes a step soon there will never be one. Some enterprising citizen should make a move.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints,—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. PLANS OF GOLD MEN

Conference of Yellow Metal Advocates at Philadelphia.

AN OFFER MADE TO REPUBLICANS

Proposition to Support McKinley in Return for Aid for Democratic Congressional Candidates—Third Ticket Disapproved Of as Dangerous.

Philadelphia, July 18.—An important conference of gold standard democrats was held yesterday in the office of John C. Bullitt a well known lawyer, for the purpose of protesting against the action of the Chicago convention. The meeting was held in private and it was presided over by Henry D. Welsh, a director of the Pennsylvania railroad. Among the sixty democrats in attendance were: John C. Bullitt, Charles H. Jones, vice-president of the Trust Company of North America; J. Simpson Africa, president of the Union Trust company; ex-mercantile appraiser Charles K. Ingersoll, James F. Sullivan, director of the Union Traction company; ex-city treasurer William Redwood Wright; Judge Harmon Verkes of Bucks county, William M. Singerly, president of the Philadelphia Record Publishing company (which paper has bolted the Chicago platform); George F. Baer of Reading, a director of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company, and others. Mr. Singerly stated that he had proposed to prominent republicans that a deal be effected whereby in democratic districts of this state the democrats should vote for McKinley and in return the republicans support the democratic nominees for congress, state senate and general assembly. Mr. Singerly was of the opinion that such a deal could be effected within from thirty to forty days. He furtker expressed his opposition to the placing of a "sound money" democratic ticket in the field because such a step would jeopardize McKinley and would injure the regular democratic organization in Pennsylvania. There was a general discussion on matters appropriate to the conference, and the following resolution, which was prepared by Mr. Bullitt, was unanimously adopted:

The Platform Denounced.

Resolved, That the platform adopted by the Chicago convention is neither honest nor patriotic, and therefore not democratic. That it differs so radically from the past doctrines of the democratic party, and particularly from the national platform of 1892 and the Pennsylvania platform of the year 1896, that we cannot as honest democrats accept its wide departure from true democratic doctrine and we believe that the highest duty of true democrats is to make every effort to defeat the ticket nominated at Chicago. That a committe of seven be appointed, of whom the president of this meeting shall be chairman, with instructions to confer with representative democrats throughout the state for the purpose of formulating some plan to preserve the integrity of the democratic party in Pennsylvania and secure the defeat of Bryan and Sewall.

MISSOURI GOLD MEN.

A Call To Be Issued by a Number of Prominent Democrats.

St. Louis, July 18.—A number of prominent gold-standard democrats of this city took the first step towards repudiating the ticket and platform of the Chicago convention. They have decided to issue a call for a convention of the gold-standard democracy of Missouri, to determine whether or not a third ticket shall be put in the field, whether the fight for gold shall extend into the congressional districts and whether the bolters shall come out openly for McKinley and centralize their efforts on him. Col. James O. Broadhead, ex-minister to Switzerland under Cleveland, presided at the meeting. Addresses were made and a resolution was adopted providing for the naming of a committee of seven by Chairman Broadhead to send out a call for a convention of gold-standard democrats to be held at an early date. Circulars will be sent all over the country to gold-standard leaders asking them to co-operate or be present at the meeting.

Cretan Insurgents Kill Turks.

Washington, July 18.—The Turkish legation has received from the sublime porte the following telegram under yesterday's date: "The governor general of Crete telegraphs that the commander of the imperial sloop-of-war Iaxender, having observed that a few boats were getting near the village of Kalios, and being under the impression that they were carrying ammunition to the insurgents, sent one boat with nine sailors and one midshipman in order to intercept them. Armed insurgents, however, stationed on the shore, fired on our boat and killed all its occupants."

Connecticut Republican Committee.

Hartford, July 18.—The republican state central committee will have a meeting at Fishers island on Friday, July 24. It has been decided to establish the headquarters at the Allyn house in this city for the campaign. The rooms will be opened at the time of the state convention, which will be held the first week of September.

The Fighting in Crete.

London, July 18.—A dispatch to the Times from Canea says that the fighting in the Apokorona district of the island of Crete continues and the Turkish troops make little progress against the Christian Cretans.

Severe Blow to Racing at Roby.

Indianapolis, July 18.—The state supreme court yesterday afternoon upheld the Roby racing law of 1895, which struck a severe blow to racing in the Indiana suburb of Chicago.

THE POET'S CORNER.

"Home Is Where the Loved Ones Are."

Tho' north or south, or east or west,
Our feet may wander, near or far,
This truth is borne in ev'ry breast—
Our home is where our loved ones are.

Four walls upreared by human hands
Form not the place that we call home;
We turn to them in stranger lands,
We yearn for them where'er we roam,
Because the hearts that love and live—
Because the hearts we know are true
Are gathered there and wait to give
A welcome when our journey's through.

But if, by homeward-gazing eyes,
No face is at the window seen,
And, dumb of heart, we look where lies
A mound, a sacred spot of green,
Oh, weary soul! remember this:
A second truth our Father gives;
The heart that loves, immortal is—
The heart that loves forever lives!

Above the blue, beyond the vail,
Our falt'ring feet must journey far;
We'll find our home—we cannot fail—
For home is where our loved ones are!
—William Wallace Cook, in Ladies' World.

The Call.

The city claims the winter, be it so,
But when the sky is full of songs and wings,
The valleys fragrant with bright blooming things,
To nature's glad republic thou shouldst go.

There inspiration drops from the young morn;
There noons are like full urns pressed down with life;
There doth the past with many sorrows rife
Fall shriveled off and leave the soul new born.

Hark to the call from many a dusky wood,
From spicy pastures drowsing in the sun,
From lilied streams that through the meadows run.
Come, live with us, and we will do thee good.
—Mary F. Butts, in Youth's Companion.

Pink Hyacinths.

An odorous breath of blossoms pure and sweet,
Pink hyacinths that come when spring winds blow,
And star the emerald grass about our feet,
Where late has lain the mantle of the snow.

I stoop and pluck one dainty, waxlike bloom,
That blushes with the hue of early dawn,
And as I breathe its subtly sweet perfume,
I sigh to think of springtimes that are gone.

But flowers will bloom with each returning spring,
And robbins nest with every maiden year:
Then why should we not tune our hearts and sing,
Nor sigh for music fled and spring flowers sere?
—Minnie Quinn, in N. Y. Independent.

Adversity.

We fret and fear if all the year
Is not a panorama gay;
Our fond hopes die, we weep and sigh
When dark night follows day.

If winter's snow would never blow,
How could we love the warmth of June?
If ne'er the night our day would blight
We could not prize the light of noon.

If never friends our trust would rend,
Could we the worth of true friends know?
Our hearts could bless no kind caress
If 'twere not for some cruel blow.

The day of light must follow night
As did the grand creation's dawn;
Our hearts must wait for fortune's state,
Success is from affliction drawn.

So bide the hours, though smiling flowers
Do not always the path adorn;
Our hardest trials are fortune's wiles,
The sweetest rose blooms on the thorn.
—Sidney Heald, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

Beneath the Sod.

I saw the mortal laid beneath the sod,
With carven cross above her breast.
I knew the immortal spirit was with God,
A bright, pure soul had gained eternal rest,
First of a band of friends to pass away.
Her busy, useful life on earth is done;
Ended forever is her toilsome day,
For her the promised rest has now begun.
I stood and heard the solemn accents fall,
"I am the resurrection and the life,"
God, whose great mercy watches over all,
Had t'en my friend from out our earthly strife.
We left her lying in her peaceful bed,
Until the dawning of that last great day,
Trusting in One who long ago hath said
That He will wipe all bitter tears away.
—The Academy.

If I Were Ten.'

If I were ten, my dear like you,
The sky, methinks, were always blue,
The hours would ne'er seem dull and dun,
For every day I'd see the sun
Come out and gild the world anew.

And everything I heard were true,
There were not aught to mourn, undo,
I scarce would know the things to shun
If I were ten.

And yet, perhaps, if I could woo
Your age again, I'd long with rue
To see the years and birthdays run
Until my place to-day were won.
I'd have a different point of view
If I were ten.
—Sketch.

The Average Man.

I very much admire many traits that I possess,
And though I blush to say it, still I candidly confess
There's lots I like about me; and while other folks may see Things in a very different light, I'm really pleased with me.
It's true my thoughts, my words, my deeds, my figure and my face
May to the careless eye appear as only commonplace,
But that's because I throw about my nobleness of mind
A meek and modest air that makes my greatness hard to find.
—L. A. W. Bulletin.

Forgive.

Wait not the morrow, but forgive me now;
Who knows what fate to-morrow's dawn may bring?
Let us not part with shadow on thy brow,
With my heart hungering.

Wait not the morrow, but entwine thy hand
In mine with sweet forgiveness full and free;
Of all life's joys I only understand
This joy of loving thee.

Perhaps some day I may redeem the wrong,
Repair the fault—I know not when or how.
Oh, dearest, do not wait—it may be long—
Only forgive me now.
—London Academy.

The Secret.

'Twas first her eyes that won his heart;
And next her airy wit
Caused him to grieve when they must part—
So true-love knots are knit.

Yet laughing eyes and dainty jest,
Though potent in their way,
Are not the means that serve her best
In holding to her sway.

Love lingers now, through years that make
A havoc sad with others,
For she can make a batter cake
That's better than his mother's.
—Washington Star.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
UNITED HOSPITAL AND DISPENSARY, Boston, Mass.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

DISGRACEFUL BASEBALL.

The Pittsburg-Philadelphia Game Winds Up in a Riot and Fisticuffs.

Pittsburg, July 18.—The Pittsburg and Philadelphia game yesterday afternoon wound up in a disgraceful snarl. It was a close game and the home team was one run in the lead until Philadelphia went to bat in the last inning. They batted Hastings for three runs and took the lead with two to spare. In Pittsburg's half the local men filled the bases on a close decision with only one out. Philadelphia kicked hard on the decision, and while the players were having it out at the home plate with the umpire, Ely scored from third. This further enraged the visitors and they called Umpire Betts all the names in the category of tough. Taylor struck the umpire and Clements was only prevented from doing so by Nash, who ran out on the field from the bench. Taylor and Clements were both fined and removed from the game, Carsey and Grady taking their places. Carsey made a balk, allowing another run and tieing the score. Then the visitors all gathered about the umpire again and the police had to be called. Nothing like it was ever seen on the local grounds. The Philadelphia management declare that they were robbed and that Umpire Betts will be removed.

NORTH ATLANTIC SQUADRON.

Preparations for the Coming Manoeuvres Off New York.

Washington, July 18.—Rear-Admiral Bunce has begun the concentration of his ships at Tompkinsville, S. I., in preparation for the August maneouvres of the North Atlantic squadron. The Cincinnati and Montgomery, which have been assisting the Connecticut naval militia in their annual drills, have been ordered to be at the rendezvous to-day. By the middle of next week it is expected that all of the vessels of the squadron will be there and the work of coaling will begin at once. It is hoped that all will be ready for a start about August 1, and the first of the drills will probably take place in the triangle southeast of Sandy Hook, lying between the steamer routes, a locality which, although not far distant from the coast, is almost free from shipping at all times. In this practically open water the ships will have full opportunity to fire their big guns with service charges, and to parade in fleet formation in files and fours, without running much danger of collisions with merchant steamers. The spectacle will be an attractive one, with the fleet of fifteen warships in battle array. For prudential reasons the admiral will endeavor to avoid the intrusion of excursion steamers.

ANTI-BRYAN POPULISTS.

"Middle-of-the-Road" Men To Hold a Public Meeting To-morrow.

St. Louis, July 18.—The "middle of the road" populists are making a strong fight against either the endorsement of Bryan and the Chicago platform or the nomination of the Nebraskan on a populist platform. They are much encouraged by the action of the Arkansas populist convention, which refused to pass a resolution instructing its delegates to endorse Bryan, and they propose to crystalize the anti-Bryan sentiment by a public meeting on Sunday afternoon, when the campaign against him will be opened. All delegates and populists who want a separate ticket and an independent populist organization are expected to be present. Chairman Taubeneck of the people's party national committee leads this faction of the populists and with him are associated those who signed the manifesto issued after the republican convention declaring for Teller for president.

SALT TO KILL ARMY WORMS.

Experiments by a New York Farmer Which May Prove Successful.

Rome, N. Y., July 18.—A Rome farmer has discovered that the army worm is killed when it comes in contact with salt. To confine the worms where they are operating he is putting a windrow of salt around the field, or to protect a growing crop that is not infested he will run a line of salt around that. From experiments he made in which several worms were killed he is confident that when the worms undertake to crawl over the row of salt enough of the salt will adhere to the worms to destroy them. The result of the experiment will be given to the public.

SEVERAL WOUNDED

Another Fierce Riot in the Streets of Cleveland.

THE MOB AGAIN ATTACKS THE MILITIA

Repeated Charges with Bayonets and a Number of Strikers Are Injured—Stones and Bricks Hurled at the Soldiers—Worst Fight Yet.

Cleveland, July 18.—The fiercest fight since the strike of the Brown Hoisting works began occurred last evening. The militia kept the crowd back while the non-union men were taken from the shops, but the mob increased until it numbered many thousands and extended over a territory of fifteen squares. Jeers, stones and clubs drew a charge from the police and militia. Many on both sides were wounded. Just how many striker were hurt is uncertain, but two men who were so severely stabbed with bayonets that they could not get away, are lying at the St. Clair hospital. They are Thomas McGreavy and Thomas Garety.

Bayonets Freely Used.

All day there were frequent clashes between the mob at the Brown Hoisting works, the police and militia. The members of the mob were in a vicious mood and whenever a lone soldier or policeman could be reached, violence was attempted. The troops from 2 p. m. were constantly under arms and had great difficulty in clearing the streets, two charges being necessary in which the bayonet was freely used. But as soon as a charge was ended, the mob, which early in the afternoon numbered 5,000, would flow back against the line of steel like a wave of the sea and again begin to hoot and throw stones. When the workmen had been taken away and the troops were returning to their quarters at the works, another vengeful rally was made upon company E.

Beat a Soldier into Insensibility.

Again a charge was made and cold steel was driven home so hard that many of the rioters had to be helped away. At this time some one sent in a general alarm to the police station, and every patrol wagon was soon dashing through the streets, causing the wildest rumors among the thousands on their way home from work. There was no need of the police reinforcements, and the crowd, which had been swelled to 15,000, began to melt away. It looked as if the trouble was ended, but at 7 o'clock an assault was made upon a soldier who was passing along Wilson avenue. He fought desperately, as did also a policeman who hurried to his aid. A squad of troops came to their rescue, but not before the officer had been beaten into insensibility. Again the patrol wagons rushed to the scene and had all they could do to force a passage through the angry mob. Repeated outbreaks occurred throughout the night, and more trouble is expected this evening.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

Their Attitude Toward the Chicago Ticket To Be Left to the State Convention.

New York, July 18.—The conference of democratic leaders at the office of ex-Gov. Flower last evening was participated in by Senator Hill, State Chairman Hinkley, ex-Gov. Flower, ex-Lieut.-Gov. Sheehan, and ex-police commissioner James W. Martin, chairman of the executive committee of Tammany Hall. Strict secrecy was enjoined, but a little of the proceedings leaked out. The whole political situation was gone over, and the best possible methods of procedure discussed. It was finally agreed that an early meeting of the state committee should be held, and Chairman Hinkley was asked to issue a call at once. The attitude of the democracy of the state of New York in the coming campaign will be left to the state convention to decide. Senator Hill has decided to remain silent, it is said, until the convention meets.

Last Year's Immigration.

Washington, July 18.—A statement prepared by the commissioner of immigration shows the number of immigrants who arrived in this country during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1896, to have been 343,267, as compared with 258,536 during the fiscal year 1895. Of the whole number 212,466 were males and 130,801 females. The countries from which the immigrants came are given as follows: Austria-Hungary, 65,103; Italy, 68,060; Russia, 52,136; Germany, 31,885; United Kingdom, 64,637; all other countries, 61,446.

Wound Up in a Row.

Lancaster, Pa., July 18.—The game between Hartford and Lancaster yesterday afternoon ended in an exciting dispute in the ninth inning over a decision of Umpire Hoagland. There was an exciting row and the players swarmed around the umpire in menacing style. Hoagland refused to reverse his decision and finally walked off the field and went to his hotel, followed by the jeers of the crowd. Hartford refused to resume play without an official umpire.

Victory for the American Canoe "Yankee."

London, July 18.—The canoe Yankee, owned by W. W. Howard of New York, a well known newspaper man and canoeist, took part yesterday in the regatta of the Royal Canoe club. The American boat won the club's fifty-guinea challenge cup, beating her English competitors twenty-eight minutes and nine seconds over a ten-mile course.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, July 18.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $93,871,216. Yesterday's withdrawals were $2,333,100, of which $1,000,000 were for export.

SATURDAY, July 18. Sun rises 4:38 a. m., sets 7:32 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:32 p. m. and 3:38 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Theo. Miller, of White House, has purchased a wheel of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

A. L. C. Marsh, of Sandford avenue, has just purchased a Triumph wheel from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The salesrooms of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company will close hereafter in the evening at 9 o'clock sharp on all week days except Saturday.

Samuel P. McGinnis and James Curtis, of New York, and S. Clinton Crane, of East Second street, leave this evening to ride to Asbury Park to spend Sunday.

Thomas A. Cuming, of Putnam avenue, met with a serious fall Thursday evening while riding on West Front street. He was riding quite rapidly when his foot slipped and was caught between the pedal crank and frame, throwing him with great force. A passerby assisted him to the sidewalk and waited until he recovered sufficiently to start for home.

A bicycle brake recently invented by a New York man operates on the rim of the wheel instead of on the tires, as do most other brakes. The brake is simllar to the foot brake in general use, except that pressure on the foot rest bring into play two rollers, one on each side of the wheel, which press up against the wooden rim, affording, it is claimed, much greater power than the brakes that press against the tires, besides in no way damaging to the wheel.

As was told in The Daily Press sometime ago, A. W. W. Evans, of New Brunswick, will soon attempt to lower the State 24-hour record for the road, and hopes to cover 400 miles in the required time. He has selected next Friday as the day for his trial and will then make his attempt on the roads between New Brunswick and Elizabeth, passing through this city. The distance from New Brunswick to Elizabeth and return is 50 miles. He will start at 6 o'clock in the morning and will not be paced.

The suspension of C. M. Hadfield, of Newark, from competition on the track pending an investigation into his amateur status is accepted by amateur racing men as an indication that the suspension of other well-known riders will follow in a few days. Chairman Gideon, of the Racing Board of the L. A. W., has had some of the leading amateur riders under investigation for some months, and seeming tardiness in making any suspensions is alleged to be due to his desire not to detract from any of the race meets held on July 4th. An official of the league intimated yesterday that the suspension of F. F. Goodman, of the Riverside Wheelmen, is expected this week, and that a dozen other well-known riders, who are now masquerading as amateurs, will be called upon to prove that they are abiding by the rules.

LAWN TENNIS.

The handicap tennis tournament at the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club begins this afternoon. Owing to the large number of entries, fourteen, it was deemed unadvisable to make it a Nahasttor "Round Robin" tournament as it would necessitate nearly a hundred matches, which would take too much time, so it was decided to hold a tournament on the regular plan.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Gormans, a baseball nine of the colored men of this city, met the colored champions of Trenton on the Y. M. C. A. diamond this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

GOLF.

A team from the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club went to New Brunswick today to play a match with a team from the New Brunswick Golf Club.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

At the Driving Park this afternoon W. E. Brock's pacer gave an exhibition of speed.

Charles Place, a graduate of the Philadelphia Pharmaceutical College, has secured a position with Shaw, the druggist.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Edward French, of West Seventh street, is enjoying a vacation.

Mrs. Ferris, of Hoboken, has returned home after a few days visit in town.

Mrs. Angleman, of Marconnier, has returned home after a few days visit in town.

R. B. Schermerhorn, of New Hope, Pa., is visiting his brother, C. H. Schermerhorn, of Madison avenue.

Miss Ojers, of Oak Park, Ill., who has been visiting Miss Saydee Douglass, of Sycamore avenue, has returned to her home.

George Vroom, Jr., of Washington, will arrive in town tomorrow morning and spend a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Vroom, of Somerset street.

Chief T. O. Doane is in Philadelphia today attending the funeral of his cousin, John Bagot, whose death occurred Wednesday very suddenly. Mr. Doane will return tomorrow.

The Misses Edith DuBois, Bertha Swackhamer and Lottie Coriell and Messrs. O. A. Campbell and W. Gordan Williams drove over to Boynton Beach yesterday and spent the afternoon.

—During the summer months the services in St. Mary's church on Sundays are held at the usual hours, with the exception that the 10:30 service is a low mass.

—Rev. George Bowers, the singing evangelist, assisted by his son and daughter, will be at Reform Hall and lead the Volunteers Meetings in the afternosn at 2:30 and evening at 8 o'clock tomorrow.

—Sheridan Jones, colored, was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning for being beastly drunk yesterday. Jones is trying to find someone who will loan him $5 to pay his fine but he is likely to spend the twenty days in jail instead.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

A strict account kept by a dairyman who grew upon his farm all the food consumed by cows showed that a pound of butter costs 13 cents. This is varied, however, according to the breed used.

Farmers cannot afford to experiment, except incidentally, on a small scale. The experiment stations were instituted to make a business of experimenting, and they are doing a good work.

The Ohio station has made several attempts to get a setting of crimson clover, but all have failed. It seems not able to germinate in the hot, dry August of Ohio, nor to stand the severe winters there.

Manure lasts longer than fertilizers, but it is because the plants derive the use of but a portion of the manure annually, as it dissolves slowly and only as it decomposes. For immediate results fertilizers are much better than manure.

Some dairymen declare that "sunshine has a great deal to do with the fullest flow of milk; also, with its quality." One man gives each cow of his herd an extra quart of meal night and morning in cloudy weather in order to satisfy his customers. This experience is a significant one, and ought to be effective against dark stables.

LITTLE ODDS AND ENDS

In 1891 this country imported 84,000 gallons of vermouth, and it is estimated this year the amount will be 225,000 gallons. As vermouth is used in the manufacture of a certain kind of cocktail it would seem that the cocktail habit is growing.

ECHO FROM WASHINGTON

LOCAL ENDEAVORERS HEAR FROM THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

E. E. Anthony Tells in an Interesting Way of the Various Phases of Work Indulged in at That Time.

An echo meeting of the great Christian Endeavor Convention recently held in Washington, which permeated the lives and homes of thousands, was held in Trinity Reformed church last evening, and the congregation present seemed to catch the inspiration of the late notable gathering. After the singing of two selections from Gospel Hymns, the pastor conducted the responsive Scripture reading, which was the Twenty-fourth Psalm. William Crawford, of the Church Society of Christian Endeavor, then read the Scripture selection, Gospel of John, 17th chapter from the 18th to the 23d verses. This was followed with prayer by the pastor, and the singing of a hymn by the congregation. The quartette, Mrs. H. E. Rider, soprano; Miss Lizzie Dunn, alto; Robert Clark, tenor; and John Steiner, basso, rendered a beautiful anthem with a solo part by Mrs. Rider, while the offering was being taken.

Rev. Mr. Schenck then stated the object of the meeting, which was to listen to a report from E. E. Anthony, of the Christian Endeavor Society. After Mr. Anthony offered a brief prayer, he spoke in part as follows:

"It is very hard for me to tell in a half hour what transpired in several days, or to select the best from such a feast of good things. There were about 300 meetings a day and the most number anyone could attend was forty, between the hours of 6 o'clock in the morning and 11 o'clock at night. We left here Tuesday, July 7th, and the minute we entered the train we seemed to feel the spirit of the Convention The first one to greet us was our State President, Rev. Clement French, of Newark. Six hours soon passed and we were at the Nation's capital and soon settled in the hotel at Washington. We arrived twenty-four hours ahead of the time for the great convention to open. Wednesday morning we attended a sunrise prayer meeting. The weather was against us, but everything else was favorable. Nothing could quench the spirit of the New Jersey delegation. During the convention there was only one of our number who missed but one meeting and that was owing to illness. I met the evangelistic committee and was assigned my work. Wednesday evening the services commenced. Our State president, Dr. French, delivered an address which was a marvel. His subject, 'The Deeping Spiritual Life' seemed to be the keynote of the whole convention. He held the attention of his audience as though there was only one person present. The Spirit of the Lord worked mightily. Dr. French opened his address by quoting the following from Lyman Beecher: 'Not philosophy, theology nor controversy, but saving souls should be our aim in life.' He then went on to say that there should be able preachers in the pulpit, also consecrated people in the church and society. Continuing, Mr. Anthony spoke of an amusing incident in regard to the New Jersey delegation. The colors of this state are orange and black, and during the convention a pure black cat entered the building. Immediately a young woman tied an orange colored ribbon about the cat's neck. It was then known as the New Jersey cat. We wanted to bring the cat home, but the Washington people could not spare it. There were twelve of us who attended the meetings together, and we were known as Dr. French's body guard. The Government officials by vote gave us the whole city for the convention, and we were allowed to hold meetings anywhere, providing we left enough room for people to pass. Father Clark's annual address was partly on the 'Platform.' He said that the political party which had assembled at St. Louis had adopted a platform, and that while he was speaking one was being adopted at Chicago, and he saw no reason why the people assembled at Washington should not have a platform. Mr. Anthony stated that during the year 218,000 persons had been converted, making a total number of 500,000 for the past six years. The banner which was held by England last year, was this year won by Scotland. At the church rally, there was evidenced Christian fellowship, and we told the Jersey delegation something regarding our '96 convention to be held next October. Thursday evening the meetings were devoted to Christian Citizenship,' and three re-

NO WORD FROM FRANK.

A PLAINFIELD CARPENTER'S ABSENCE FOR FOUR WEEKS UNEXPLAINED.

John J. Frank Disappears From his Wife and Children, Carrying With Him Their Savings of $300—Foul Play Suspected

The mysterious disappearance of John J. Frank, a carpenter, of 325 Dunham place, which occurred four weeks ago yesterday morning, has assumed a serious aspect from the fact that nothing can be learned regarding him.

Saturday night, June 27th, Mr. Frank went home after spending the evening around town. He and his wife retired together at a late hour. Nothing unusual had transpired that would break the usual harmony and affection of the two. When Mrs. Frank awoke the next morning she learned that her husband was missing, and she at once began to worry about him as she could give no reason for his sudden flight. A few days later Mrs. Frank received a telegram from Chicago stating that "John arrived safely." This Mrs. Frank says did not come from her husband, because it lacked the customary salutation of "Laura," her first name. When her husband went away he took $300 with him, and Mrs. Frank thinks that her husband has been waylaid and robbed or killed.

She informed Chief Grant regarding the disappearance and he sent a telegram and a picture of the missing man to Chicago, asking the police to look out for Mr. Frank. Chief Grant thinks that in case the man was taken ill and was taken to a hospital, there may he chances of hearing from him through this source.

Mrs. Frank says that she and her husband have lived happily together for many years and nothing has entered their lives to cause a breach. She is utterly unable to account for her husband's absence.

She has two children to care for and her husband left her no money, as he took their savings when he disappeared.

Just what Mrs. Frank and her children will do is at present hard to tell.

Those who know Mr. Frank say that he is an industrious man and his recent actions cannot be accounted for. He never had difficulty in securing work and was generally busy.

The police in the large cities have been notified to be on the lookout for him.

TROUBLE OVER A GROWLING DOG.

George Shay Intended to Kill the Canine and Threatened Its Owner.

On complaint of Mary McDermitt, of Terrill road and South avenue, Justice Newcorn issued a warrant yesterday for the arrest of George Shay, of Fanwood. The complaint charges that on July 6th Shay came the plaintiff's place with a gun for the purpose of killing an objectionable dog, but she protested against the shooting, and he therewith placed the muzzle of the gun to her head and threatened to kill her. Mr. and Mrs. George Brick, brother-in-law and sister of Shay, took the latter's part and a neighbors quarrel ensued.

Justice Newcorn issued peace warrants for Mr. and Mrs. Brick who will appear this evening for a hearing. Shay was also held to appear at the same time. Shay is the man who was associated with Wallace, also of Fanwood. The two have caused the authorities considerable trouble. It was only recently that Wallace was arrested for attempting to wreck a train at the Fanwood cut on the Central Railroad.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

Summons have been issued by Justice Newcorn in the following cases: Cushman et als against Jersey Wheel Co., returnable July 24th; Waldron against Totten, Linke against Evans, Blumgren against Dyssen, returnable July 27th; Hand against Rockfellow, adjourned two weeks. The case of Hand against Bailey was tried and judgment rendered for the plaintiff.

Station Platform on Fire.

The platform of the Netherwood station caught fire Saturday morning from a passing locomotive. Patrolman Fraleigh was on duty in the vicinity, saw the flames and extinguished them before they had destroyed much of the platform.

Arrived on a Freight Car.

On top of a freight car, dead drunk, John Doherty, of Philadelphia, made his entrance into Plainfield early Sunday morning. Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson arrested him. He was given twenty days at Elizabeth.

—Patrolman Saunders captured a colored man Saturday on West Front street in a complete state of drunkenness and locked him up. He came up for trial this morning befor Judge DeMeza and paid a three dollar fine.

MANUFACTURING TOWN.

LAND BOUGHT BETWEEN DUNELLEN AND BOUND BROOK.

Silas D. Drake the Active Principal at the Head of the Movement—A. D. Thompson, of this City, Elected President

The New Jersey Mutual Realty Company was incorporated on Saturday with the following officers: President, A. D. Thompson; first vice-president, Sylvanus Ayers; second vice-president, Peter Egenolf; treasurer, P. H. Oakley; secretary and manager, S. D. Drake. The company has secured 200 acres of land between Cedar Lane and the Greenbrook tanks, on the lines of the Central and Lehigh Valley Railroads, above Dunellen, and contemplate building a new manufacturing town. Already negotiations are being made with five large manufacturing plants to locate on this property. As this mile frontage offers unsurpassed facilities for manufacturers, the company contemplates offering small investors an opportunity of buying stock in this company in shares of $100 each, thus enabling them to share in the profits of this enterprise. In a short time a limited amount of stock will be offered for sale by the First National Banks of this city and Bound Brook. The fact that the new telford county road runs in the rear of this site, also the opening of the boulevard from Dunellen to Bound Brook, with the trolley line on the same, is the best evidence as to what the profits of this enterprise will be. Already prospective purchasers have placed orders for lots in this new town, and considerable stock has been subscribed for by conserative investors. This new enterprise being near Plainfield, will be of great and incalcuable benefit to this city. Mr. Drake, the active principal, has promised great things with the opening up of this new town.

WASHINGTON PARK ATHLETES.

The Boys of the Park Hold an Athletic Meet.

The junior athletes of Washington Park held a great athletic meet on the smooth avenues of the Park Saturday afternoon. The running and bicycle events were held on the road, and the field events on the lawn in the rear of the residence of W. J. Roome, of Sycamore avenue.

The contests were all exciting and quite creditable for the boys, especially Fred Overton's standing broad jump of 7 feet, 2 inches, and Harry Curtis' high jump of 4 feet, 7 inches. Charles Dupee and Wilbur F. Cornwell shared the duties of referee. The follwing were the contests and winners:

One hundred-yard dash—First heat, won by Howard Roome, 10 yards; Herbert Cathcart, 9 yards, second; Donald McGee, 8 yards, third. Second heat, won by George Dupee, 8 yards; Fred Overton, 1 yard, second; H. Powers, 13 yards, third. Final heat, won by Roome; Cathcart second; Dupee third.

Putting the shot—Won by Harry Curtis, scratch; Fred Overton, 5 feet, second; Robert Tilney, 4 feet, third. Distance, 24 feet, 8½ inches.

Standing broad jump — Won by Fred Overton, 3 inches; Will Roome, 11 inches, second; Harry Curtis, scratch, third. Actual jump of winner 7 feet, 2 inches.

Two hundred and twenty-yards dash—Won by Harry Curtis, scratch; Herbert Carhart, 12 yards, second. Time, 28 seconds.

Running high jump—Won by Harry Curtis, scratch; Robert Tilney, 9 inches, second; Herbert Cartcart, 9 inches, third. Height, 4 feet, 7 inches.

Pole vault—Won by Robert Tilney, scratch; Howard Roome, 6 inches, second; Arthur Peck, 6 inches and Peter Emmons, 10 inches, tied for third place. Height, 6 feet, 4 inches.

One-mile bicycle race—Won by Donald A. McGee, 125 yards; Teddy Overton, 225 yards, second; George Evans, 225 yards, third. Time, 2:49 3 5.

Harry Curtis won the all round championship of the meet.

Funeral of S. P. Mulford.

The funeral services of the late Samuel P. Mulford, were held yesterday afternoon at the home of his father, E. C. Mulford of East Fifth street. Only the near relatives and and friends were present. Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. Whitney. The floral tributes were numerous and very large and handsome. The pall bearers were J. A. Smith, John Lewis, F. A. Pope, S. P. T. Wilbur, Dr. L. S. Pocock and J. Hervey Doane.

Charged With Assault.

Mrs. Ella Norman, a cook at Hotel Netherwood, appeared before Justice Mosher this morning and entered a complaint against Joseph E. Davis, charging him with assault and battery on her young son. Mr. Davis was arraigned before Justice Mosher, and for want of evidence the case was dismissed.

WEEPING ON HER WAY

A COLORED DAMSEL'S WAIL OF ANGUISH AT BEING ARRESTED.

Etta Field Came From Somerville to Visit Friends, But Indulged Too Freely in the Liquid That Befuddles.

The usual quiet of the rookery was disturbed this morning by sobs, cries and yells that issued from one of the cells in an uninterrupted stream.

"Oh, dry up there; you'll get out after awhile," growled one of the other prisoners, "give us some peace." But still the young colored woman in the cell continued her lamentations with renewed vigor.

The cause of all the racket was that she did not have $10 with which to pay her fine, and so Chief Grant said she would have to go down to Elizabeth. The young woman was Etta Field, and she came here from Somerville on a visit, but, instead of behaving, she partook too freely of this city's stimulants and began to act in a very improper manner on Madison avenue. This happened on Saturday evening.

Sergeant Kiely turned up at the right moment and assisted her to the lockup. This morning she was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. She counted on her sex to get her out of the scrape safely but she didn't quite understand Plainfield justice. With a "I-will-be-good-if-you'll-let-me-go" expression she appeared and pleaded guilty. The vulgarity of being brought to trial in a police court wounded her feelings considerably and she had a little quiet weep as the trial went on, but when the Judge pronounced sentence, "$10 or thirty days," words cannot express her anguish.

Some of her sympathizing Plainfield friends tried to raise the money for the fine but their crop did not turn out well and Etta continued to weep.

CHALLENGERS DEFEATED.

The Park Club Tennis Trophies Do Not Change Hands.

Since the Fourth, interest in tennis has taken a great leap forward at the Park Club. This is due, of course, to the offering of challenge trophies and the tennis committee should be commended for their judgment in so successfully arousing interest in this delightful summer sport.

Saturday morning the junior members played. Fred Overton and Will Roome successfully defended the junior Class A double championship in a match with Arthur Peck and William Townsend and defeated them by a score of 6-4, 6-4. In the singles of the same class, Will Roome defeated Fred Overton, 6-1, 6-2, retaining the trophy. He has a challenge for a match with Arthur Peck on Wednesday.

For the single Junior Class B championship, Morgan Townsend challenged Clarence Roome and Townsend was defeated by Roome, 6-1, 6-1. In the afternoon, the senior matches were played. Only the double championship was contested for, and Augustus Van Deventer and Samuel Townsend, the veteran holders of the championship, managed to hold it succesfully against two challenging teams. The first match was very close, Van Deventer and Townsend defeating Charles Dupee and Clarence Peck by a score of 6-5, 6-5. The other match was not as exciting, Van Deventer and Townsend winning from Percy Sandford and A. Willis West by a score of 6-2, 6-1.

Asa Collier Honored.

At the annual meeting of the National Retail Jewelers' Association, held at Atlantic City, last week, Asa Collier, of this city, was elected treasurer. Resolutions were adopted in favor of having a hall mark for goods, the quality being under national control. The convention also expressed itself in favor of using only goods of American manufacture, and of the jewelry trade being carried on only by legitimate retail jewelers. A resolution was adopted favoring one cent postage. The association condemned department stores, and also bargain counter jewelry.

Frozen Pipes in July.

Saturday afternoon a tub of cracked ice, containing salt, to be used in packing cream, was sent from Tier's Lake House to the Park avenue store. Instead of being used for the purpose stated, the ice and salt was put in the top of his soda-water fountain by one of his employes. A short time thereafter a customer called for a glass of soda, but the water wouldn't run out of the pipe. Will Tier soon ascertained the cause and taking out the salted ice he threw cold water on the pipes and thawed them out.

FIBBED AND RAN AWAY

KITTIE THORNTON COULDN'T FOOL HER AUNT WITH A FALSEHOOD.

Had Been Working for Mrs. Adams, the Milliner—Gave up Her Position Unbeknown to Her Aunt, Mrs. Totten.

After deceiving her aunt for nearly a month, seventeen-year-old Kittie Thornton fled from the consequences of her deception and has been missing since last Wednesday morning.

Four years ago Mrs. James Totten, wife of Patrolman Totten, took her sister's child, Kittie, home with her on the death of the mother and father of the child. Since then Kittie Thornton has been living with the Tottens, first at their home on Manson place, and later at their new home at 614 Division street.

Kittie entered Mrs Adams' millinery store on East Front street near Park avenue to learn the trade. She got along pretty well until the Fourth, when she left. Evidently she did not want her aunt to know about it, for she left ostensibly for work every morning, returning to lunch and dinner on time. Instead of going to work she went to the home of a friend on Manson place, and said that she was to spend her vacation there.

Last Tuesday, she came home saying that Mrs. Adams had gone away and that she was on her vacation. Wednesday morning she accompanied Mrs. Totten to Dr. Thiers and while her aunt was there, she said that she was going to Mrs. Adams' store to get her silver thimble that Mrs. Totten had been inquiring after. Mrs. Totten made an appointment with the dentist and then walked down town to meet her niece.

They met on West Front street in front of White's store. Kittie said that she could not find her thimble, but that Mrs. Adams had returned with a new stock of hats and that she would have to go to work again. Mrs. Totten said that was not right when her vacation had just begun and suggested a call on Mrs. Adams. Kittie refused and Mrs. Totten insisted. At last Kittie exclaimed, "I won't go back to the store with you, Aunt Kittie, I have been telling you lies," and then she went on to explain. "Very well, Kitty, I will attend to you later," said Mrs. Totten and then she went to see Mrs. Adams, while Kittie promised to wait for her at the corner of North and Park avenues, but when Mrs. Totten returned, Kittie was gone and nothing more has been seen of her.

Mrs. Totten was seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning and told the circumstances of the disappearance of her niece. She said that she had had implicit confidence in her neice and was greatly surprised and worried over her sudden departure. She will be very glad of any information regarding the whereabouts of her neice. She described the appearance of her neice when she last saw her as follows: Five feet, two inches in height, slender, dark brown hair in braid, rather good looking, grey eyes, wore glasses, good complexion, did not look over fourteen, dark blue sailor hat and striped lawn dress.

Kittie was a quiet girl and her aunt does not think she has gotten into bad company.

DOWNED A CRACK TEAM.

ELIZABETH ATHLETIC CLUB DEFEATED BY THE Y. M. C. A. TEAM.

Many Errors in the Early Part of the Game, but the Plainfield Boys Won Out in Great Shape at the End.

"If our team cannot beat them kids, they ought never to play another game." This was the remark passed by an Elizabeth crank at the ball game in that city Saturday afternoon between the Y. M. C. A. team and the Elizabeth Athletic club team. But the kids won the game and the E. A. C. will probably keep on playing. In many respects the game was a most peculiar one. The home team went to the bat first and secured a run. This set the cranks wild and they anticipated a walkover, but when their opponents made five runs in the first inning, their enthusiasm took a drop until in the next inning when five runs were secured by the E. A. C. In the next inning the visitors took one run and in the sixth they tallied six more, while the E. A. C. had to be satisfied with getting only three more runs during the game. In the seventh inning the Y. M. C. A. team placed three additional runs to the score, making a total of fifteen to eight for their opponents. Sheridan pitched three innings for the E. A. C., but a change was thought advisable and Noonan was taken from third base and put in the box while Sheridan went into right field and Kellam held down third base.

The forepart of the game was full of errors and the crowd grunted and groaned because of it. The Plainfield boys made thirteen errors in all while the home team made 2, but then the former hit the ball hard and often. After the third inning both sides were held down and better playing resulted. McLaughlin made a two bagger and a single, while Schenck secured three base hits. Dennis also got a two base hit. Major knocked out three singles, Symons two and Enright one. The latter played in this city a week ago with the Raritans, when his playing attracted so much favorable attention.

He put up a good game Saturday, although he had no opportunity to distinguish himself. Cory knocked out a single, but in the field he seemed to have an off day. The whole team went into win, however, and in that they succeeded, much to the chagrin of the famous E. A. C. During the game Fredericks, the catcher, was hit several times with the ball and on one occasion he was knocked out for a few minutes but pluckily resumed play. The E. A. C. team is composed of good players and they fight fair and honestly for supremacy. The contest was an enjoyable one in many respects and those present cheered lustily for their favorites. It was a good-natured crowd present and though the game was a little long the spectators were patient and the majority remained till the finish. If the E. A. C. ever come to Plainfield they will find a cordial reception awaiting them. Burt pitdhed as usual a fine game, and though he only struck out one man he held his opponents down and fielded his position in great shape. Below is the scere in full:

POPULISTS DIVIDED

Sentiment for Bryan at St. Louis Very Strong To-day.

OPPOSITION NOW TALK OF BOLTING

Two Causes for Their Antagonism—First, It Would Obliterate Their Party, They Say, and, Second, the Fear That Democrats Would Not Act Fair.

St. Louis, July 20.—The situation this morning is Bryan and anti-Bryan, or more strictly speaking, Bryan against some member of the populist party yet to be named. Not more than 300 of the 1,300 delegates to the populist convention have arrived and these are individual members who constitute the advance guard of a number of delegations from the south and west. It is yet too early to predict with reasonable certainty what decision the convention may reach, but from the surface indications it would appear that the sentiment for Bryan will be very strong, if, indeed, his friends be not in a majority when the roll is called. The leaders, so far as they have arrived, are divided in their preference. Some are enthusiastic in his support. Among these are Gen. J. B. Weaver of Iowa, who made the race for the presidency on the populist ticket four years ago. Others, and among these are Mr. Taubeneck, the chairman of the national committee, impatiently repudiate the suggestion of Mr. Bryan's name and assert that his nomination would fall like a wet blanket upon the party.

Talk of a Bolt.

There was talk to-day of a bolt if Bryan be nominated. Bolting, or what is tantamount to bolting, has become the fashion in this campaign, and the populist leaders who oppose Bryan would discuss the probabilitity with more indifference perhaps but for the object lesson presented to them by the republican and democratic conventions. Whom they would select in these circumstances they do not say. They have not gone so far as to consider the question. They do not hesitate to say, however, that a bolt would lose to the silverites the electoral votes of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Florida, and certainly result in the election of McKidley. There is but one thing the anti-Bryan men fear—that is a possibility that some one may make a ringing speech full of apt allusions to the "Boy Orator of the Platte" and his long devotion to silver that may sweep the convention off of its feet and bring about his nomination in a whirlwind of enthusiasm. In such an event the list of malcontents might be so reduced as to make a bolt impossible, but this is not expected.

Cause of Opposition to Bryan.

The opposition to Bryan springs from two causes. The first cause is the complete obliteration of the party, which, it is claimed, would follow his nomination, and the second is a distrust in some quarters that the democrats would not act fairly with them in division of the electoral vote. Those who entertain this latter view are southern populists who claim to have been "counted out" by their democratic opponents when they have carried state and congressional elections and who fear that a repetition of such methods would be practiced again this year if McKinley fails to secure a majority of the electoral vote. The northern and western men entertain no such fear. Those from that part of the country who oppose Bryan do so because they believe that the party would be swallowed up in the greater prestige and prominence of the democratic party. They do not like the impression to go out that they have no men within their ranks of sufficient ability to carry their standard to victory.

Converted to Protectionists.

It is a curious fact that some of the southern populists have been converted from free traders to extreme protectionists through their affiliations of late years with the republicans. While some of these men place silver above the tariff as a national issue there are others who are unwilling to give their support to a tariff reformer, but say as between the two they would prefer McKinley. Generally speaking, however, the delegates care nothing for the tariff. With them the all-absorbing question is more money—more silver money. To secure this they will make any sacrifice and go to any extreme.

Big Carpet and Plush Mills Close.

Philadelphia, July 20.—For the first time in many years the entire establishment, excepting one department, of John & James Dobson, manufacturers of carpets and plush goods stopped work last Saturday owing to the lack of orders. Some 1,500 hands are thrown out of employment. The mills have been running on short time for quite a while. When running full time the mills employ 5,000 hands.

China Prefers an American Bank.

Pekin, July 20.—The petitions of the governments of Russia and Germany for the privilege of establishing banks in Pekin for the purpose of transacting Russian and German government business have been refused by the Chinese government. China is conducting negotiations with the United States with a view to the establishment of an American bank in Pekin.

Bolts the Chicago Platform.

Waterbury, Conn., July 20.—Emmet P. Riordan, a democrat town committeeman, has submitted his resignation. He says he cannot support the Chicago platform on account of the silver plank and that he will vote for McKinley. The Waterbury Sunday Herald, independent, announces that it will support the republican nominee.

M'KINLEY'S PLANS

Will Visit Cleveland for a Few Days This Week.

HE IS ANXIOUS TO REMAIN QUIET

Will Probably Spend the Greater Part of the Time Until Election Day at His Home in Canton—Opposed To Taking the Stump.

Canton, O., July 20.—The first time since his nomination for the presidency Major McKinley will this week leave Canton and his own home. The pressure upon him to visit other cities for the purpose of making speeches and participating in celebrations of various sorts, has been persistent and strong. Fifty towns wanted Major McKinley on the 4th of July and if he had given heed to half the requests which poured in upon him he would have had scarcely an hour at home since the St. Louis convention. To-day Major McKinley expects to go to Cleveland and it is not probable that he will return to Canton before Thursday afternoon. His promise to go to Cleveland to take part in the centennial exercises is of long standing and the occasion is one of dignity and importance, the purpose of it being to observe in a fitting way the one hundredth anniversary of the settlement of the western reserve. Wednesday is Founders' Day, and on that day the formal inauguration ceremonies occur. Major McKinley has not been to Cleveland to remain longer than a few hours for some weeks and he feels that he ought to spend a few days among his host of ardent friends in that city.

Averse to Taking the Stump.

There will be a great many people in Cleveland, too, this week from all parts of the country, and Major McKinley will want to talk to some of them on matters relating to the campaign and its conduct. He leaves the details to Mr. Hanna and the committee, in all of whom he has great confidence, but no important step is taken without his advice and consent. After participating in the public functions of Founders' Day at Cleveland, Major McKinley will go to Alliance on the day following to spend a few hours at Mount Union college. This will finish his little tour, and he will be in Canton that night, where he will doubtless remain until he goes to the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Minneopolis in September. He may run up to Cleveland occasionally, but it will be for a single night or a few hours only. He does not propose, if he can help it, to be turned from his purpose of spending the time between now and election at his own home. He is still averse to taking the stump, and thinks that there will be no occasion for him to do so.

List of Campaign Orators.

Among those who are expected to speak during the campaign for McKinley are ex-President Harrison, senator J. D. Foraker, Thomas B. Reed, Senator Thurston, Charles Emory Smith, Henry Cabot Lodge, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, J. P. Dolliver, Senator Sherman, Gov. Hastings and Chauncey M. Depew. Already these men have received letters from scores of cities and committees asking them to make speeches, but it is likely that when the national committee gets to work in its headquarters all arrangement for meetings will be made through the medium of its speakers' bureau. Several committees have been to see ex-President Harrison and a number have called upon Senator Foraker. It is understood that Senator Sherman has promised to go to the Pacific slope and that Gen. Harrison will make a tour through some of the western states.

Wisconsin Gold Delegates.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 20.—Gen. Edward S. Bragg, Senator Vilas, James J. Hogan and James G. Flanders, the delegates-at-large from this state to the Chicago convention, held a conference and issued a declaration explaining the action of the delegation in not voting in the convention. As a result of the meeting it is certain that the gold democrats of Wisconsin will put a ticket in the field in the state election, regardless of the bolters in other states. Gen. Bragg is about the only one of the leaders who still believes that the gold men of the state will be able to control the democratic state convention to be held September 5.

Mrs. Booth-Tucker's Condition.

New York, July 20.—Mrs. Booth Tucker, wife of the commander of the Salvation army, who was seriously injured by being struck and knocked down by a bicycle in front of her home in Orange, N. J., some time ago, is still so ill that she has cancelled all engagements to speak and will not be able to attend to business or to conduct any of the exercises of the Salvation army for at least three or four weeks.

Fatal Chicago Fire.

Chicago, July 20.—It has been learned that three persons lost their lives in the fire which destroyed the barns of the Chicago City Railway company Saturday night, Frank Crosby, tow boy; W. L. Elwell, driver, and Patrick Marlin, conductor. The bodies were found in the ruins.

Vanderbilt Continues To Improve.

New York, July 20.—The condition of Cornelius Vanderbilt, the millionaire railroad magnate who was stricken with paralysis on the right side on Thursday last, continues to improve. The cool weather is proving beneficial to the sufferer.

Populist Nominated for Congress.

Mexico, Mo., July 20.—The ninth congressional district populists have nominated S. O. Sims of Andrain county for congress.

BIG VICTORY FOR INSURGENTS.

Spanish Troops Led into a Trap and Many Are Killed.

New York, July 20.—A Herald special from Key West, Fla., says: The Spaniards, under Gen. Suarez Inclan, have sustained a crushing defeat at the hands of the insurgents, under Antonio Maceo, according to advices received by the Cuban revolutionary leaders in this city. Not only was Inclan's column defeated with heavy loss, but the Cuban leaders are informed that it is currently reported in Havana that the Spanish general himself was captured and is now held as a prisoner by Maceo. The battle is said to have occurred on July 15, near Maceo's stronghold in the province of Pinar del Rio. For the last two weeks the insurgents have been very aggressive and small parties have repeatedly attacked the trocha, causing the Spaniards much annoyance. Gen. Inclan was ordered to drive back these detached bands of insurgents and for this purpose took with him two thousand men.

Led into a Death Trap.

Maceo seems to have expected such a movement, and arranged to ambush the Spaniards. The Spaniards followed the insurgent skirmishers incautiously and fell into the ambush. Then the Cubans opened fire from all sides, which threw the Spaniards into confusion. While the Spaniards were thus disordered the Cubans charged, completely routing their foes. Gen. Inclan made a desperate effort to rally his demoralized forces, but was surrounded by the Cubans and compelled to surrender. It is said in Havana, according to the revolutionists here, that the Spaniards were pursued almost to the trocha, and lost more than 500 men killed and wounded. There were fourteen officers among the killed. Cubans here also say that Maceo will hold Inclan as a hostage to save the lives of prominent insurgent officers who have been captured by the Spaniards.

Report Given Out by the Government.

Havana, July 20.—According to a report furnished by Gen. Bernal, the troops under his command have achieved a victory over a rebel force at Varona, near Martinas, province of Pinar del Rio. The insurgent losses were forty-one killed and sixty wounded. The troops lost two killed and thirteen wounded. A party of insurgents wrecked a passenger train near Puerto Principe by exploding dynamite on the track. One soldier and one passenger were killed and four soldiers were wounded. A report reaches here that the insurgent leaders Enrique Collazo, Rego, Camaguey and Canxto Garcia were fired upon by rebels treacherously near Holguin, but escaped unhurt.

Is Your Blood Pure

Blood pure? Do not pass by this question with an evasive answer. It means much to your health, your happiness, your usefulness. If your blood is pure you will be strong, vigorous, full of life and ambition; your nerves will be steady. You will have little need to fear disease if your

Keep Up Your Scott's Emulsion in Summer-time

What are your resources for the summer? Have you an abundance of health stowed away for the long, hot, depleting days, or does summer find you low in vitality, run down, losing flesh, and weak? Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil will give you the proper reserve force, because it builds up the system on a solid foundation. A tonic may stimulate; Scott's Emulsion not only "boosts," it sustains.

It is a wise precaution always to have at least a small bottle of Scott's Emulsion in the house. Unopened, it will keep indefinitely. Tightly corked, after using, kept in a cool place, it will remain sweet for weeks.

VENEZUELAN CLAIM

Lawyer Storrow's Brief Expected To Contain a Sensation.

ENGLAND'S CONTENTIONS DEMOLISHED

Pollock, Salisbury and Other British Lawyers Handled Without Gloves—The Case Changed from One of Defense to Vigorous Aggression.

Washington, July 20.—Something of a sensation in the Venezuelan dispute is expected in a day or two, possibly this afternoon, when a report to the Pollock argument which prefaced the British Blue Book is delivered to the commission and made public simultaneously in this country and England. Up to this time the agents of the Caracas government have contented themselves with putting up evidence before the Venezuelan commission and pointing out the numerous inconsistencies and false deductions in the British case, but since the distinguished Boston lawyer, James J. Storrow, has become associated with Counsel Scruggs in Venezuela's behalf the case has been whipped into legal shape and a brief has been prepared which is understood to handle Lord Salisbury, Prof. Pollock and the other British lawyers and diplomats without gloves. It is said that Mr. Storrow has utterly demolished the vital points of the British contention, and turned Prof. Pollock's favorite arguments directly against Lord Salisbury's pretensions. In his few months' connection with the case, its entire conduct has been changed from one of defense to that of most vigorous aggression. It is said that Mr. Storrow was secured as associate counsel at the suggestion of Secretary Olney, whose classmate he was at Harvard law school. In addition to being the chief legal adviser of the Bell Telephone compony and other great corporations, Mr. Storrow has always been a deep student of international law and foreign affairs. His library includes one of the few complete sets in this country of the Royal Geographical society publications, and he was a participant on the winning side of the controversy between Dana and Lawrence twenty years ago over the charge of plagiarism in editing Wheaton's international law.

EDWARD S. EARLEY DEAD.

He Officiated as Undertaker at the Funeral of President Lincoln.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 20.—Edward S. Earley died yesterday at the summer residence of his daughter, Mrs. S. S. Miller, in Asbury Park. He was 74 years old. Mr. Earley was the oldest undertaker in Philadelphia and became fameus when he officiated at the funeral of President Lincoln. He also buried Bishop Simpson. The deceased patented the casket now in general use. He came here five weeks ago for the benefit of his health.

Catholic Summer School.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., July 20.—The second week of the Catholic summer school opened in a most auspicious manner. Pontifical high mass was celebrated at St. John's church, with Archbishop Fabre of Montreal as celebrant, Dr. Loughlin of Philadelphia, high assistant priest, Rev. Daniel J. O'Mahoney of Lawrence, Mass., and Rev. Joseph Wilmas of Syracuse, N. Y., deacons of honor; Rev. Daniel A. Morrissey of Philadelphia, deacon of mass; Rev. J. M. Flemming, Lawrence, Mass., sub-deacon; Rev. E. Provost, Montreal, and Dr. Conaty, Worcester, Mass., master of ceremonies. During the mass Bev. A. P. Doyle of New York delivered an able sermon on Christian unity.

Salvation Army Criticised.

New York, July 20.—Reports have reached here of differences between the various missionary societies in India and the Salvation Army at work in the same field. The matter has been taken up by the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, and the Salvation Army is severely criticised in the official organ of the board for the current month.

The Maher-Choynski Meeting.

San Francisco, July 20.—Peter Maher, the pugilist and his manager arrived in San Francisco from the east Saturday night. They were met by the officials of the National Athletic club and assured that the meeting between Maher and Choynski would surely be arranged. Maher will begin training immediately at Sancileto.

To Consider the Silver Question.

Budapesth, July 20.—The agricultural congress which will meet here on September 17 will discuss, at the request of the Hungarian government, the questions of the establishment of a silver currency, the desirability of an international agreement and the ratio of the metals.

Llewelling's Boom for Governor.

Wichita, Kas., July 20.—The Sedgwick county populists formally launched ex-Gov. Llewellings' gubernatorial boon Saturday in their delegation convention in suitable resolutions. An effort to secure an endorsement of Jerry Simpson for the congressional nominee was defeated.

Conditions are Favorable for Light Showers Tonight and Tuesday; Stationary Temperature.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 81 Degrees.

Without a sensation in public official circles New Brunswick would be lost—so regular has these affairs become a part of her municipal government. Just now it is a police scandal that is attracting attention.

The New York Mercury, which was established as a daily paper in 1892, and has had varying success until it was devoted exclusively to sporting news the last few months, will be rejuvenated as a Democratic free silver paper. The paper will be enlarged.

The approaching bicycle parade and trolley band concert should, to attain the success that its novelty merits, be distinguished by some unique features. To thoroughly enlist the enthusiasm of the cyclists there should be some characteristic element that will attract more attention than the ordinary rider pedaling along in the conventional way. The Press would suggest that a division be organized for decorated bicycles and fantastic costumes.

END OF A SOLDIER.

Funeral of the Late Aaron P. Sutton Held Yesterday.

The funeral services of the late Aaron P. Sutton were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 from the house on Liberty street. Major Anderson Post No. 109, G. A. R., of which Mr. Sutton was a member, a delegation from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and Women's Relief Corps No. 10, also a delegation from John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., were present, in addition to a very large number of relatives and friends. Many of the latter were contractors and builders.

An impressive solo was rendered by E. E. Runyon, after which Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes offered prayer. A few remarks were then offered by Rev. B. W. Hand, after which Dr. Barnes spoke at length regarding the departed. He spoke of him as a soldier, a Christian, husband and father, and many valuable truths were presented in a helpful manner. At the close another solo was rendered and Dr. Barnes offered prayer. Those present were then given an opportunity to view the remains.

The floral tributes consisted of a beautiful wreath, bearing the word "comrade" from Post 109, a handsome pillow with the inscription "S. of V. 28" from John Hand Camp, Sons of Veterans, and a sheaf of wheat. These rested on the casket around which an American flag was arranged.

At the grave the G. A. R. took charge of the service and Rev. L. E. Livermore and several of the post officers took part. The pallbearers from the post were Comrades Randolph, J. B. Clarkson, W. H. B. Drake, Edward Devine, Charles Randolph and Nathan Pennington. Interment was in the Methodist cemetery.

WHAT IS GOOD TO READ.

Various Sorts of Literature Discussed by Christian Endeavorers.

The subject, "Books and Reading," at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church last evening, was one that interested all and so the meeting was largely attended. It was led by Miss M. G. Morse.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich spoke on "Newspapers," and told of the dangers of newspaper reading and how to avoid them.

Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, talked on "Devotional Reading" and gave many helpful suggestions.

Miss Emma L. Adams, librarian of the Plainfield Public Library, gave a very interesting and practical talk on "Hints on Reading," dealing principally with the principle of the choice of books.

John V. Beekman spoke very pleasingly on "Bible Reading," after which an open parliament on "Books and Reading" was held in which a number took part. The meeting was a very successful one and greatly enjoyed by those who attended.

ANENT SPRAYING.

What is Needed is a Substance That Rain Will Not Destroy.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I have read with great interest the very timely article on the elm leaf beetle in Friday's issue and must agree with the writer signing himself "The Woodpecker." Spraying with arsenical solutions is all very well, and should not be neglected if we would rid our trees of these pests, but it alone is not sufficient. A healthy rain will wash all the poison off and the beetles will remain to continue their destructive work. Besides, the poisoned larvae are dangerous to the lives of our birds.

What is wanted is a substance that is unaffected by rain and heat and is at the same time harmless to the trees and birds that will catch the larvae as they crawl down the trunks of the trees at day time or at night.

Such an article has been in use in Germany for many years and is known there as "Ermisch's Raupenleim," introduced in this country as "Ermisch's Caterpillar Lime," (Owl Trident Brand) and is used annually by the German Government, Forestry Departments, Municipalities, orchardists and others by the thousands of tons as the standard remedy against just such crawling insects as the larvae of the elm leaf beetle, the tussock moth and other similar pests that defoliate our trees and are a nuisance to all passers by.

It is applied in a band about 4 to 6 inches around the trunks of the trees by means of a paddle or stiff brush and it retains its stickiness a long time.

No larvae or caterpillar can cross such a band properly applied and if our elms were so banded it would prove an effective assistance in the endeavor to destroy the elm tree beetle.

Respectfully,
A. M. Griffen.

markable addresses were delivered on 'Temperance' and 'Principles of Government.' On Friday we listened with pleasure to Miss Kate House, of St. Louis. Her talk was principally on junior work, and she believed in holding the junior meeting all the year round. Owing to illness, Dr. Cuyler was unable to be present, and President Whitcomb, of Columbia University, took his place. The latter said that there was a hole in the programme, and the people had their choice between him and the hole. President Whitcomb delivered a powerful address on 'God Dwelling In Us.' At this time Mr. Anthony asked the quartette to sing the hymn 'Send Out the Light.' He said that the hymn was sang in the street cars, on the streets and in fact everywhere in Washington. The hymn was impressively rendered by the quartette. In closing, Mr. Anthony spoke of Dr. Chapman's wonderful address before the convention on the "Holy Spirit." His text was divided into three parts "Necessity of Baptism," "Describing Baptism" and "Special Blessings." He urged that all should get special blessings for their work and that they should be baptized by the Holy Spirit. Mr. Anthony continuing said, why wait till '96 to get a blessing when you can have it now. The consecration hymn "I Live for Him" was sung at this time and upon the speakers request fully two-thirds of those present arose for consecration. It was an impressiue moment and one that was deeply felt by all. After the singing of the remaining verses Rev. C. Schenck pronounced the benediction. Mr. Anthony announced that the report would be continued this evening at the Christian Endeavor society meeting and as he had many interesting things yet to say he hoped that there would be a large attendance.

Mr. Anthony related a little personal experience which was very impressive. He said that previous to going to the convention he had a heavy heart. Nothing seemed to go right at his office, but after reaching the convention his experience changed and ever since he has been filled with the Holy Spirit, and every day at his office it ssemed as though the Lord was by his side talking to him and helping him constantly. He hoped that he would always feel the Holy Spirit's power as he does at present. This incident seemed to make a deep impression on the audience and for a short time a service of wonderful consecration followed in which nearly everyone was a part. It is well known that Mr. Anthony is an interesting speaker, but last evening he was even better than before and his address was one of great power.

DEATH FROM LOCKJAW.

EUGENE HOERSTER SUCCUMBED TO THE FATAL MALADY YESTERDAY.

Had Suffered Intense Pain for the Last Few Days, But Conscious to the End—A Short Sketch of His Life.

The death of Eugene Hoerster, which occurred yesterday morning at 11:30, was a severe shock to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Death was caused by lockjaw, the result of an accident, Sunday, July 5th, when Mr. Hoerster was thrown from a wagon. On Monday last the first symptoms of lockjaw were noticed, but Mr. Hoerster was not alarmed. On Tuesday he went out and attended to some business, but after that he grew rapidly worse, though he was conscious to the last. He was asked just before he died if he wanted to be taken to Saengerbund Hall or the German Reformed church, and he replied that he preferred the church, although he would not object to the hall if it was the desire of his frends.

Eugene Hoerster was born at Cassel-on-the-Rhine, Hessen, Germany, September 2d, 1892, but was brought up in Vienna. When he was old enough he entered the banking business and worked at it for four years. When he left the banking house he was connected with he received a valuable recommendation.

At the age of eighteen years he came to this country and settled in Plainfield, where for a year and a half he worked for Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co. When he reached the age of twenty-three years he was married to Miss Lena Mobus, of Washingtonville, and they have lived happily together for the past ten years. After they were married Mr. Hoerster engaged in the bottling business and has conducted the same for sometime at the corner of Somerset and Race streets, where he was successful.

While in Germany he held the position of a lieutenant in the Reserve Army. A widow and one daughter survive him. Mr. Hoerster was a member of the Saengerbund, and that society will turn out in a body at the funeral, which will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 from the house and 3 o'clock from the German Reformed church. Interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints,—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. THE GERMAN BEARDSL.

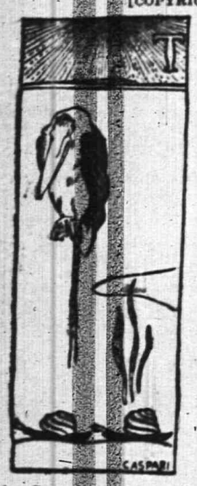
A New Artist of Weimar Whose Work is Attracting Attention.

Both Cartoonist and Painter—How Walter Caspari Won His Way to Fame—Gathers Hints Alike from Monte Carlo and Japan.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]



THE Art academy at Weimar counts among its younger members a Saxon of much promise, Herr Walther Caspari; but little is known by the general public about this artist who has so suddenly burst into fame. An interview very graciously accorded to your correspondent, resulted in drawing forth the following facts relating to Herr Casperi's artistic development and the position he holds in German art circles.

Although the name Caspari might suggest a south of Europe origin, Caspari is a full-blooded German, born about 30 years ago in Chemnitz, one of the most prosperous manufacturing towns of Saxony. There are few, if any, traces of artistic tastes to be found among the elder Casparis; yet Herr Caspari claims the Cranachs among his ancestors. But as they lived two or three centuries ago, one might conclude that their influence upon this young man would not be very great. The Casparis of this century are for the most part tradespeople and artisans. One can see very little in or about Chemnitz to arouse in a boy the love for the beautiful, it being essentially a factory town, given over almost wholly to the making of hosiery—and money. But there are good schools there, among them a first-class technical art school; and it was there that young Caspari got his start. He also attended the local gymnasium. The father died while Walther was a mere boy, and since then the young man has had to look out for himself, mother, brothers and sisters. An apprenticeship in a large establishment proved irksome to the high-strung youth, so he threw up his position, and gave himself up to art.

Four years ago he went to Leipsic, without money or influence, to study in the Kunstakademie. Relatives in town stood by him, and in a short time he found himself in his element. In the exhibitions of the Leipsic art academy in '92 and '93, his work was marked by a vigor and freshness quite unusual in a young artist.

Six or eight hours a day in the academy might be enough, one would think, for a student; but for Caspari, when the work in the academy was over for the day, there still remained an evening of toil. Up in his little atelier, under a dimly-burning lamp, he worked away on those pen-and-ink sketches which brought him ready money and carried his name before German people. The comic German papers were filled with illustrations bearing the signature "W. C." or "W. Caspari." This work was not very high art, one might think; yet it was very necessary, for the reason that it brought him in the few thalers and marks that were necessary to keep soul and body together. It is very interesting to look through his old portfolio and note the character of the work. Sketches they were for the most part that would not appeal to an American, but which were irresistible to the German. His girls seemed peculiarly up-to-date in the fashions of the day, and I remarked upon it. He informed me that he always got his styles from Monte Carlo, a place days and weeks ahead of Paris as far as styles were concerned.

Caspari left Leipsic in '94 for Weimar, a place made famous for all time by Goethe, Schiller, Liszt, and many others. Here he has found a congenial home, and his work has progressed there according to the plans laid in Leipsic. The same eagerness to learn, the same zeal in studying the old masters, the same readiness to make his own the best features of the new schools or even the passing fads—these are the leading charactersistics of the young artist.

A critic would be very rash indeed to class Caspari among the leading artists of Germany, yet there is so much strength in his work that he bids fair to rival Max Klinger, a recognized leader in modern German art. The "poster fad" hasn't spread in Germany to any alarming extent, but there are tendencies and notions and schools of this thing and that, enough to bewilder a layman. Caspari is first of all, like Strathmann, of Munich, an artist of today. He has broken away from dead forms; he strives to give nature a pure, and at the same time an artistic expression; his critical irony at times finds place upon his canvases, he is naive without knowing what naivete is; he brings out the simplicity and strength of the early Italians, and at the same time shows his indebtedness to the suggestive artists of Japan.

The aquarelle "Fruhling," reminds one of the well-known work of Klinger; it also carries one back to the days of the Fourteenth century Italians. In the foreground of this work, we see, with his back partially turned toward us, the upper half of the nude youth, who, with a simple pipe, is summoning nature to her rebirth. The view stretches out over field and meadow, struggling to free themselves from snow and ice. This landscape, conceived by a poet, tells us of the feeling that nature awakens in a poet's soul. The artist has raised us from the earth to regions of pure delight.

The two aquarelles, "Phlegma" (Idleness), and "Das Poetische Fraulein," show one the modern side of the artist and man. Here, rather more than in the small lower freize of the "Fruhling," where the rays of the rising sun are gladdening the flowers of spring, we note the influence of the Japenese. That lazy bird, serenely resting on one leg and philosophically observing the two snails that are creeping slowly by, might have been painted by a Japanese, could he have embodied in his work the touches of humorous irony that Caspari put into his design. "Das Poarische Fraulein" tells us still more of the inborn humor of the man. But although the artist hammers with his sarcasm the excesses of this poetical young woman, he does not fail to use artistic forms; and here, too, the influence of the Japanese is quite marked. In black and white reproductions all the beauty of coloring is lost, and the reader must be content to take the judgment of critics who say that Caspari's work is incomparable.

Outside of half a dozen families Walther Caspari isn't known in America; but the time is soon coming when his reputation will reach the art centers of the hustling republic. He is a most modest man, and is in no hurry about his American reputation. His fair, round, boyish face with his well-trimmed hair and mustache, do not proclaim the artist; yet there a pose to his head and a twitch to his eye that mark the man as a master.

CENTRIFUGAL FORCE.

Able Dissertation in a Stage Coach Which Mr. Lincoln Remembered.

"I see that Col. Thomas Nelson, of Terre Haute, is dead," recently remarked A. M. Murphy to a Globe-Democrat reporter. "Nelson belonged to that class of individuals to whom the growing generation invariably refer as gentlemen of the 'old school.'

"Col. Nelson possessed a rich fund of humor and he enjoyed telling a story just as well if the joke were on him as when the other fellow caught it.

"At an old settlers' meeting in Terre Haute in 1885 Col. Nelson related a story about his first meeting with Abraham Lincoln. It was in the antebellum days of stage coaches. One morning the stage arrived at Terre Haute from Paris, Ill., and stopped at the Clark house, the principal hotel in the city in those days, and among the passengers was a long, lanky individual, who, after partaking of breakfast, resumed his journey to Indianapolis. Col. Nelson was one of the passengers and on the way endeavored to scrape an acquaintance with the lanky-looking passenger. The latter told several funny stories in the course of their rather tedious journey. Nevertheless the colonel took his fellow-passenger for some green country merchant on his way to Indianapolis to replenish his stock of groceries, hardware, etc. The colonel also talked very learnedly and soon the stranger was gazing upon him in a manner that evidently betokened admiration of the great wisdom of his traveling companion.

"Arriving at their destination the colonel put up at the principal hotel, and after making an elaborate toilet made his way to the hotel office. There he observed his fellow-passenger, the central figure of a group of gentlemen, most of whom were well known to the colonel. Stepping up to the clerk he inquired as to the identity of the tall individual, and his eye was guided by the finger of the clerk to the open register, where he read: 'A. Lincoln,' written in a bold hand. A coating of moisture oozed through the pores of the colonel's countenance; he was thunderstruck, dumfounded, and hastily calling for his 'carpetsack' sought quarters elsewhere.

"In 1861 the friends of Col. Nelson succeeded in securing an appointment for him, and Gov. Morton, who was in Washington, telegraphed the colonel to come on, and when he arrived at the capital he was told that he would probably be appointed minister to Chili. When he made his call upon the president it was with the hope that Mr. Lincoln would not recognize in him the stage-coach passenger who had aired his erudition during the journey of a few years before.

"Mr. Lincoln greeted him cordially, and after notifying him of his appointment and expressing the hope that he would accept, looked at the colonel with a merry twinkle in his eye and said: 'Col. Nelson, do you know I have often thought of your talk on centrifugal force during the stage-coach ride? Now, colonel, I am going to toss you away off to Chili.'" — St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

LOSS OF MEMORY.

Curious Case Discovered by the Identity of the Victim at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 20.—A curious case of loss of memory was made public here by the identity of the victim being discovered. On March 6 last a well dressed young man accosted a policeman on the street and told him that he was lost and had no recollection of who he was or where he came from. The man was sober, perfectly rational and aside from his loss of memory well balanced mentally. The man's entire past life was completely erased from his mind, and he had no recollection of anything prior to the time he spoke to the policeman. He was sent to the Philadelphia hospital and as he was well educated and remembered what he had learned he was made clerk to the chief physician of the institution. He was given the name of "George Brant" and until Saturday was known by that name. Saturday Dr. Robinson of Lawrence, Kas., a resident physician at the hospital happened into the chief physician's office and recognized "George" as a fellow townsman and college chum of his own named Herbert C. Spencer. Spencer is a son of Selden P. Spencer of Lawrence, Kan., and the last his family heard from him was in Washington, D. C., on January 27 last. Mr. Spencer was telegraphed for and is now on his way here to take his son home. Spencer's disease is known as amnesia, or mind blindness. Spencer had no recollection of Robinson and could recall nothing of his past life when it was reported to him. Dr. Easterley, another townsman of Spencer, also identified him.

HON. J. H. WILLIAMS DEAD.

Ex-Governor of Maine Passes Away at His Home in Augusta.

Augusta, Me., July 20.—Ex-Gov. Joseph H. Williams died yesterday at "Oak Trees," his residence in this city. He was the only son of Hon. Ruel Williams and Sarah Lowell Cony; he graduated from Harvard with honors in 1834, and after two years at Dana Law school, Cambridge, he entered the law office of his father. He was admitted to the Kennebec bar in 1837. He was a democrat until 1854, when he abstained from voting that ticket so long as slavery continued to shape the party issues. In 1856 the republicans elected him to the state senate. When Gov. Hamlin was elected to the United States senate, Mr. Williams became governor.

Wants $10,000 for Improper Vaccination.

New York, July 20.—Papers have been served upon H. Maitland Kersey, the New York agent of the White Star line, in a suit for $10,000 damages against the company. The plaintiff is William Fleming, who came to this country on the steamer Majestic, sailing from Queenstown on April 22. He was compelled to submit to vaccination while in the steerage of the steamer, and he claims that impure virus was used, and that he has since submitted to surgical operations as a result of the vaccination and may never again be able to use his arm.

Lifeboats Must Be Safe.

New York, July 20.—Gen. Dumont, supervising inspector of the steamboat service, acting for the treasury department, has notified all supervising and local inspectors of steamboats, boat and raft manufacturers and others "not to accept or pass hereafter any liferaft or lifeboat unless there shall be furnished with each a written guarantee over the signature of the builder that such raft or boat is constructed in accordance with the specifications."

Mine Trouble Expected in Indiana.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 20.—Trouble is expected at the Star City mine in Sullivan county to-day when an attempt will be made to put to work imported miners in the place of men in the bituminous fields who went out on strike May 1. The last time miners were brought in the state during a strike was to this same mine in 1892, on which occasion the neighboring farmers drove them away, and it is expected they will repeat the act.

Attempt To Blow up a Church.

Portsmouth, O., July 20.—The east wing of the Second Presbyterian church was shattered by a frightful explosion of gunpowder Saturday night. This is the fourth attempt within a week to blow up public buildings here, and the most successful one. William Lloyd was arrested on suspicion and narrowly escaped being lynched.

Cut in Two by a Train.

New London, Conn., July 20.—The body of John W. Gerside of Portsmouth, N. H., was found beside the track of the Shore Line railroad near the Ocean avenue cut yesterday. The man had been run over by a train during the night. The head was cut off and the right arm and left hand gone.

For Trying To Defraud Uncle Sam.

Berlin, July 20.—Next month the emperor will visit Krupp, the famous gunmaker, at Essen, for which event great preparations are being made by the Krupps and the local authorities.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Oxford, Cambridge and Dublin alone of all the British universities refuse to grant degrees to women.

—Durham university has granted the honorary degree of doctor of divinity to Rev. Sukius Baronian, archpriest of the Armenians in England.

—Camillo Mazzella, and his twin brother, Mgr. Ernesto Mazzella, archbishop of Bari, are 63 years old. The archbishop's coadjutor is his nephew, Mgr. Orazio Mazzella, who is only 36.

—At St. George's Episcopal church, New York, on Easter Sunday the choir of vested women walked down the aisles in procession, with the vested choir of men and boys singing the beautiful Easter anthems.

—England is once more afflicted with bogus diplomas, purporting to be issued by American universities. The latest of these frauds calls itself the "National University of Illinois" (Universitas Nationalis Illinoiensis). Its offices are in London.

—Germany is now the best educated nation on the continent, yet only 100 years ago German teachers in many parts of the country were so poorly paid that they used to sing in front of houses in order to add to their income by odd pence.

—There were 16,606 students in attendance at Russian universities at the beginning of the year, divided as follows: Moscow, 3,888; St. Petersburg, 2,625; Kieve, 2,244; Helsingfors in Finland, 1,875; Dorpat in Livonia, 1,654; Warsaw, 1,335; Kharkev, 1,200; Kezan, 825; Odessa, 555, and Tomsk in Siberia, 405.

—In the private chapel at Windsor castle, which is octagonal in shape, with a lantern roof, the queen's pew is in the gallery, in the division next to the organ loft. The household sit below, the women on one side and the men on the other. There is a choir of three men and two boys, drawn from St. George's chapel.

—H. Laroche, the new resident-general in Madagascar, has asked the superior of the Trappists in Algeria to send Catholic missionaries to Madagascar, promising land grants, free passage and and the special protection of the government. The compliment to the Trappists is the greatest in that M. Laroche is probably the last person who has been excommunicated by the Catholic church, owing to his evicting the religious orders at Montpelier and that he has lately turned Protestant.

AMERICAN AND BRITISH HUMOR.

Radical Differences Which Each Race Finds Difficulty in Reconciling.

Beyond a question there is a distinct difference between American and British humor. To most Americans London Punch is indescribably dreary, yet to the average Britain it is the funniest paper published. Per contra, the Englishman seldom enjoys an American joke, and our comic papers are as a rule senseless to him. As an illustration of these national characteristics Charles W. Brooke, a prominent lawyer, recalls the experience of Charles W. Browne, better known as Artemus Ward, one of the first of American humorists. "It was a singular thing that Ward, while he captured the British public in his first lecture, made a complete failure when he became a member of the staff of London Punch, he being, I believe, the only American who was ever employed upon that publication. He began his first lecture in the British capital by praising warmly the hospitality of the people of London. In glowing terms he described the picture which had been drawn for him in America of the warmth of the greeting which would be extended to him when he had crossed the Atlantic. 'But,' he added, 'the realization has far exceeded the anticipation. Since I have been in London I have been amazed beyond measure at the hospitalities of which I have been the recipient. Why, I assure you that even every time I have left a cab a hand has been extended to me—for a shilling.' The newspapers at that time related that first there were a few smiles upon the faces in the London audience, then some one tittered, after that a few people laughed, and in about half a minute the entire audience was in a roar. From that time a laugh followed everything he said. His work on Punch, however, the British people were incapable of appreciating; even his delightful description of his visit to the tower of London, in which, in a reminiscent mood, he spoke about his puritan ancestors and told how they had traveled to a bleak and foreign shore, where they could worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences and prevent every other man from worshiping according to the dictates of his. That sort of real humor was too subtle for the Londoner."—Philadelphia Times.

Canine Strategy.

Dogs are allowed to roam at large in Madagascar, and in their frequent excursions they have constantly to pass over the streams of this swampy island. Here they are waylaid by those horrid alligators, which regard a dog as a dainty morsel. This is how the canine quadrupeds contrive to dodge the "cocandrilles," as the French linesmen call them. They will assemble in a pack of half a dozen or more near the bank of the river, and commence barking with all their might. Whereupon shoals of alligators are seen converging to the spot in eager expectation of a copious feast. When all the alligators of the neighborhood are got together, the dogs start off at a gallop and cross the river in safety 200 or 300 yards up stream. A remarkable proof this of the instinct and intelligence of animals.—Revue Anecdotique.

A Thoughtful Creditor.

Hobson—Wilkes, you remember that fifty I loaned you two years ago—

Wilkes—You are not going to press a friend for payment, are you."

Hobson—Certainly not. Take your time. I only wish to borrow it for awhile.—Bay City Chat.

SPORTS

MONDAY, July 20. Sun rises 4:38 a. m., sets 7:32 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:32 p. m. and 3:38 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Carrie Elliott, of Grove street, has a new Victoria, which she is learning to ride.

George Saunder, of Orchard place, enjoyed a ride on his wheel to Patchogue, L. I., yesterday.

The Victor Wheelmen will hold a 25-mile road race on August 20th. The course will be announced later.

Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, and Geo. VanNest, of Dunellen, rode their wheels to High Bridge yesterday.

Mr. VanHouten, of Morristown, and Miss Ella Wright, of Summit, rode their wheels to Plainfield yesterday and spent the day with Letter-carrier and Mrs. Charles Stephens, of the West End.

The condition of South avenue, between Fanwood and Richmond street, has caused considerable profanity among the passing cyclists, especially in the evening. The road has been in poor condition for sometime but now, to repair it, coarse crushed stone has been placed on the road without any top dressing and without being rolled. The large stone makes bicycle riding and even carriage riding unpleasant.

AROUND THE BASES.

The colored nine that came from Trenton Saturday afternoon to do up the local colored Gorhams found that they had run against something unexpected, for the Plainfield team administered a crushing defeat to the Trenton boys to the tune of 21 to 4. The game was replete with exciting incidents. Next Saturday the victorious Gorhams play a colored team from Rahway on the grounds of the Y. M. C. A.

HANDICAP TENNIS.

Tournament of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Opens.

The handicap tennis tournament at the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club opened Saturday afternoon with a number of exciting matches and will be continued next Saturday afternoon. All but one match of the preliminary round was played and several in the first round. Thomas U. Smith and Henry V. Ryder drew the lyes in the preliminary round.

The summaries were as follows:

Preliminary round, C. W. Abbott defeated Stanley Hunter, even, 6-2, 6-1.

Guernsey Nevius defeated J. H. Craig by default.

A. P. Sewell, scratch, defeated Morris Dumont, (30-15) 6-1, 6-2.

George Ryder, scratch, defeated V. R. Schuyler, (15) 7-5, 6-0.

William McClure defeated Allen Hartley, by default.

First round, Sewell, scratch defeated Nevius, (30-15) 6-2, 6-1.

H. Ryder, scratch, defeated McClure (30-15) 7-9, 6-1, 6-1.

WASN'T THE RIGHT SIGN.

An Impudent Young Man Meets His Just Deserts.

There is a young man in this town that does not love the sight of policemen, and indeed he has a particular antipathy for them, and whenever he sees one of them, and can't catch him, he expresses it by placing his left thumb to his nose and wiggling his fingers.

Yesterday he saluted Chief Grant in this manner from a coal train, but his fun didn't last long for Sergeant Kiely soon escorted him to the lockup. This young man is John Benford, aged 19, and he lives on Cottage place, better known as Paradise alley, with his mother. He has been up in the city court several time for various offences, and so this time City Judge DeMeza determined to make an example of him by sending him to Elizabeth for thirty days.

Sent Up for Twenty Days.

George Sanatz was not a very handsome object when he was arranged before City Judge DeMeza this morning. He was dirty, ragged, and there was an unkempt air about him that suggested laziness. He said that he was a native of Germany, twenty-two years old, and was now coming from Orange, Mass., looking for work. He was a weaver. Patrolman Saunders had found him fast asleep in an empty freight car on the Cottage place siding and had arrested him for trespassing on the property of the Jersey Central railroad. He pleaded guilty and went down for twenty days.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

STOLIDITY OF THE CAMEL.

It Sometimes Gives Place to Revengeful Fury.

The history of the human race has taught us that, even as "the worm will turn," so man, downtrodden by tyranny, will seek revenge. Therefore it is not surprising to know that the usually patient and submissive camel will sometimes resent an overdose of abuse. Too dense to think of a way in which he can outwit his driver and so take him unawares, when roused to the pitch of fury, he rushes at the tyrant opened mouthed, and his formidable teeth and powerful jaws do serious damage.

Of this vindictiveness the driver is aware, and of the certainty that sooner or later the camel will seek revenge. Accordingly, it is customary for the person who fears his malice to throw his clothes before the camel, meanwhile hiding himself until the animal's fury has been expended in tossing and trampling on them, when the injury real or supposed, is at once forgotten.

The camel will not identify himself with his driver or rider in the smallest way whatever. He steadily declines all advances. His eye never lights up with love or even interest at the approach of his master. Should you attempt to pat or caress him he will object in a very decided manner.

Good treatment or bad makes no difference to him. Life and its hard conditions are taken for granted. His view of things is far too serious. He is so absorbed and preoccupied that he has no time to waste on the gambols indulged in by all the other young animals.—Youth's Companion.

A Wise Precaution.

A Detroit man who goes hunting occasionally, without any great detriment to the live stock of the forests though perhaps some to the live stock of the fields, concluded not long ago that he would organize an expedition of two and make a foray. So he consulted his office boy.

"I say, Tommie," he said, "how would you like to go out on a little hunt with me?"

"I don't know, sir," responded the boy, in some doubt. "I'd have to see mother first."

"All right. Ask your mother and let me know in the morning."

The next morning the boy saw the gentleman.

"Well," he inquired, "what did your mother say?"

"She said," replied the boy, very innocently, "that I might go if you would take somebody else along with us to do the shootin'."—Detroit Free Press.

Couldn't Get Together.

The Borough Council committees which were to have met Saturday evening to discuss several important matters did not materialize. Mayor Hegeman, Councilman Lounsbury and Clerk Arnold were the only three persons present and no business was trasacted. Mr. Pech was called suddenly away on business and Mr. Valiant left Saturday to enjoy his vacation. No arrangements have been made for a future meeting of the committees.

Miss L. and George Snediker, accompanied by their mother, Mrs. D. Snediker, came home from Asbury Park this morning and took possession of their Grove street home.

Persons who have a coughing spell every night, on account of a tickling sensation in the throat, may overcome it at once by a dose of One Minute Congh Cure. L. W. Radolph, 143 West Front street.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—A woman school teacher of Amesbury, Mass., retired last week after 53 years of continuous service.

—"Every game will be square" is the assuring but somewhat astonishing announcement in the advertisement of a church fair in a Maine town.

—Canon Mason, of London, has accepted an invitation of the Episcopalian club of Boston to deliver three lectures on "Archbishop Cranmer." They will be given in St. Paul's church, Boston.

—Dr. Sesare Lombroso, late professor of legal medicine in the University of Turin, has been transferred, says Science, to the chair of psychiatry. He has also been given the directorship of the university clinic for mental diseases.

—It is proposed to utilize part of Miss Culver's gift to the University of Chicago in erecting four separate buildings, one each for zoology, botany, anatomy and physiology. Ground has already been broken for the first of these.

—The bishop of Bedford avers that the east London district contains a population of 1,500,000, nearly all poor. From this statement some idea will be had of the vastness of the work the clergy are called upon to perform. The difficulty of raising funds for so great a work is very great.

—There were 16,606 students in attendance at Russian universities at the beginning of the year, divided as follows: Moscow, 3,888; St. Petersburg, 2,625; Kiev, 2,244; Helsingfors, in Finland, 1,875; Dorpat in Livonia, 1,654; Warsaw, 1,335; Kharkov, 1,200; Kazan, 825; Odessa, 555, and Tomsk, in Siberia, 405.

—According to the Pontifical Annual, which has just been issued, there still remain six cardinals in the sacred college created by Pope Pius IX. They are Cardinals Mertel, Parrochi, Oreglia, Ledochowski, De Canossa and Hohenlohe. Cardinal Mertel, the senior, is now 90 years old and Cardinal de Canossa, the next oldest, is 87. The youngest cardinal, according to the book, is Cardinal Svampa, who is only 45.

ORIGIN OF BLUE GRASS.

Not Originally a Kentucky Product, for It Came from Indiana.

"I notice by the papers that somebody in the south part of the state wants to know where blue grass first started," said Prof. John Collett, ex-state geologist.

"A great many people contend that it was first found in Kentucky, but this is not so. Blue grass is a native of the Wabash valley in Indiana. It was found by William Henry Harrison's troops during the solemn march to Tippecanoe in 1811. Harrison gathered a small army at Ohio Falls and started north. At Vincennes the gallant heroes realized that they could not go 200 miles up the Wabash without feed for their horses. Gen. Harrison had two cribs of corn at Terre Haute and persuaded the men to go on. As they came on with hungry horses and scant feed they found the ground covered with blue grass. Six miles west of Newport on the Collett farm was found a bountiful supply of blue grass. Some places in the bottom it was growing three feet high and such feed had never been heard of by the Kentucky soldiers. At State Line City more blue grass was found and from there to Tippecanoe the whole line of march was covered with blue grass. The seed was carried back to Kentucky and sown there, but they could not make it thrive alone in the warm soil and it had to be sown with oats and rye. Mr. Sandusky, the father of the present family of that name, told me in an early day that no blue grass grew in Kentucky until after it was imported from Indiana. Tom Downing, of Terre Haute, was an ardent admirer of Henry Clay, and once went to visit him at his home near Ashland, Ky. After seeing the fine farm, well set in blue grass, Downing suggested that Mr. Clay let him have some of the seed to take back to Indiana.

"'Tom, don't make a fool of yourself,' said Clay, 'the grandsire of Kentucky blue grass is growing around your house in the fence corners of your fields. We got the seed from Terre Haute and the middle Wabash, and after a hard struggle got it to grow here in its present luxuriousness.'"—Indianapolis Journal.

Hail Storms in the Orange Free State.

One of these republics—the Orange Free State—is very nearly as large as England, and just as large as the state of New York. It lies from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea, and is mostly level, with some low ranges of hills. The surface is bare of wood, except in a few sheltered spots along the streams, but is well covered with herbage. The air is pure and bracing, much like that of Colorado or Wyoming. There are, happily, no blizzards; but violent thunder storms are not uncommon, and the hailstones—I have seen them bigger than pigeon's eggs—which fall during such storms sometimes kill the smaller animals and even men.—Prof. James Bryce, M. P., in Century.

Some Schoolboy Definitions.

In a recent examination some boys were asked to define certain words, and to give a sentence illustrating the meaning. Here are a few: Frantic is wild. I picked some frantic flowers. Athletic, strong; the vinegar was too athletic to use. Tandem, one behind another; the boys sit tandem at school. And then some single words are funnily explained. Dust is mud with the wet squeezed out; fins are fishes' wings; stars are the moon's eggs; circumference is the distance around the middle of the outside. — Educational Gazette.

GOV. RUSSELL'S REMAINS.

Private Services This Morning and the Body Then Taken to City Hall.

Cambridge, Mass., July 20.—The death of ex-Gov. Wm. E. Russell was touchingly referred to in scores of churches in this city yesterday. The churches were all crowded and appropriate music was rendered, and in many churches the services were devoted wholly to honoring the memory of the dead executive. The body lay in the library of the Russell residence. Two police officers guarded the house all day, but their presence was not needed. Thousands of people passed the house during the day and evening. A wreath of ivy and oak leaves hung from the door knob. The curtains were drawn and not a person was seen in the house. Intimate friends and relatives were allowed to gaze upon the remains. The features looked remarkably life-like. The private services were held at the house at 11 o'clock this morning, after which the body will lie in state in the city hall.

Forest Fires in the Northwest.

Spokane, Wash., July 20.—Forest fires are raging throughout the country north of this city in Washington, Idaho and British Columbia. Millions of feet of timber has already been destroyed and throughout numerous mining camps situated in the path of the fires great damage is being done in the destruction of property. The smoke here is so dense as to almost shut out the sun.

Arrested for Swindling.

Seattle, Wash., July 20.—Charles A. Edwards, son of C. A. Edwards, United States commissioner in Alaska and well known in journalistic circles as the former editor of the Spokane Sunday Sun, was arrested Saturday on the charge of complicity in a swindle by which the Great Northern Railway company has been defrauded of a large sum of money.

The Spalding Bicycle

After the adoption of our 1896 model and a careful estimate of the cost of manufacture, we placed the price on the Spalding Bicycle at $100. The price is now $100 and will continue at $100 throughout the season, no matter what other manufacturers may do.

We don't believe it is fair, honest or good business policy to sell a standard article like the Spalding Bicycle at one price in May and reduce its value in June by a material reduction in price. As a matter of common fairness to early purchasers of Spalding Bicycles and as an evidence of good faith on our part we will, in case of reduction in price during the season, send a rebate check to every purchaser of a Spalding Bicycle of the amount of any such reduction that may be made by us during the season This is our meaning of a SECOND ECHO MEETING.

E. E. ANTHONY CONTINUES HIS STORY OF THE CONVENTION.

He Pays a Glowing Tribute to the Earnestness of the New Jersey Delegation and Rouses Much Enthusiasm in the Audience.

In the same manner as gatherings at the wonderful Christian Endeavor convention recently held at Washington opened, so did the meeting at the Trinity Reformed church, last evening, which was really an echo of that great movement, one of the thousands that are being held all over this country.

The same songs were sung while the listeners gathered and then came the opening exercises, led by E. E. Anthony, who was to continue his report of the National Christian Endeavor Convention at Washington. There were prayers by Rev. Cornelius Schenck and Horace J. Martin and then the consecration hymn of the night before, "I'll Live For Him," was sung in an earnest manner.

After a few words of introduction, Mr. Anthony continued his interesting report of the Convention where he left off Sunday night, beginning with the services on Friday afternoon of the convention week to the close of the convention. As Mr. Anthony heard so many good things at the convention that it was impossible to remember them all, so it is impossible to tell all the good things, for there were lots of them, that Mr. Anthony included in his remarks. He repeated many helpful thoughts of the speakers and described the wonderful meetings in a way that thrilled his hearers.

He told first of the committee conferences on Friday afternoon and described the one he attended, that of the lookout committee, which he declared was one of the corner stones of Christian Endeavor The conference was conducted as if a new society had been formed and the question of the lookout committee came before them. It was decided that the committee should be composed of the best talent in the society, those who were willing to sacrifice time and energy to their Master's cause. First they should pray, next systemize their work and then work, as a committee and not leave it all to the chairman. Friday evening he told of hearing "Caleb Cobweb," who talked as he writes in his correspondence of the "Golden Rule," and spoke in favor of forming a senior society in every church and its benefits. Dr. Withrow, of Chicago, told of the advantages of securing the young in the work. Every speaker was good, said Mr. Anthony, but everyone seemed better than the last. So it was throughout the convention. He told of the combination of heat and rain that was against the success of the meeting but "there was something in our hearts that overbalanced all discomfort."

Mr. Anthony was one of the privileged ones to attend the junior rally Saturday morning, and his enthusiasm in describing was contagious. The thought of the wonderful work among the children, as shown by the meeting, filled every heart with gladness. He next described the grand gathering of 75,000 earnest Endeavorers at the steps of the Capitol and their triumphant march down Pennsylvania avenue with the New Jersey delegation well up toward the front. Mr. Anthony's voice shook with emotion as he told of the wonderful sight and declared it the greatest meeting of God's followers since the children of Israel assembled to hear the law read to them by Moses, and possibly even greater than that.

"I don't like to boast about New Jersey," he said in speaking of that march from the Capitol, "but New Jersey did beat them all in singing 'The Banner of the Cross.'" At his suggestion that soul inspiring hymn was sung by Horace J. Martin, all joining in the chorus.

The New Jersey rally and reception on Saturday evening, he next spoke about, and told of the grand surprise the New Jersey delegates were teated to by Secretary Baer who came to the rally and said that the New Jersey Christian Endeavorers led all the world in efficiency, earnestness, consecration and results. "It was a joyful time indeed for us."

Sunday was a day of rest at the convention. The story of an evangelistic party under Mr. Anthony's lead that visited the George Mallsly Home that evening was told by Miss Dunn. Then Mr. Anthony resumed his account, remarking on the definition that one of the boys at the home gave for a Christian Endeavorer. "A Christian Endeavorer," said the lad, "is just the same as a Christian."

If Mr. Anthony had spoken feelingly before when he came to tell of the consecration meeting that closed the convention, he spoke doubly so. His remarks were very effective, and so was the hymn, "My Jesus, I Love Thee," New Jersey's response to the roll call, that was sung at the close of his remarks.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck closed the meeting with the benediction.

$6,000 FOR THE SEWERS

THIS SUM SET ASIDE TO COVER EMERGENCIES THAT MAY ARISE.

Heated Discussion Over the Necessity of the Appropriation—New Police Rules Adopted—Other Business.

The adjourned meeting of the City Council held last evening was a tedious one. It was late when the meeting was called to order and the business was not transacted with any remarkable degree of despatch. All the members responded to the roll call except Messrs. Fisk and Stebbins. Stenographer George Wean was also absent on a vacation.

The residents of Belvidere avenue petitioned Council for a large number of crosswalks and on Mr. Ginna's motion the matter was referred to the street committee with power.

Samuel Dreier asked for a pawnbroker's license and it was granted, as was also John Scott's petition for a carting license.

The petition of residents asking for electric lights on North avenue, between Leland avenue and Berckman street, was referred to the proper committee.

The commissioners recently appointed to assess benefits and damages in relation to the system of sewers asked for an appropriation to secure the services of a stenographer. It was decided later that the commissioners had the power to secure such a person, and the Clerk was instructed to notify them of the fact.

Mayor Gilbert returned the sprinkling ordinance without his approval, and gave as his reason that the ordinance did not specify the character of wagons to be used. On a motion it was ordered spread on the minutes, and then the report was returned to the committee on a motion of Mr. Serrell. The latter stated that the Corporation Counsel had made a slight mistake and he asked that the ordinance be killed so that a new one could be introduced, and the ordinance was killed.

Mr. Frost stated that regarding the petition of Mr. Sampson and other residents of East Fifth street, complaining of the noise and speed of the trolley cars, had been considered and that the difficulties had been remedied. Superintendent Adlemann had assured the committee that the speed would be decreased, also that everything possible would be done to give good service. Mr. Tolles offered a resolution rescinding a former one setting a date in July for the Madison avenue commissioners to meet. The new resolution set the date at September 3, 1896, at eight o'clock in the evening, and the same was adopted.

Regarding the flushing of the sewers by the Plainfield Water Supply company, a resolution was offered by Mr. Frost that the Common Council accept the terms of the Water company to flush the sewers for ten cents per 1,000 gallons. This was the sewer committees recommendation and it was adopted. At this point Mr. Barrows introduced the new police rules and regulations which it had taken the committee three months to arrange. After they were read Mr. Barrows offered a resolution that the same be adopted and that 200 copies be printed. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Frost offered a resolution which gave the sewer committee power to sell the dwelling, barns and outhouses located on the sewer beds and secure an auctioneer to perform the work. This in the committee's opinion was deemed best, and it was adopted. Mr. Frost stated that the council had ascertained the entire cost of the system of the sewers to date to be $162,152.58. He then offered a resolution that the assessments for benefits and damages authorized by law be referred to the commissioners on assessment recently appointed. Mr. Frost said the above amount included the fees for the Corporation Counsel and the commissioners.

This statement brought out a heated discussion. Mr. Ginna wanted to allow the commissioners $2,000, though he did not think $5,000 was fair compensation. Mr. Moore asked if the Corporation Counsel was not paid a regular salary. He was informed that he was, but Mr. Ginna said that an increase was voted Mr. Marsh.

President See thought that now was the time to fix the figures. He recommended that $6,000 be set aside for emergency. The Council would not be compelled to spend it all, but it would provide for the expenses mentioned. Mr. Westphal said that he voted once for an increase of $500 for Mr. Marsh and he did not think another increase should be granted. While he thought $500 was securing good services for a reasonable amount he thought there were times when the Corporation Counsel had nothing to do for the city. President See stated

SOCIALIST-LABOR TICKET

THE FIRST PARTY TO PUT A COUNTY TICKET IN THE FIELD.

Thirty Delegates Participate in the Convention and Endorse the National Nominees—Plainfielder for Assembly.

The Socialist Labor party of the Eighth District held a Congressional and county convention last evening in the basement of Reform Hall. There were about thirty delegates present from Jersey City, Hoboken, Elizabeth and Plainfield. The convention was called to order by R. S. Miller, of Elizabeth, secretary of the county committee, and Frank Mills, of Elizabeth, was selected as chairman. John W. James, of Plainfield, was elected vice-president and J. P. Weigel, of Elizabeth was made secretary.

The following nonimations were then made:

For Congress, W. J. Campbell, Jersey City; for Senator of Union County, Otto Hufnagel, Elizabeth; for Assemblymen, J. W. James, Plainfield; Charles Dahlman, J. P. Weigel, Elizabeth; for Sheriff, Arthur Scott, Plainfield; for Coroner, W. E. VanNorton, Elizabeth. The nominations were followed with a few remarks from the delegates. The convention endorsed unreservedly Charles H. Matchett for President and Matthew McGuire for Vice-President. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested and the delegates felt as though their party would secure large increase in the votes this fall.

PHYSICIANS MUST REPORT.

Borough Board of Health Insist on Observance of All Ordinances.

The North Plainfield Board of Health met last evening and transacted routine business, passing the usual summer health ordinance. The ordinance, according to a poor law, must be advertised in a Somerville newspaper, whereby not ten people in the borough will see it. The matter of one of Plainfield's physicians violating the law in not reporting a contagious case that he had been attending for over three weeks, was brought before the board. Rev. Dr. Honeyman, president of the board, told the members of the board present of a call the accused physician had made upon him and of the excuses he had rendered to him for not reporting the case. It was the general opinion of the board that hereafter physicians from this city or elsewhere would be prosecuted as the law directs for failing to report similar cases of contagious diseases.

UNION COUNTY'S VALUATION.

Board of Assessment Appertions the Amounnts and Fixes the Tax Rate.

The Union County Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes met at the Court House in Elizabeth yesterday to apportion the valuations of the various cities and townships in the county and also to fix the tax rate.

They fixed the following valuations for this year: Elizabeth, $16,576,950; Plainfield, $7,500,000; Rahway, $3,004,350; Summit, $2,015,000; Union, $1,774,000; Westfield, $1,379,000; Cranford, $960,400; Linden, $965,000; Roselle, 862,000; Fanwood, $545,500; Fanwood Borough, $208,600; Springfield, $331,000; New Providence, $270,000; Mountainside Borough, $133,700; Clark, 255,000; total, $36,772,100.

The increase in county valuation over last year is $779,600. The tax rate this year will be fifty two cents, the same as last year.

Nipped in the Bud of Time.

Edward Richards, the druggist, of Fourth and Liberty streets, lighted a lamp in his sleeping apartments at 10 o'clock and, as he thought, extinguished the match, which he threw out the bedroom window. The burned ember landed on a canvas awning over the door and in a few minutes the awning was all in a blaze and several of the weatherboards were scorched. Mr. Richards had presence of mind and hastily tore down the remnants of the awning, frame and all. Had a few minutes more elapsed before the discovery the building would have been well on fire and the firemen would no doubt have had a lively tussle.

Borough Republicans to Meet.

Thursday evening, the U. S. Grant Republican Club will meet and hear a report of the committee who attended the State Convention last week at Asbury Park. There will be music by the artists of the club, and everybody is invited to take supper along with them.

UNCLE SAM KIND TO THEM

A PLAINFIELD ORPHAN AND A WIDOW GRANTED PENSIONS.

The Claims Were Presented and Solicited by Lawyer W. A. Coddington—Back Pay Received by Both of the Parties.

Two pensions have been granted by the Commissioner of Pensions, at Washington, to Plainfield people, and in both cases through the agency of ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington. The first was the case of Jennie Squires, of Netherwood avenue, minor child of the late David C. Squires, who fougut in the United States Army during the Civil War.

About two years ago the mother of the child consulted ex-Judge Coddington in reference to her claim, and he advised her that she had a legal claim, and that her daughter was entitled to draw a pension until she was sixteen years old. Ex-Judge Coddington then took the necessary steps to protect the claim. Last week the pension for the back pay was received, amounting to nearly $1,000, and the child will also receive a monthly petition of $14.

About the same time that ex-Judge Coddington took steps to secure this pension, he started suit for Mrs. Northup, widow of the late William R. Northup, and last week her pension was allowed and she received the back pay from the time of her husband's death and will receive a monthly pension hereafter.

Both of these cases required a great deal of proof and in each case there was lots of testimony taken and sent to Washington, which, of course, required time.

About five years ago, ex Judge Coddington was appointed a solicitor and attorney in the Federal courts at Washington. D. C., and during that time he has conducted several very important cases and in every instance has been successful.

Tramps Escaped.

A freight train pulled into the North Avenue station about 10 o'clock last night and the conductor notified the night operator at the station that a gang of tramps were on board, causing him trouble. The operator notified Night Operator Fred Barker at the telephone office, and he blew his police whistle. Roundsman Frederickson responded. He and several bystanders, whom he called to his aid, made an attempt to catch them. The tramps evidently saw their pursuers first, for they made themselves scarce in the darkness and escaped.

Suing on Contract.

The case of Schuchman against Conover, on contract, comes up at Elizabeth tomorrow. Schuckman is suing Conover, of North Plainfield, for $300 due on several furniture vans he had sold Conover. Conover would not pay because he claimed that the vans were not as represented. Steele & Meehan are attorneys for Schuchman, while Judge DeMeza represents Conover.

THE IMPLIED CONTRACT.

AN IMPORTANT CASE BROUGHT IN JUSTICE NASH'S COURT.

Horatio Johnson Claimed That Mr. Markham Gave Him Orders to Do Work, But the Latter Denies It.

An interesting and very important case came up in Justice Nash's court yesterday afternoon and on its settlement depends a very important question of contract, the implied contract. The case was that of Horatio C. N. Johnston against Mrs. Harriet Markham, on contract.

Mrs. Markham owns a piece of property on Church street, where she lives. There was no sidewalk in front of the property and she consulted Mr. Johnston regarding the cost of laying a flagstone sidewalk. He stated that it would be $31.50, which she said she could not afford at present and let the matter drop. Johnston, however, went to work and laid the sidewalk and then sent in his bill. She would not pay and Johnston took the matter to the justice's court and the suit resulted.

He acknowledged that she had not ordered him to lay the sidewalk but claimed that, because Mrs. Markham made no objection to the laying of the sidewalk, she recognized an implied contract. Mrs. Markham said that she did not see Mr. Johnston or know where to find him when the sidewalk was being laid and that she had said in the first place that she could not afford it.

Winfield S Angleman represented Johnston and Chas. J. McNabb was the attorney for Mrs. Markham.

Justice Nash reserved his decision for one week.

TOO BUSY TO HAVE A LEGAL FIGHT.

Ernest Barrett, the Plumber, Claimed to Have a Good Case, Though.

Justice Nash issued the summons several days ago in the case of John Bodine, of Dunellen, against Ernest Barrett, on contract, and yesterday afternoon the case was settled by the defendant paying the amount in full. As he paid it he told his story of the case and said that had he the time he would like to push the case to an end. Barrett is a plumber, and is especially busy at present. According to him, he had an account with Bodine, while Bodine also owed him something. When these accounts balanced they declared them off. Some time after Bodine came into Barrett's place of business and began arguing with him. Barrett told him to stop and go out, and when Bodine refused, Barrett opened the door and hinted that if he did not leave at once forcible means might be necessary. Bodine went away very angry and immediately started this suit for a small amount of plumbers' materials at almost double its value, according to Barrett. The amount was small and the time and trouble necessary to fight it would not pay when Barrett had other work on hand, so he paid it. This is not the only suit of that nature that has come up before the local justices.

VICTORY BOYS TO DEPART.

After Building Up the Local Corps They Are to Leave.

"The Victory Boys," who have been holding forth at the Salvation Army for the last two months, will bid farewell this evening. They have worked hard and earnestly to bring prosperity back to the corps again and have succeeded fairly well, at least so far as attendance is concerned. The meeting tonight will be a special one. From here the boys go to Stapleton, S. I., for a week, and then they go to Prohibition Park, where they will take an active part in the annual camp meeting of the Army.

Capt. and Mrs. Brewer, who have been in charge of Corps No. 1, Jersey City, will succeed in the command of the Plainfield barracks. They are experienced Army officers.

Miss Lulu Bryan, of Trenton, who has been visiting her uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. O. L. Jenkins, of East Front street, has returned home.

Charles A. Case, of North Plainfield, an employe of the Standard Twine Co., of New York, will spend his two weeks vacation at Middletown, N. Y.

T. S. Armstrong, the pharmacist, went to Sea Girt this morning, where he will be the guest for a few days of his brother, Hon. E. A. Armstrong, a member of the State militia, now encamped at that place.

Miss Mary L. Pierce, of Wellesley College, who has been visiting Miss Adelaide Baxter, of Putnam avenue, left yesterday, accompanied by Miss Adelaide Baxter, for Wildwood Lake, Franklin Furnace, N. J.

"Wake up, Jacob, day is breaking!" so said De Witt's Little Early Risers to the man who had taken them to arouse his sluggish liver. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

TOOK A PIG FOR THE OATS.

LAW SUIT BETWEEN TWO FARMERS WITH A LAUGHABLE SIDE.

Disagreement Over the Sale of Oats, and One of the Agriculturists Carried Away a Porker to Even Up The Deal for the Oats

Martinville and the surrounding country has been quite stirred up over the quarrel of two farmers living near that place over a load of oats and a pig. One law suit was started by the quarrel and the second one was ended yesterday, with the discovery of a fatal defect in the plaintiff's papers by the defendent's lawyer.

Some time ago, young Charles Baldwin bought some oats of John Stine, giving Stine to understand that they were were for Baldwin's father. When Stine wanted old Mr. Baldwin to pay for them, he refused by saying that his son, not he, purchased them. Stine was determined not to get left, however, and so he swooped down on the Baldwin farmyard, and captured a pig, and despite its squeels, carried it away to his home. The elder Baldwin was exceeding wroth at this turn of affairs, and he immediately sued his neighbor to recover damages on the pig. The case came up in Justice Mattison's court, and Baldwin secured judgement.

Then it was Stine's turn to be angry and started another suit in Justice Austin's court against young Baldwin on the charge of procuring goods under false pretenses. This case came up for trial yesterday and young Charles Baldwin was represented by City Judge DeMeza. Judge DeMeza made application for a dismissal of the case on account of the defect in the papers and Justice Austin granted his application.

Stine is now vowing vengence as he has lost both oats and pig and another suit is sure to follow.

TO MAKE A FINE STREET.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS WILL MA CADAMIZE MOUNTAIN AVENUE.

Members Went Over the Ground This Morning.—The Work Will Cost $4,000 Per Mile.—Two and One Eighth Miles.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met this morning at the home of S. B. Wheeler, Netherwood Farm, for the purpose of considering the question of macadamizing Mountain avenue. The avenue is two and one-eighth miles long, from Somerset street to the line at Union avenue. The members first enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Wheeler and they all voted that never before had they drank such rich milk, and after cracking a few jokes at the expense of each other, drove over the avenue and inspected the same. They were all of the opinion that the avenue should be macadamized and it was so decided.

The road bed will be 16 feet, and it will be one of the best in the county. The cost will be about $4,000 per mile. The work will be started within 10 days. County Engineer Doughty was present and received suggestions from the members of the board regarding the construction of the road. When completed there will be a fine macadam road from Somerset street through to Scotch Plains, Springfield, Milburn, Morristown and other adjourning places and it will be a great improvement.

The boad returned to Mr. Wheeler's house where they were royally treated by their host. In the party was John Freckt, counsel for the board. This eminent lawyer has held his position in the board for thirteen consecutive years, and it would be almost impossible to do without him. During his service he has lost but one case for the board.

An Enemy of the Maple.

A small white beetle or bug has appeared on the maple trees in the vicinity of Franklin place and East Sixth street and is apparently killing the trees which it infests. When small it is white, but turns to a brown as it grows to almost half an inch in length. Several of the trees are covered with the small insects while the under side of the leaves are white with its eggs. It apparently attacks the leaf stem where it joins the branch, eating it away.

No News of Frank.

Chief of Police Grant received a letter yesterday from the police authorities of Chicago stating that a thorough search had been made for John J. Frank, the missing Plainfield carpenter, but they had failed to find any trace of him.

Rode Without a Light.

Howard Corlies, of Road Ending, appeared before City Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of riding without a light. Sentence was suspended.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W Randolph, 143 West Front street.

CLEVELAND JUBILEE

Her Centennial Celebration To Be Formally Opened To-morrow.

AN ELABORATE PROGRAMME ARRANGED

Historical Pageant, Reception, Centennial Ball, and Addresses—Gen. Hawley, of Connecticut, the Orator of the Day —Fete To Continue Six Weeks.

Cleveland, July 21.—On July 22, 1796, Gen. Moses Cleaveland of the Connecticut Land company landed at the mouth of the Cuyahoga, on the shore of Lake Erie, and the people of Cleveland date their history from this event. Great preparations have been made for a fitting celebration of the city's centennial. The exercises began Sunday by the ringing of bells, and all the pulpits in the city were given to the history of the city. The state encampment of the Ohio National guard was formally opened yesterday by Gov. Bushnell and staff. The militia will be brigaded two regiments at a time, and the encampment will last during the entire six weeks, ending Sept. 10. The formal opening of the centennial celebration will take place to-morrow, Founders' Day. There will be a grand parade of civic and military organizations, the most brilliant affair of the kind ever witnessed in Cleveland. The oration of the day will be delivered by Gen. Joseph R. Hawley of Connecticut. Addresses will be delivered by Gov. Coffin of Connecticut, Gov. Bushnell of Ohio, Major William McKinley and others. A grand historical pageant consisting of twenty-four floats, representing "The Passing of the Century," will be the spectacle of the streets to-morrow evening, and a grand reception and centennial ball will succeed it at the Gray's armory. Friday, July 24, will be Wheelmen's Day, and the largest bicycle parade ever seen in the world will form in the streets of this city. The succeeding weeks will be interspersed with events of public interest.

A PLACE FOR CARLISLE.

Reported That He Will Fill the Next Supreme Court Vacancy.

Washington, July 21.—It is currently reported that Secretary Carlisle is to receive the next appointment to the supreme court bench, should a vacancy occur during the present administration, and it is not at all unlikely that Judge Field, in consideration of his precarious health, may avail himself of the privilege of retirement, to which he has long been entitled. It was generally understood at the time of the last vacancy in the supreme court that Secretary Carlisle would have been named for the place but for the reason that his appointment to the court in the midst of his term as secretary of the treasury would have been taken up by the opponents of the administration as an imputation upon the secretary's conduct of his great office. Another reason was Mr. Carlisle's personal wishes. He was not without presidential ambitions, and the supreme bench seemed like a place to go into retreat. Both of these objections to the appointment of Mr. Carlisle have now passed away. His term of office as secretary of the treasury is so near an end that no inference could be made should he now relinquish it.

YELLOW FEVER IN CUBA.

25,000 Invalids in the Spanish Army and the Ratio of Deaths Increasing.

Madrid, July 21.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that during the last ten days of June there were 8,000 invalids in the Spanish army in Cuba, of which number 1,300 were suffering from yellow fever. The dispatch adds that the ratio of deaths is increasing.

Death of Capt. J. T. Newhall.

Lynn, Mass., July 21.—Capt. J. T. Newhall, proprietor of the Lynn Transcript, who died at his home in this city yesterday, after an illness of nearly two weeks, was one of the best known newspaper men of the city and was born in Lynn, Dec. 12, 1831. He was a war veteran, a member of the common council in 1864, 1876, 1877 and 1878, for the last three years being president of the board.

Denial by Standard Oil Company.

New York, July 21.—High officers of the Standard Oil company in this city say that the various reports telegraphed from Russia and Berlin to the effect that the Standard company has purchased some of the shares of Nobel Brothers, the Russian oil merchants, are entirely without foundation. They say the Standard has made no attempt to acquire any property of any sort in Russia.

Thanks from Queen Victoria.

London, July 21.—The queen, through United States Ambassador Bayard, will send an expression of her thanks to the citizens of Ocala, Fla., for the kindly sentiments contained in an address accompanying some leaves from a magnolia tree which the people of Ocala recently planted and dedicated to her majesty.

Cruise of the Gould Yacht.

Boston, July 21.—The steam yacht Atalanta, with George Gould, his wife and children and a few invited guests on board, which arrived here yesterday from New York on a cruise to the northward, will continue her journey to-day. She will touch at Portland, Bar Harbor and Halifax, N. S.

Vanderbilt Believed To Be Out of Danger.

New York, July 21.—This morning Mr. Vanderbilt was resting quietly and had passed a comfortable night. The members of the family now regard Mr. Vanderbilt as out of danger.

FIGHT OVER BRYAN

"Middle of the Road" Men Seem To Have Lost Ground.

POPULIST SITUATION THIS MORNING

The Democratic Nominee's Boom Being Skillfully Handled at St. Louis by Chairman Jones—Convention Will Probably Endorse Bryan.

St. Louis, July 21.—There is little change in the situation in populist circles this morning, except, perhaps, that the "middle of the road men" appear to have lost ground. Mr. Taubeneck has not been successful in holding the members of the executive committee of the populist national committee in line for an independent nomination by the convention. George F. Washburn of Massachusetts, one of them, is out in a statement unequivocally declaring for the endorsement of Bryan. While the result of Sunday night's conference has had the effect of discouraging Chairman Taubeneck, "Cyclone Davis, Sergeant-at-Arms McDowell and other opponents of the proposition to nominate or indorse Bryan by the populist convention, they have not wholly given up the fight. They find comfort in the declaration of Secretary McParlin of the New York populist committee, that the New York delegates will not fuse with the democrats nor support Bryan. "The populists won't be a tail to any democratic kite," said he. They are also encouraged by the situation in Iowa, where, notwithstanding Gen. Weaver's position, the delegation is divided upon the question of endorsing Bryan, or of making an independent nomination. This fact is something in the nature of a discovery, for it has been conceded all along that the northwest would solidly support the demand for Bryan's endorsement.

Bryan's Boom Skilfully Handled.

Although the Bryan propaganda is receiving the support of many of the populist leaders the real work of advancing his interests has been entrusted of Senator Jones of Arkansas, the chairman of the national democratic committee. It must said for Jones that he is engineering the Bryan boom skilfully, and it is none the less skilful because the senator chooses to remain quietly in the background.

Opposed To Endorsing the Chicago Ticket.

Paducah, Ky., July 21.—The populist convention yesterday afternoon adopted resolutions unalterably opposing the endorsement by the national convention of the people's party at St. Louis of the democratic platform and ticket nominated at Chicago, and also opposing the nomination of any man who will not endorse and advocate a straight populist platform.

FOR M'KINLEY'S ELECTION.

Business Men's Campaign Committee Begins Work at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 21.—A business men's general campaign committee has been started in this city for the purpose of promoting the election of McKinley. The projectors, who are well-known hereabouts and business men, claim that the replies received from the circular inviting co-operation indicate that 5,000 names will be enrolled here by the end of this week. Similar organizations have been effected in all the principal cities of the Union, and Rudolph Blankemburg, a leading merchant will go to Boston to-night to confer with gentlemen there with the view of organizing in that city. Later in the week he will go to New York.

DEMOCRATIC HEADQUARTERS.

The Place Not Yet Selected, But Washington Is Generally Favored.

Washington, July 21.—It can be stated on authority that no place has yet been selected as the headquarters of the democratic national committee, and none will be until Chairman Jones meets Mr. Bryan. Mr. Jones, after he leaves St. Louis, where he now is, will go to his home in Arkansas. From there he will go to Lincoln, Neb., and visit Mr. Bryan. The two will then confer on the subject. The choice for headquarters has narrowed down between Washington and Chicago, with the chances at present in favor of the former city, although it is altogether probable that a sub-headquarters may be established in Chicago.

Gov. Coffin and Staff Off for Ohio.

Hartford, July 21.—Gov. Coffin and staff left here for the Cleveland centennial to-day on a special car attached to the 12:05 p. m. express over the Boston & Albany road from Sprinfield. The party will reach Cleveland at 4:25 to-morrow morning, and in the afternoon in the military parade Gov. Coffin will ride mounted beside Gov Bushnell, their respective staffs following. The party will return on Friday.

Big Carpet Mills May Resume Next Week.

Philadelphia, July 21.—John Dobson, of the firm of J. & J. Dobson, expressed the opinion last evening that their big carpet and plush mills at the falls of Schuylkill, which shut down Saturday, throwing out of employment 1,500 hands, will probably resume next week, at least on part time. The reason for closing is the fact that the storehouses are overstocked.

Stetson Will Case.

Boston, July 21.—The John Stetson will case will come up again this afternoon. When it was called yesterday afternoon Adah Richmond was present in court, but Dr. Cilley, an important witness, is in the Maine woods on a vacation and cannot be notified.

FUNERAL OF EX-GOV. RUSSELL

General Demonstrations of Mourning and Respect in Cambridge.

Cambridge, Mass., July 21.—Thousands of mourners thronged this city yesterday to pay their last tribute of respect to Massachusetts' dead statesman, ex-Gov. William E. Russell. Sombre decorations were to be seen everywhere, upon buildings and in windows, and upon the lapels of hundreds of coats the picture of the dead ex-governor framed in black was worn as evidence of the general desire to join in an expression of honor to his memory. A great many visitors were in the city. After the private services at the residence, which consisted of prayer and a few words of sympathy and comfort, the family retired, and preparations for the removal of the body to the city hall were begun. When everything was in readiness ten of the classmates of Mr. Russell at Harvard, who had been chosen to perform the duty, took up the coffin and bore it to the hearse. A large number of floral offerings were placed in carriages, and then, under escort of sixteen Cambridge patrolmen, the procession moved towards the city hall. Thousands followed along the streets as the procession passed, and when the city hall was reached a vast crowd surrounded the place. The guard of honor, however, detailed from the first corps of cadets, company B, First regiment, and B, Fifth regiment, had formed a double line through the crowd, from the street to the rotunda, so that the body was carried to its resting place within the building without hindrance. As the coffin passed heads were bowed, and there were many manifestations of grief. Then for three hours solid lines of people passed the bier without a break. At 3 o'clock the doors were closed, and soon after the body was removed to the Shepard Memorial church, where at 4 o'clock the public funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. MacKenzie. The services were beautiful and impressive. After the sermon Dr. Mackenzie offered a brief prayer, the choir of boys sang another hymn and Dr. Mackenzie pronounced the benediction. Then as the last hymn was being sung the body was carried from the church by the body bearers, followed by the pall bearers, the three brothers and the three brothers-in-law of the deceased. Outside the church fully 50,000 persons were gathered. Mason, Garden and Waterhouse streets were roped off, and a detail of militia and the entire police force of Cambridge were deployed in and around the church. After the body had been removed from the church the female members of the family entered carriages on Mason street and the sad procession followed the remains out Brattle street past the late residence of the ex-governor to Mount Auburn cemetery, where interment was made in the lot on Grapevine avenue. President Cleveland, on the arm of Gov. Wolcott, left the church immediately after the body had been removed, and the crowd outside the church quickly dispersed after catching a glimpse of the president. The president, Secretary Thurber and Joseph Jefferson returned to Gray Gables on a train leaving Boston at 6:16.

BAYARD'S SUMMER VACATION.

The Ambassador Will Spend the Time Cruising on a Yacht.

London, July 21.—The Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, the American ambassador, left London last evening on a month's leave of absence. Part of his vacation will be spent on a yachting cruise in Norwegian waters.

Refuse To Work for $6 a Week.

New Bedford, Mass., July 21.—About eighty weavers on fine grades of cloth in the Whitman mills in this city, who have been getting $9 per week, have been notified that hereafter they will be paid by the piece. The weavers say they were to have fifty cents per cut and at this rate on four looms they can make not over $6 per week, and so they refuse to go in.

HE WOULD RUN NO RISKS.

Not Disposed to Hazard $1.75 on a Doubtful Seizure.

This is said to have happened in the wilds of Aroostook shortly after the Bangor & Aroostook railroad had commenced to exert its "modernizing influence" and bring to the newly-established express offices certain commodities, the sale of which or possession with intent to sell is contrary to the wise laws of the goodly commonwealth of Maine. A certain deputy sheriff was informed that there was deposited at a certain railroad station within his jurisdiction a package containing matter subject to confiscation. The railroad station, which also included the express office, was some distance from the village, and the minion of the law concluded to reconnoiter a little before taking the hard journey, perhaps for nothing. There was a telephone connection, and after communication was duly established the following conversation took place:

"Hello, there! Be you the express agent?"

"I be."

"Well, hain't there a box there marked for Mike Pommerlow?"

"I believe there is. Be you Mike?"

"No, I hain't Mike, but I'm a deputy sheriff, and I believe there's licker in that 'ere. Say, will ye let me seize it if I come over?"

"Will I let ye seize it? Why—"

The agent "tumbled" to use a horrid slang expression. He saw that the deputy was ignorant of the nature of the Maine law, and continued:

"Well, there's $1.75 due for charges, and if you'll pay that, seein' as how you've got the law on your side, I s'pose I'll have to stand by and see you seize."

"An' I don't seize unless I pay the express?"

"Don't nothin' go out of this office unless the charges are paid. Them's the orders."

"Wall, w-a-ll, but 'sposen I seize the box and tain't rum after all, do I get my $1.75 back?"

"N-n-no. We don't let out rum boxes on approval, nor I hain't got all day to talk, either."

"Well, now look here, young feller, you must think I'm a fool to pay express before I know whether it's rum or not. I don't seize nothin' but prepaid boxes, rum or no rum. Ye can't fool your Uncle Dudley outer no two dollars on onsartainties."

There was a sharp click on the other end of the line, and the express agent turned around with a grin just as a muddy buckboard drove up with the owner of the box in a highly nervous state. The charges were paid, the contraband disappeared around the bend in the road toward Caribou, and the agent took down his fowling piece and started down the track to shoot a few partridges from the telegraph wires.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

BABY'S BED.

Every Piece on It Should Be Fresh and Able to Be Laundered.

Most mothers will agree with me when I say there is nothing too pretty or too dainty for the baby's bed. Sometimes one finds that the little lace-trimmed cots, shown so temptingly in the shop windows, are too expensive for one's pocketbooks, but every one can provide neat and pretty furnishings, even though the sheets are of plain muslin, and the coverings only patch-work quilts.

One little lady of my acquaintance has a cradle furnished so nicely that perhaps a description of it will be of interest to the mothers. The mattress is just the size of the cradle, four inches thick, and filled with hair. This is covered with a muslin slip, made to fit it exactly, and buttoned at one end. When this becomes soiled it is easy to slip it off and exchange it for a fresh one, and in that way the mattress is always quite clean. Next there is a quilted pad, then the sheet, which is of fine white muslin, with a two-inch hem-stitched hem, all around it.

The upper sheet is just like the lower one. The soft white woolen blanket has a hem one inch deep all around it, feather-stitched with Asiatic twisted embroidery silk in pale blue. There was a soft feather pillow, with a slip of white linen, finished at the bottom with a two-inch hem, also hemstitched.

A piece of white canvas, of the proper size, was purchased from a dealer in fancy work materials, and used for a spread. Threads were drawn all around it to form a deep fringe. In the center the mother embroidered a monogram three inches long, in white and blue Roman floss. Blue and white violets scattered over the thread were worked with Asiatic filo silk in their natural colors, using two shades of green for the leaves. This is one of the handsomest threads I have ever seen, and, like everything else about the bed, it can be washed any number of times, and will look none the worse for it.—Philadelphia Press.

Maryland Biscuit.

Ten cups of flour, one cup of lard (butter or drippings may be used), two small teaspoonfuls of salt; mix with cold water to a stiff dough; knead 20 minutes. Now comes the difficult part. Spread out the dough and pound it with a rolling pin, club or mallet until you are exhausted. Then call in a strong colored man and order him to work over it with a club or the flat part of an ax until he is exhausted. Cut out the biscuits with a small cutter, place them in a hot greased tin without touching each other, and bake in a quick oven. —Boston Globe.

Frosted Apple Pie.

Make an ordinary apple pie, leaving off the upper crust. When baked, beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, add one tablespoonful of powdered sugar, spread over the top of the pie and place in the oven until a delicate brown. —N. Y. Ledger.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM

Condition of the National Treasury Not Considered Serious.

VIEWS OF J. P. MORGAN AND OTHERS

Newspaper Talk About the Decline of the Gold Reserve Largely Responsible for the Scare—Wall Street, However, Panicky.

New York, July 21.—The stock market continues panicky, and the pressure to sell has been increased by withdrawals of gold on a large scale. Nearly every stock on the list has suffered since yesterday, but the "Granger Railways" were most conspicuously weak. Some of the industrials and so-called specialties also went off abruptly. There were large sales of government bonds yesterday, especially of the latest issue of fours, but there was no material decline in price. At the close of business last evening gold to the amount of $3,030,000 had been engaged at the sub-treasury for the day for shipment, and it was expected that more would be taken today. All the gold will go to Germany, and it is expected that more will be shipped on Thurs- The bears have been actively at work, endeavoring to create an impression that the gold withdrawals indicated an alarming condition of affairs, and that the government would be unable to sell bonds for the purpose of replenishing the gold reserve. As the treasury gold reserve stands to-day at $90,000,000 (round figures), after deducting yesterday's withdrawals for shipment, the condition of the treasury is not considered serious, or such as warrants the suggestion that it is necessary for the treasury to sell bonds now in order to replenish the gold reserve. J. Pierpont Morgan, when questioned on the subject, said he thought the government would have no particular difficulty selling bonds at this time for the purpose of replenishing the gold reserve if it wanted to do so. "At what price?" he was asked.

No Cause for Alarm.

"Ah, that is another question," he quickly replied, and then added: "I have no doubt, however, that they could sell bonds at a fair price now." Continuing he said: "But it is very inexpedient to talk of an issue of bonds at this time. In continuing to discuss the gold reserve the papers do more harm than all the free-silver men put together. If the papers would only stop talking about the condition of the treasury and the gold reserve things would not be so bad." "Is there anything, any bad news, Mr. Morgan, before the people to account for the great decline in prices?" "No, on the contrary, the conditions, outside of the political question, are all favorable. Crops are good, railroad receipts have increased, and the railroad management is better." Well known bank officers concurred in the views expressed by Mr. Morgan and their opinions were practically expressed by Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National bank and a member of the clearing house committee. In reply to the question whether any action was likely to be taken by the associated banks with reference to the gold shipments and the decrease in the treasury's gold reserve, Mr. Cannon said: "I regret, of course, to see these shipments at this time, but there is no reason for people getting nervous or for timid people to sacrifice their securities. With $90,000,000 of gold in the treasury, I am not worrying about the condition of the treasury, and I see no cause for other people worrying. We have a low range of prices just at this time, it is true, but we have an easy money market without any disturbance in it, and therefore I see no immediate cause for alarm."

WILL ISSUE NO MORE GOLD.

Kansas City Banks Fear Depositors Intended To Withdraw To Hoard.

Kansas City, Mo., July 21.—All Kansas City banks have ceased issuing gold, either in exchange for bills as payment of checks or withdrawals of deposits. Cashier Rule of the Bank of Commerce, who has just returned from St. Louis, said the banks there will take the same action. The reason given by the bankers here for this move is that it was the evident intention of many depositors to withdraw their deposits in gold and hoard the yellow metal, in the belief that it will go to a premium.

Bryan and Sewall Club at New York.

New York, July 21.—The first Bryan and Sewall club in this city was organized last night at the office of congressman William Sulzer. There were about 150 persons present when the meeting and before the meeting adjourned Congressman William Sulzer announced that 655 men had enrolled themselves as members of the new club. A mass meeting to ratify the ticket will be held in the near future at a time and place to be named hereafter.

Charged with Arson.

New Haven, Conn., July 21.—George Smith and William Beach of West Haven, charged with setting several fires in that place last winter, have been bound over to the superior court in September. They are unable to furnish bonds.

Six thousand dollars ought to well provide for any emergencies which may arise in finishing the sewer system.

The Populist State Convention will be held in Newark during the first week in August, when Presidential electors will be chosen and candidates for Congress be nominated.

Plainfield is the only town in Union county that shows an increased valuation during the last year. This is caused by the numerous municipal improvements.

Mrs. J. E. Cobb, of Duer street, and her sister, Mrs. C. G. Wood, of Lincoln place, are spending a few weeks with friends in Lewis and Oneida counties, New York State.

The Tribune this morning says that Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, will probably be renominated in the Eighth Congressional district as there is no doubt of the support of Union county, and in all probability the leaders in Bayonne will rally to his candidacy.

The statistician of the News, aided by Councilman Barrows, indulged in a little figuring yesterday in the endeavor to create the impression that the night lunch furnished to the police force was not an extravagant and needless item of city expense. It is immaterial whether the lunch costs the city $900 or $400. It is just as wrong to spend a small sum for the lunch as it is a large sum. It is the principle of government which the Press protests against.

California has a Manufacturers' and Producers' Association which is seeking to realize one of the tenets of the high protectionists—a home market for home products. In addition to creating a sentiment and a preference for home products, it has adopted a trade-mark for use by its members, and is in a position to prosecute those who use such trade-mark without license from the association. Now, as a further appeal to prejudice, the association has decided to refuse a license to any manufacturer or producer who does not employ exclusively free white labor. Chinese labor is put in the same category with convict labor.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Della Dunn, of Dunellen, was the guest Sunday of Plainfield relatives.

Miss Lottie Ryno, of Dunellen, spent yesterday in town with her friends.

—Work will probably be started this week on the new Lincoln School building.

Borough Councilman Peck has returned from a business trip to Massachusetts.

Mrs. Mac Murray, of East Front street, is reported as being slightly improved.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Laire, of East Fifth street, are entertaining out of town friends.

Miss Nettie Goff, of Third and Liberty streets, has been visiting friends in Elizabeth.

Eugene O'Reilly, of East Second street, is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

Miss Alice Biglow, of New York, has returned home after a pleasant visit in town.

The Misses Manning, of Dunellen avenue, are entertaining friends from out of town.

Rev. J. L. Craig, of Cokesbury, Hunterdon county, is the guest of Plainfield friends.

W. G. Hockridge, of East Fifth street, is entertaining some out of town friends.

Mrs. Henry Lapsley, of 816 First place, is stopping at "Shadow Farm," Wakefield, R. I.

Miss Jennie Simpson, of West Front street, has returned after a visit in Philadelphia.

Miss Jennie Simpson, of West Front street, has returned from a visit with Philadelphia relatives.

Mrs. Utter and daughter, Miss Jessie Utter, of East Sixth street, are stopping at Long Branch.

Miss Adriene Allison, of Brooklyn, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Augustus C. Trust, of Somerset street.

Wm. T. Newman, of West Second street, is spending the week with Dr. Wm. Newman, of Brooklyn.

F. C. Langhorne and family, of Putnam avenue, are now sojourning at Alburg, Vt., and on August 1st they go to Phillipsburg, Canada.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

As the inflatus may move me I shall write for this column observations of life as viewed from my personal standpoint. Whatever opinions or criticisms I offer will be individualisms. The Press need not be held responsible for them. I will fight my own duels.

* * * * * * *

By the grace of the Democrats the Populists are holding an important convention in St. Louis.

* * * * * * *

"Teekay" Keller told me yesterday that there was a nauseating stench arising from the sewer beds on Sunday, which permeated the air even as far away as the railroad. Can the predictions of what we at one time considered the pessimists and obstructionists be coming true? I appeal to The Dunellen Call for a decision. Editor Day was an expert in the chatechism of this method of sewage disposal.

* * * * * * *

My local pride is injured when I observe that no Plainfield policeman is mentioned in connection with the "bicycle cop" races to be held at Manhattan Beach next Saturday. Can it be that the reputation of the local bicycle cop has not yet permeated the outer world, or is it the proverbial modesty of the guardian of the Colorado of the East that restrains him from entering into a public event where honor is to be awarded without some coaxing on the part of his admirers? We know it is not because he thinks his scorching abilities are inferior to those dandies of the Boulevard and Riverside drive of the metropolis. Who, forsooth, will stand on the declaration that our Sergeant is not possessed of a sinewy and supple pair of limbs, and a grim determination to do or die in anything he undertakes? Would not he or Roundsman Frederickson, the latter ripe with fame and experienced in chasing evil-doers over treacherous roadways, prove worthy defenders of the quality of the Plainfield mounted bicycop against similarly qualified brethren of New York, Brooklyn or Newark? I most emphatically say yes. Again, I remark, my pride is crushed to think that no Plainfield officer is to pedal in this momentous event of wheeldom.

Sooner or later the attention of the overlastingly oppressed taxpayer is to be attracted to the wholesale arrest by the city police of the car bumper "tourist." The gentleman in distress who travels by the freight and coal trains of the Central railroad is being nabbed with daily and nightly frequency by the police and brought before Cadi DeMeza, where, if his case be one in which there is a strain of real and unavoidable hardluck, he is sent on his way to steal more rides, while if his story is not tangible in all its component parts, he goes "down the road," and recuperates with Warden Blore for from ten to sixty days at an expense to the city. Considered legally, all this is right, but considered practically, why the wherefor? These tramps are hauled off the trains and made an expense to the city when they have no idea of stopping here, but are only intent in getting through to some big city where work will be more plentiful or where their natural wits will bring them a living and at the same time afford them opportunity to enjoy a few of the delights of their caste which the prosaicness of a town like Plainfield does not provide. If these men were intent on stopping here and making general nuisances and menances of themselves, why there would be no ground for a complaint. But since they are bound for places elsewhere, it seems that this exertion on the part of the police is a little needless, if the taxpayers pocketbook is considered. Already a Newark judge has found it necessary to caution the police against the indiscriminate arrest of persons found stealing rides on railroads. And his advice can be commended to the officials of this city.

Well, I see those musical, hallejuah "Victory Boys" of the Salvation Army are to farewell tonight. All of us people on the ragged edge of the world who have assembled avast Uncle Dan's livery emporium each evening at dusk and listened to the melodies of voice orinstrument will be sorry to have them depart. Even if they haven't converted us, they made us feel that their is some good in the world at least. Their novel manner of fighting Satan with simple testimonies, fervent prayers and lively music, ignoring the ridicule and sarcastic interruptions of some of the motley crowd who are attracted by their presence, commends them to us as being worthy of respect and whatever support we can afford. I'll venture the statement that a pedigree of each of the boys would provide a lively and interesting tale, but whatever they have been in the past, they are all right now.

* * * * * * *

In this Republican citadel, where protection has been the political slogan, it will seem odd if there isn't a livel protest against the invasion of an itinerant combination who are to bring a carload of fish from Seabright sidetrack them at the North Avenue station and dispose of them at a price of whatever the demand will warrant. Here we have half a dozen or more established sea food markets in the city, all paying taxes and contributing their support to the city. It is a strange anomaly of government, considered from a G. O. P. standpoint.

Well Known Man Dead.

Lawrence Collins, formerly of Scotch Plains, died at his home, 706 East One Hundred and Sixty-Fourth street, New York city, last evening after a long illness. He was forty-nine years old and was one of the oldest residents of Scotch Plains. About two years ago he moved to New York. While here he was engaged as an engineer at the fur mills, and for some time he held the same position at Scott's Press Works, Plainfield. He was the only son left of a family of eight. He leaves a wife, who lives in this place. Mr. Collins was reputed to be worth considerable money and he left a testament which will be of benefit to St. Mary's church. The funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's church, at Plainfield.

ONE DISEASE AND ONE REMEDY.

"The art of painting," said Millais, "consists in selecting the right colors and putting them in the right place." "The way to win a battle," said Napoleon, "is to mass your troops at the critical moment against the weakest spot in the enemy's line." "The way to cure many ailments," said the great Dr. Abercrombie, "is to purify the poisoned spring in which they arise generally the torpid and inflamed digestive system."

Thus wisdom and experience simplify and condense. Thus the Shakers of Mount Lebanon reasoned when they sought, and finally found a remedy for indigestion and dyspepsia. Where one person has something else, they argued, a thousand have this. To cure this alone will almost rid the world of sickness. Why should we vex ourselves with confusing definitions? A good digestion is life and health; a bad one disease and death. Hence, from the healing and stimulating mountain herbs, they extracted the principles which make the Shaker Digestive Cordial the rarest and most effective of medicines for one disease, and one only, indigestion and dyspepsia.

Do you suffer from any of these miserable feelings? — depression of spirits, heaviness and pain in the stomach after meals, bad taste in the mouth, wind in the bowels, irritable disposition, nervous weakness and alarm, worry and weariness, costiveness or irregularity of the bowels, nausea, palpitation, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite and sleep, dry skin, etc.?

Don't indulge in fifty foolish fancies. You have indigestion and dyspepsia and nothing else. Set the disordered stomach right with the one medicine which will surely do it. Shaker Digestive Cordial and these symptoms will vanish with their cause. A good effect will follow the first doses. Even chronic cases soon yield.

Test the cordial, at practically no cost, by taking a ten-cent bottle. For sale by nearly all druggists.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

FATED WITH ACCIDENTS

A SERIES OF MISHAPS MARKS LIFE IN THE BOROUGH.

Expensive Window Glass Shattered, a Load of Ice Slides Out of the Wagon, and Fractious Horses Cause Excitement.

A series of accidents have happened in the borough since yesterday, and that little community now bids fair to being a rival of this city.

Yesterday afternoon the large fanlight over the doors at Smalley Bros. meat market fell and broke the pane of glass, which is very expensive. A few minutes later Coddington's loaded ice wagon turned from Somerset street into Race street and nearly all of the ice found its level in the roadway. This morning a German woman who sells milk left her horse tied on Sycamore avenue while she delivered milk to a customer. The horse was tied with the reins, and during the owner's absence the flies performed good work.

This worried the beast and before he realized what had happened he found himself tangled up in the harness and lying in the road. Borough Clerk Arnold was passing and he kindly assisted the owner, who had come back, in extricating the horse from his trouble and placing him on his feet.

A little later two boys, sons of Jeary Rowe, of Grove street, started out with a mustang and a wagon to peddle fruit and vetables. They had gone but a short distance when the fractious steed began to make trouble. The animal kicked, turned the wagon around a few times, broke the trace, threw the boys out, and raised mischief in general. The boys were not injured, neither did the animal get away. The trip was necessarily postponed.

God Gave Us Two Kidneys

Instead of one.

It was for a purpose.

The Kidneys are very important organs, for upon their activity depends our health. They are the scavengers and the sewers of the body. To their lot falls the duty of constantly filtering all poisons and impurities out of our blood by way of the urine.

They work every minute, every second, day and night.

They work while we sleep.

Dr. Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills make them strong and healthy, and keep them constantly working for our good.

Hard drinkers and tobacco users need these pills, for they are putting an extra labor on their Kidneys.

Every poison that goes into the body should come out.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

James C. Smith, of Elmwood place, has returned from a two-weeks visit in Newark.

Mrs. Charles Matthews, of Grove street, left this morning for a stay at Mt. Pocono.

Dr. M. A. Carman, of Franklin place, has returned from an outing in the Adirondacks.

Ex-Councilman F. E. Marsh, of Madison avenue, returned from Mt. Pocono, Pa, yesterday.

Mrs. Wm. Addis and daughter, Miss Jennie Addis, of Orange street, are enjoying their summer vacation out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Naylor, who were recently married, have postponed their wedding trip to Saratoga for a time.

—Justice Newcorn rendered his decision yesterday morning in the case of Smith against Moore, in favor of the plaintiff.

Asa Collier and family, of East Sixth street, have returned after an outing spent at Asbury Park and Atlantic City.

Joseph Apgar, who has been visiting at the home of J. P. Laire, of East Fifth street, has returned to his home at Annandale.

Miss Florence Robinson, of Paterson, who has been visiting Miss Charlotte DeMeza, of West Second street, has returned home.

Mrs. Frank Vanderhoff and son, of West Front street, have gone to Newark for a two-weeks visit among relatives and friends.

Mrs. Edward E. Coffey and two children, of East Front street, will go to Ocean Grove tomorrow to be gone until September 1st.

Word has been received from Mr. and Mrs. Henry VanName, of Elmwood place, that they spent Sunday very enjoyably at the Thousand Islands.

Mrs. Henry Stevens, of West Third street, tendered a lawn party to about twenty young people Saturday afternoon, and they all seemed to enjoy themselves.

The Fact That Doctors

frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from catarrh is proof that catarrh is a local and climatic disease, and not a constitutional affection. Therefore, unless you can afford to leave home and business, you can find the remedy in Ely's Cream Balm. Applied directly to the seat of the disease, it effects instant relief and a satisfactory cure after a short continuance. No mercury nor injurious drug is contained in the Balm. 50 cents. All druggists.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints,—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. CHAPTER I.

There is seldom a lovelier vision vouchsafed to the world of opera than when the young Duchess des Sarazines Beauxlieux entered her box and paused a moment, her great cloak of sables, as it fell, making the whiteness of her shoulders more white. When she turned in her slender stateliness, and bent to return a salutation, her dress of palest primrose satin, threaded with gold, and the sudden blaze of her diamonds, made the more poetical of the spectators think of the young crescent moon in the dark sky that they had seen down the length of some avenue before they entered.

As for the diamonds she wore, they were simply marvelous—their size, their purity, their depth, their splendor—a collar clasped about her throat, with a sunburst on the breast, and a double fillet in the hair, immense and magnificent stones that seemed to breathe as she breathed, and to shine with a spirit of their own. There were, of course, none like them in the house, and she wore them as if they were a ribbon. "When she comes into her box," the old Chevalier St. Malo said, "I see the stars rise in the sky."

There had been innumerable contes told about those diamonds. They had been in the possession of the Beauxlieux since the time of the Crusades, for all that men knew to the contrary. The Beauxlieux of that day had spoiled the Saracens of them, barbaric and half-cut stones, one legend ran; others said that the Beauxlieux of the time of Charlemagne who had carried on the futile negotiations for the emperor's marriage to the Byzantine Princess Irene, had been enriched with them before leaving the east. It was certain that they had been recut and many times reset, and it was believed that no woman of all that proud and long-descended race had worn them with the grace and beauty and nonchalance of the present duchess. Tall, supple, her dark skin colorless and clear, her dark eyes like liquid light, her features modeled in ivory, as you might say, the waves of her black hair carved out of ebony, the delicate curve of the red lips opening on a smile that took one captive, it was hardly a wonder that the last duke had married her from her home in the Basses Pyrenees, without a portion.

The duke had gone down to his estates in the Islands with a couple of friends for some shooting. At least that was his errand ostensibly. In reality he had crossed the border to meet a representative of the Spanish court in some endeavor to compose the endless quarrels of the hostile kinspeople of the royal families and bring fresh forces to urge upon the hesitating king at home the necessity of strong measures. He was returning, unsuccessful, from his attempt, hoping to make the pass before dark, when his horse went lame just where the road wound below the wall of a single tower, much like the solitary peel towers of Ireland, set on a shelf of the mountain spur, and looking, in the dim light, as if it might be tenanted by bats and owls or by any company of brigands.

"Juste ciel!" exclaimed the duke. "The last misfortune has arrived to us! And the night coming on in the last quarter of the moon, here in this land of brigandage!"

"I would like better, I confess, to be guest at a little supper with la dame Blandie," said the chevalier. "How goes that, Etienne?"

"You have had little suppers and to spare, chevalier," was the reply. "Hark, what is that?"

It was a voice, a sweet fresh voice from somewhere high in the tower, singing an evening song to the Virgin, a young girl's voice it might be, as soft and clear as the twilight itself here among the hills, and that the echo took and refined away to a very voice of the air.

"Good!" said the duke. "If there are brigands where that voice is my purse is at their service. Come, is there a gate, a door, a postern, to this enchanted castle?"

And suddenly a wild alarm of baying and bellowing rose, drowning the singing voice, and an old man stood in the gate with his hounds leaping about him, and looked at the riders questioningly. Then bidding the dogs begone, he asked the strangers to ride into the paved court, dismount and be welcome.

"We are three gentlemen of France," said M. Etienne, "and one of our horses, as you see, has gone lame. Can you give us shelter for a night, and perhaps put us in the way of another mount tomorrow?"

"My house is yours," was the reply. "Take the bridles, Ambroise!" And another old man who followed him closed and barred the gate and led away the horses, while his master threw open the inner door and bade his guests enter.

As the duke glanced at the arms carved above the great door, "It is Baron Rene Vaux," he said, in a low tone to M. Etienne. "He was one of those that went wild over the Corsican. I remember hearing that our friends had stripped him of everything and dismissed him to—"

"Not so, monsieur," said the quick-eared old baron, towering over him. "He dismissed them to—their own masters!"

"A thousand pardons!" said the duke. "All the world knows the distinguished career of Baron Rene Vaux, and that he has only to take his place in the world and give allegiance to the king to have new honors thrust upon him. And none would greet him more eagerly there than his servant, Duke des Sarazines Beauxlieux," with an offer of the hand that the old baron could do no less than accept with as stately an air as it was given.

But the inside of the tower attested the truth of the duke's remark—the bare stone floors, the scant remnant of ancient furnishing, the old armor and the newer swords that were the only ornaments on the walls; and later, when they had rested and refreshed them a little, cleansed of the dust of their long riding, the coarse linen, the worn silver of the table and the simplicity of the repast served by a young woman in a peasant's dress.

"Was it she that we heard sing?" murmured the duke to M. Etienne.

"God forbid!" said M. Etienne. "This Olympe—is it they call her?—is one of the maids of this narrow household. That voice—it was the voice, if you remember, of the enchanted princess!"

"An enchanting voice, at all odds," said the duke.

And at that moment the door opened, and a young girl entered with candles in her hand. She advanced and placed them on the table, and turned and made a reverence to her father and his guests, letting the lids fall over two eyes as black as midnight stars, as soft and lustrous as May moons.

She wore a plain gown of white wool, with a silver girdle, and her long, black hair, plaited in great braids, fell over either shoulder in front nearly to her knees. "Grands Dieux!" murmured the duke again, "Am I back again in the days of my ancestors?"

"The enchanted princess!" he said to M. Etienne, afterward, as they walked up and down the courtyard with their cigars. "And of an enchanting beauty."

There was no animal to be found in the neighborhood next day that exactly suited the duke. And as the old baron made the party welcome, and was indeed very glad of their society in his loneliness, there was still no horse at the end of a week, while the lame one gave symptoms of recovery. The chevalier rode on with their dispatches, Ambroise going with him as far as the safer highways, and M. Etienne remaining with the duke,—the two spending a portion of every day hunting and adding a great store of game to the baron's larder.

There were those who were wont to say that there was a closer tie than appeared even in the remarkable resemblance between the duke and this constant companion of his, and that the duke's father had commended the younger man to the kind offices of his heir. Certainly no one knew anything with exactness of the antecedents of M. Etienne, other than that his education had been of the most complete, that he was a gentleman to the tips of his fingers, that his talents were exceptional, that he could have commanded fame and fortune in his chosen profession of surgery had he not preferred to be simply of the household of the duke. But the fact is, that if there were any bond of a common parentage across a bar sinister—and the resemblance was not so apparent after long acquaintance as at first, for M. Etienne was much the younger—yet neither the duke nor M. Etienne ever spoke of it to each other. But the duke was restless if he long lost sight of M. Etienne; and, as a usual thing, where the one was there always was his shadow.

Time is not very long to young men possessed by a passion; and although no one ever saw the young girl alone, yet the hours when they were not out with the baron and the dogs were endured for the sake of the mornings when she was to be found with Olympe watering her roses in the garden behind the tower, and of the evenings when for a half hour, it might be, she joined them in the hall or on the stone benches of the courtyard round the half-choked fountain. There was something about her that the duke had never observed before. That virgin air of innocence and truth rendered her illimitably remote and sacred. When he saw M. Etienne at last making more bold and walking beside her in the garden, he fancied she was hearing of the glories of the house of Beauxlieux and the excellences of the duke, as he knew M. Etienne sounded them to the old baron.

Somehow the duke could not make the headway here that M. Etienne did. The wall was one not to be broken down as with some other women. He saw there was but one course for him. And his impatience getting the better of caution, of any thought of second nuptials with princely houses and great dots, he made proposals to the astounded and well-pleased baron for his daughter's hand and an immediate marriage.

It was not to be thought that the Baron Rene Vaux, even at the prospect of his own increased loneliness, should hesitate before the offer of such a brilliant future for his only child; and he straightway told her to put herself in readiness, since the matter was arranged. There was no disinclination on his daughter's part; and surely no prettier bridal procession than hers ever wound up the mountain to the chapel, she seated on her gray donkey, around whose neck Olympe had hung a wreath of roses—the chances of lunching presently on which he was calculating with his long ears, M. Etienne leading him and walking by her side, her father and the duke following on foot and Ambroise and Olympe bringing up the rear. As they all stood before the altar, it was with an air of confiding innocence that she turned to M. Etienne. But her father, leaning on his staff just behind, stretched forward his long, gaunt hand and took hers and placed it in the hand of the duke, where it seemed to that gentleman like a melting snowflake. She had thought, until that moment, that it was M. Etienne who was the duke. An accident of introduction, the fact of her ignorance of correct phrases and her habit of using none, and perhaps some natural bias as well, were responsible for the mistake.

But what did it signify to a well-bred and dutiful young girl? Obedient to tradition and discipline, she quietly accepted the duke for her husband. She had no other choice, indeed; and the duke, returning to Paris, took the duchess with him.

And when she had accustomed herself to her fate, beginning with being charmed by the delights of the life her husband gave her, and by the prodigality that contrasted with the simplicity of her poor home, she ended by a sincere affection for the knightly gentleman, and held the house of Sarazines Beauxlieux as something greater than the house of France itself.

And when her son was born she seemed to forget she had any share in him herself, so proud and glad was she over this concentration and completion, this crystallization in one of all the glories of the house of Sarazines Beauxlieux. Only when she saw how black was his hair, hair, how dark his splendid baby loveliness, she had an aching self-remembrance that half the blood in the little princeling was her own, and that somewhere in her own line was a peasant strain to which she owed her beauty. For years she watched the child lest the strain should anywhere appear, and half the teaching that she gave him was concerning the greatness of his ancestry, the mightiness of his inheritance of renown, the grandeur it had given him and the duty he owed it in turn.

So absorbed was she in the magnitude and virtue of her husband's house, that even the downfall of the king gave the young duchess but little concern, since in her estimation there could be no downfall for the Ducs des Beauxlieux; and even when, after the many agitations, the new empire was proclaimed she regarded it as all a disturbance that would presently compose itself. For the sake of her father's love of the Corsican, as the duke phrased it, she might herself have looked with favor on the imperial order of things; but it was enough that her husband, loyal to his past, remained a violent partisan of the dethroned king, for her to shut herself up in superb seclusion from the canaille of the new riches and power.

And perhaps by strengthening his arrant contempt for the new people, the duchess herself, and all unwittingly, was in some measure the means of assisting the duke into the obscurity to which he presently found it best to retire.

There had been a grand occasion at the opera, to which the empress had given the exquisite charm and radiance of her presence, and the leaders among the women of the royalist party had urged the duke that the duchess might appear and show "that woman," as they always called her, that queen of farce, what the grande dame really was. And, entirely ignorant of their purpose, the duchess had, of course, assented to her husband's wish.

They rallied round her that night in all the splendor of their ancien regime, and the duchess was herself immeasurably magnificent. But, sooth to say, the gentle lady in the imperial box, with the gruesome man of power beside her, wore her diadem with as fine a grace and was a trifle more magnif-

Delicate Dress Goods.
Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

his claims grew every time [illegible] referred to the subject."

The Map a Forgery.

The line marked by Schomburgk on the maps published by himself and by the government had been declared at the outset to be the definition of the British claim and merely a basis for discussion. But now no decision is to be permitted in that line says Great Britain, as to territory within that line and all that will be submitted to arbitration is territory formerly claimed far outside of it. But even the Schomburgk line has been altered and extended. In every map and every description of it down to 1886, which was twenty years after his death, it was shown and described approximately as a north and south line, cutting across the Cuyani and across its southern basin. In 1886 the colonial office "discovered" that all maps were wrong, that Schomburgk's line went around by the great bend of the Cuyuni. It thereupon compelled Stanford to conceal his existing maps and to change his plate by erasing the boundary which went across the head waters of the Barima and across the Cuyuni, and by inserting another which went around the great bend, and the maps so changed in 1886 still bore the date 1875 and no other date.

Casts a Suspicious Reflection.

The new line thus invented or asserted in 1886 thus appeared as if it were the original line of 1875, supported by the authority of the surveyors, whose names still appeared on the map as before. This is perilously near the alteration of ancient land marks and spoliation of records. It evidently deceived Lord Salisbury, who, on Feb. 13, 1896, asserted it to be "the line surveyed by Sir R. Schomburgk in 1841." He did not survey this line in 1841 or in any other year. The Schomburgk line was originally nothing but a speculative attempt or proposal to form the subject of discussion and negotiation. It has not in itself the slightest probative or presumptive value. It was stated merely as a definition of the British claims, and the attempt, after it had stood forty years, to alter both its location and its character gives rise to reflections which it is not necessary to dwell upon. Nor would the recent attempt stand any better if some unpublished papers in the colonial office should lend a color of justification to it. The value of the line as a limitation of the British claim does not lie in the opinion of Schomburgk, but in the fact of its authoritative publication.

Line Changed After Gold Was Discovered.

It must also be pointed out that in 1850 the two nations agreed that there should be no occupation of the disputed territory by either, and that in 1884, and subsequently, Great Britain invaded it with an armed force and took possession up to the expanded Schomburgk line. On Feb. 20, 1887 Venezuela severed diplomatic relations with Great Britain. The investigations which are treated at some length demonstrate that Schomburgk died under the impression that he had drawn a north and south line, and the publications of his brother, who traveled with him, contain the same line. It is also shown that this line was never altered until the discoveries of gold outside the original line gave a new speculative value to the region.

RESOLUTIONS OF GRIEF.

Passed by the Massachusetts Executive Council on the Death of ex-Gov. Russell.

Boston, July 21.—The following are the resolutions passed yesterday afternoon by the executive council on the death of William E. Russell: "The death of ex-Gov. William E. Russell has brought profound sorrow to all the people of the commonwealth. They loved and trusted him and they admired and honored him. The sincerity of his convictions, the eloquence of his speech, his courage and earnestness, his courtesy of manner and kindness of heart made him an inspiring leader and a respected opponent. He was of pure character, great ability and singular charm. He had borne worthily the highest honors in the service of the commonwealth he loved and her respect and affection follow him to his untimely grave. His memory will linger in the hearts of those who knew him and will remain a permanent incentive to earnest and loyal citizenship. His sudden and painless death in the full vigor of his youthful manhood has robbed state and nation of honorable public service awaiting him in the path which he might yet have trodden, but cannot deprive him of the enduring distinction he had already won. The commonwealth places his name among those of her sons who have served her well and whose loss she mourns. The executive council of 1896 venture to offer the bereaved widow and family in their great sorrow the expression of its respectful and heartfelt sympathy."

Railway Statistics.

Washington, July 21.—The report of the interstate commerce commission for the year ending June 30, 1896, shows the total railway mileage in the country on that date to have been 180,657 miles, an increase of 1,948 miles. During the year fourteen roads were abandoned, nine merged, thirty-two reorganized and twenty-eight consolidated.

FORGERY, HE SAYS

Mr. Storrow's Venezuelan Brief Bad for Great Britain.

SCHOMBURGK LINE SECRETLY CHANGED

Lord Salisbury's Contention Shown To Be Mere Diplomatic Quibble and All of Pollock's Arguments of Law Are Turned Against His Case.

Washington, July 21.—Venezuela's brief, prepared by Counsel Storrow and just presented to the Venezuelan commission as well as the British counsel, as was announced in these dispatches yesterday is the most important paper that has yet appeared in the case. For the first time a true divisional line in accordance with the evidence is laid down, and Lord Salisbury's contention as to settlements is shown to be a mere diplomatic quibble utterly unsupported by law or fact and unworthy of any consideration by the commission. Mr. Storrow demonstrates that there has never been any British sovereignty in the disputed territory; that the Dutch never gained the slightest foothold in the Orinoco basin and therefore did not transfer what did not exist to Great Britain, and caps his strong arguments by demonstrating that the Schomburgk line as held by Lord Salisbury was a forgery perpetrated by the English government twenty years after Schomburgk's death.

No Claim Except Occupation.

Mr. Storrow says the British claim has confessedly no basis except occupation, and the rules of law applied even to the facts alleged not only give no support to the British attempt to extend the boundary, but are specifically and affirmatively fatal to it. He demolishes the so-called temporary post in the Cuyuni basin and at Barima point by showing that they were mere trading stations quickly destroyed by the Spanish, who maintained sovereignty over the region, and proves that the actual settlements of the Dutch and Spanish were always separated by 150 miles of forest.

First Invaded by Armed English Force.

Mr. Storrow then quotes authorities to support the two rules of law which designate where between these actual settlements, the boundary line shall run, as follows: "Where, between the settlements of two nations in a country otherwise wild, there are features which form a natural barrier or line of demarcation, and which in a long series of years have not been overpassed nor attempted to be overpassed by the actual settlements of either party, law makes that line the international boundary." The brief claims that such a tract and line exist and the Dutch and English settlements never attempted to pass it until the invasion of the armed English force at the gold discovery about a dozen years ago. The Spaniards always exercised dominion over this great unsettled tract by excluding other nations from it, and when the Dutch sought to take slaves from this section with the help of the Carribs, as the Dutch archives prove, the Spanish drove them out, destroying their stations on the upper Essequibo and imprisoned the Dutchmen.

Pollock's Arguments Turned Against Him.

Evidence is then adduced to turn all Prof. Pollock's arguments of law against his case. It is shown that Spain discovered the Essequibo and the Dutch fort on that river was built on the foundations of the older Spanish one; that the real road to the interior of the Cuyuni-Mazeruni basin is by way of the Spanish settlements on the Orinoco, and that it was these settlements which barred the way of Raleigh and all other seekers after El Dorado. When the English, as they have done, concede that the Spaniards controlled the Orinoco they lost the last argument upon which they could claim Barima. Mr. Storrow quotes Lord Stowell, the highest English authority, in the case of the Mississippi river to show that those who own the watershed thereby possess the delta, islands and shores below, though these are unfit for habitation and have never been inhabited. The claims of either the Dutch or the English to hold the mouth of the great Spanish river turns out to be utterly untenable, and Mr. Storrow says every English or Dutch historian who pretends to serious consideration of the matter re-echo without knowing it the judgment of Lord Stowell, which, oddly enough, escaped the notice of Prof. Pollock and Lord Salisbury.

Attacks the Schomburgk Line.

After citing the treaty of Aranjuez to show by both the literal translation and the British rendering that the Dutch made no claim to the controlling shore of the Orinoco Mr. Storrow goes for the Schomburgk line and traces its history. Incidentally he finds that the British Blue Book leaves part of a sentence out of Schomburgk's memoir, therein quoted, which shows that Schomburgk had no idea that his line would amount to anything until its termini at least were agreed upon by the disputants. Venezuela never agreed to any of it. After Barima had been suggested as one end of the line and Venezuela protested the assurance was given by Lord Palmerston that it was only to be considered "as a statement of the British claim," and subsequently by Lord Granville in 1881, Lord Aberdeen in 1884 and Lord Rosebery in 1885, offered to agree to lines which they declared "would secure to Venezuela the undisturbed possession at the mouth of the Orinoco." This was because Great Britain under those ministers, and in fact under all except Salisbury, felt that neither in law nor in good conscience could a claim to Barima be insisted upon. Mr. Storrow says: "Lord Salisbury is the only minister who insisted upon a different

CYCLING COMMENT.

Sinclair Stuart, of Park avenue, has purchased two Crescents of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co.

"Manager" William Sweeney, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co., "did" Asbury Park last Sunday.

Chas. Griebs, of the Keer & Martin Cycle Co., of Newark, rode over Sunday and was the guest of Plainfield friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McVey's young daughter enjoys riding a new wheel which was presented to her by her parents.

Mason W. Tyler, of West Seventh street, has purchased a lady's Triumph of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Voorhies, of Clinton avenue, rode their new tandem to Lake Hopatcong and Budd's Lake, yesterday.

"Manager" William Sweeney rode two miles yesterday in 4:45 on the county road. He was timed by C. C. Irby. He rode a Rambler wheel.

Mrs. Wm. J. Ford, of East Fourth street, now rides a Richmond wheel, purchased of H. E. Rider, the North avenue cycle and sporting goods dealer.

Fred Hargraves, bookkeeper for Rheume, left Saturday on his wheel to ride up to the Catskills and returned yesterday accompanied by his wife who has been staying up there.

Philip B. and George M. Macintyre, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co., left yesterday afternoon on their wheels for Mountain View in northern New Jersey on a fishing expedition. They leave there Wednesday afternoon and spend Thursday fishing on Prince's Bay.

Israel Jones, captain of the Victor Wheelmen and the genial colored janitor of the Park Club, now spends his spare time on the road preparing for the road race of the Victor Wheelmen which is to take place on August 30th. Jones is already more than a match for most of the scorchers he meets, and promises to be an important factor in the coming race.

The members of the New Jersey State Game and Fish Protective Society have gone to considerable time and expense in having had printed and posted the game and fish laws, yet some ill-disposed person or persons are going around tearing down the signs. For the information of the depraved it is stated that a fine of $50 and a year in States Prison is the penalty, and the Society has employed special agents to protect the signs.

LAWN TENNIS.

While the young men of this city who play tennis have had plenty of chances to distinguish themselves in the numerous tournaments held in Plainfield, the young women have been rather left out. There are a number, however, who are becoming quite expert at the game, and a very exciting match between two of them was played on the Westervelt avenue courts yesterday morning. The young women were Miss Mabelle B. Smith, of Westervelt avenue, and Miss Lydie Loizeaux, of Brook avenue. They have never met before, and the match was a very close one, Miss Smith winning 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

The trotter "Alonzo," belonging to Charles Johnson, of Dunellen, broke its record of 2:26 Saturday afternoon by trotting in 2:24 on Osborn's track near New Market.

Charles C. Brower, of Park avenue, ships two horses to Cornwall-on-the Hudson next Saturday. They are Arkell's "Highland Boy" and Fairbourn's "Lilly M" and "Whipple."

AROUND THE BASES.

A North Plainfield nine was defeated at Dunellen Saturday afternoon by a score of 8 to 5.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

ALMOST LOST HIS SIGHT

HENRY PIKER THE VIGTIM OF A LAMP EXPLOSION AT WESTFIELD.

Was Stooping Over a Lamp When it Exploded and Badly Scorched His Face—No Serious Results Anticpated.

Just as he was closing up his store after the usual Saturday evening rush, Henry Piker, of 538 West Front street, met with a serious accident by which, it was thought at first that he would lose his sight. Mr. Piker keeps a shoe store in Westfield while his father is a shoemaker with his establishment on Madison avenue.

Young Piker was just closing up the store and was taking down the large lamps that illuminated the interior. In taking them down one caught in his sleeve and was upset on the floor. A friend, who was in the store, seized it and threw it out into he yard. Piker followed and tried to smother the flames when the lamp exploded directly in front of his face.

His face and the side and top of his head were badly scorched and blistered by the flames, and it was thought that his eyes were effected, but it was found only the outer lid was burned. He was carried home by Henry Voehl, who keeps a bakery in Westfield, and this morning returned to his store, although his face was still in a terrible condition.

Odd Fellows Install.

The officers of Plainfield Lodge, No. 45, I. O. O. F., were installed last evening by District Deputy Grand Master Pocock and staff with all due ceremony. Quite a number of visitors were present despite the humid weather and the meeting was a very pleasant one.

A Divorce Sought For.

Papers were filed in the Court of Chancery today in the divorce case of Jennie Well vs. Robert Well. Mr. and Mrs. Wells are from Jersey City. City Judge Demeza represents Mrs. Wells, who is the petitioner of the divorce.

Mr. Moore voted against Mr. Ginna's amendment to make the fees $2,000, but all the members voted for the resolution offered to make the fees $6,000.

Mr. Frost then stated that everything was now turned over to the Commissioners on Assessments, and they could start work. Council then adjourned.

Miss Mary VanEps, of Franklin place, left town today for New Germantown, where she will attend the wedding of Miss Laing and T. C. Hegeman, which takes place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

OUR BOYS IN ATHENS

The Stars and Stripes at the Post of Honor—Brilliant Compliment to Americans.

The triumphs of the "barbarians" in the Olympic games are in general gallantly recognized by the spectators. At the entrance of the stadium there is a flagpole, at the foot of which the number of the victor is recorded at the close of each contest, and at the top of which the flag of his country is raised. This is an ingenious idea, which clearly marks the international character of the games. In turn the colors of all the great European nations have floated from this high post of honor; but the flag that has appeared there most frequently was the starry banner of the United States. And this is perfectly natural, because the Americans were the first to become enthusiastic over the Olympic games, and they were the only people who never had a doubt of their success.

The two teams which they sent to Athens displayed from the very commencement their athletic value, and especially the superiority of their training. The astonished Athenians suspected that they were professionals. They could not imagine that the young men with muscles so docile were students, eager to return to their studies, while modestly delighted at the thought that they have heightened the prestige of their universities.

When the American flag is unfurled in the stadium, extraordinary scenes are enacted. Above, on the highest rows, sailors jump up, wave their caps and cheer in the wildest fashion. They are the crews of the federal cruiser San Francisco. And below, near the famous souterrain where to-day, as in the days of old, the athletes enter and come out, there is a group that makes the most unearthly noise. This group is made up of the members of American teams and their friends of the American school at Athens, who greet the champion with the rallying cry of his club or of his college. Each transatlantic association has a distinctive cry, formed for the most part by the syllables of its name or by its initials, which are shouted out in measured time. Sailors and students join in these cries, moved by the same outburst of enthusiastic patriotism. At first the spectators laugh, but finally they applaud, because they find that the joy is sincere, and that the enthusiasm of youth runs all through these discordant manifestations.

The Olympic games do not constitute the first contact between America and Greece. There are other ties between them and distant lands besides those of the Cook tickets and the globe trotters. Americans, more perhaps than Europeans, look upon a pilgrimage to the Acropolis as the supreme satisfaction of every man of culture, and they regard it as the most abundant source of mental improvement. They are not imprisoned like us under the ruins of the Roman empire, so heavy and so complicated. They understand more easily the aerial organization of that ancient democracy of which their own presents more than one of resemblance. Under the impulse of this impression, they have founded in Athens a school of archaeology. This is a thing which is little known outside of Greece; and even here in Greece they do not appear to appreciate its far-reaching importance. The American colony established on the slopes of the Lykabettos, sustained by the voluntary contributions of American citizens, and devoted solely to science, opens up to the future of the United States infinite perspectives.—Journal des Debats.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

KING CARNIVAL TO REIGN

DETAILS OF THE GREAT EVENT NEXT TUESDAY EVENING.

The Daily Press Will Give a Prize to the Best Decorated Wheel Ridden by a Lady—Other Prizes Offered.

King Carnival will reign supreme in Plainfield next Tuesday evening if the weather be favorable and Plainfield will have a chance to show her neighbors what she is capable of. Councilman Frost's unique idea of uniting band concert, trolley party and bicycle parade, has struck the right chord and the "Midsummer Night's Festival" or rather the "Midsummer Night's Carnival," as the committee in charge have decided to call it, will be a grand and glorious success, judging from present prospects.

When Councilman Frost placed the management of the bicycle parade in the hands of Frank L. C. Martin, Plainfield's pioneer bicycle dealer, he made no mistake. Mr. Martin began to plan for the event at once. He selected Louis G. Timpson, F. R. Stevens, Charles B. Morse, M. F. Elderton, and N. R. Titsworth as a committee in arranging the parade and to act as marshal's aides on the night of the car, when he will be chief marshal.

The committee held a meeting last evening at Mr. Martin's office and made some of the preliminary arrangements for the event.

It was decided that the parade form at the corner of Crescent avenue and East Seventh street, starting at 8 o'clock and ride down Watchung avenue to join the car containing the band at the corner of North and Watchung avenues. The route of the parade has not been definitely selected, but it will be announced in tomorrow evening's Press. It will follow the line of the trolley most of the way, but will take in Watchung Park and Washington Park, Netherwood and the residence section on West Seventh and Eighth streets between Park and Grant avenues.

The offer of the Daily Press to give a handsome prize to the wheelwoman having the most uniquely decorated wheel in order to encourage decorations, was gladly received by the committee and it was also decided to give a prize to the wheelman having the most uniquely decorated wheel, and another to the rider having the most ridiculous get-up, including wheel decoration and costume.

While the first two prizes will give the cyclists a chance to display some of their artistic taste, the last will furnish plenty of opportunity for an overflow of all the humorous and witty ideas any of the riders may have.

It is but proper that the originator of all this pleasure, Councilman Geo. H. Frost, should head the list of judges. The two Mayors, Alex. Gilbert, of this city, and Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., of the borough, are representative men of "Greater Plainfield" and were chosen as the other two judges.

The cyclists will ride two by two except in the case of the highly decorated wheels, when they will go singly.

It was decided by the committee to divide the parade into four divisions. The First Division will be headed by the Plainfield Lady Cyclers and will include the lady riders of Plainfield and vicinity and their escorts. The Second Division will consist of clubs and organized associations. All the clubs of Plainfield and North Plainfield are requested to send their names and probable numbers to Chief Marshal Martin at once so that they may be arranged in order. Out of town clubs are invited to make Plainfield the destination of a run on Tuesday evening and, if notice is given, a place will be reserved for them in line.

The Third Division will consist of the colored riders of this city, headed by the Victor Wheelmen and the Oriental Bicycle Club.

The Fourth Division will be for the unattached wheelmen and will probably be the largest of all.

Every wheelman and wheelwoman in Plainfield and North Plainfield should turn out and assist in making Plainfield's first "Midsummer Night's Carnival" a great success. Everyone should make some attempt to decorate his or her wheel, while the citizens residing along the line of march, should illuminate as much as possible.

Great interest has been shown already in the novel project, and, should the weather be fine, the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" will long be remembered as the greatest event of the summer, and if this one proves to be a success, as it is sure to, the carnival will probably become an annual event of as much or more importance in this part of the state as the river carnivals of Cranford, Rahway or New Brunswick.

The committee decided that the divisions should form as follows: First Division on East Seventh street, Second Division on Crescent avenue, Third Division on Watchung avenue and Fourth Division on LaGrande avenue, all facing the square in front of the Crescent avenue church.

TOO BOOZY TO CARE MUCH

A DRUNK TAKES HIS SENTENCE AS A MATTER OF FACT.

Wanted to Talk to the Judge and When Repulsed, Nonchalently Asked for a Match and Went to Sleep in a Cell.

"Don't disturb a man when he's asleep," muttered John Hart as Roundsman Mattox fairly dragged him into the dingy little court room in the city rookery. Hart was arrested by that officer early this morning for being drunk and disorderly on West Second street. He had been trying to work all the saloons in the West End for drinks and had succeeded in several cases until he had reached a state of boozy independence. Mattox had almost carried him to the station house, for the man was too drunk and obstinate to walk, and locked him up until later in the morning when he was brought before City Judge DeMeza. After the officer had landed Hart in the courtroom, Hart staggered up to the rail with his hat cocked over one eye and scowled at the Judge.

"Take off your hat," sternly ordered the Judge, and finally it was removed.

The prisoner was then questioned and managed to tell that he was a metal worker from Belfast, Me., and had been last working in Massachusetts. The prisoner was a silent witness of his own condition and the Judge pronounced sentence, "$5 or twenty days, and if you come back to this city again you'll get six months."

"What?" drawled out the prisoner, in a way peculiar to intoxicated men, and he sprawled over the rail.

"Excuse me, officer," he expostulated, as Mattox started to lead him away, "I want—hic—to talk to the court." But the Roundsman deposited him in a cell.

"How old are you?" asked the officer.

"It don't make a —— bit of difference," responded the prisoner, who was already half asleep, "Gimme a match."

He went to Elizabeth this afternoon with Chief Grant.

RAIN SPOILED THE EXCURSION.

Unpropitious Weather Made Necessary the Postponement of St. Mary's Event.

A steady down pour of rain this morning effectually spoilt the excursion of St. Mary's church and Sunday-school today. The destination was Glen Island, but the weather was too unpropitious, and those in charge declared the excursion postponed and sent the train back to Jersey City. Despite the perfect deluge of water that was falling at the time, many of the would-be-excursionists showed up at the North avenue station all prepared to brave the elements, and even after the postponement of the excursion was announced waited about the station as if in hopes that the weather would change. It didn't, however, at that time, and finally all departed for their homes.

No Trace of This Martyr.

The New York Journal contained a story about William Goldthwaiter, a Russian, alleged to reside in this city, who says that he is going to return to his native land and serve out a sentence for his father, who has been sentenced to prison. The story says that the father is one of those arrested as a suspicious person at the time of the assassination of the Czar. A Press reporter was unable to find any such person in the city this morning, and at the postoffice it was said that they delivered mail to no one bearing that name. The police were unable to give any information about the man.

Died in New York, Interred Here.

The remains of the late Lawrence Collins, of New York, formerly of Scotch Plains, were brought to this city this morning and the funeral was held at St. Mary's church. A requiem mass was said. The interment took place in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Walpole, Drake, Emery, Lee, Mooney and McCauley.

Death of an Infant.

Joseph Connelly, the nine-months-old child of John and Mary Connelly, of Washington street, died yesterday morning from cholera infantum. The funeral services were held at the home of the child's parents this afternoon and interment took place at St. Mary's cemetery.

A Live Wire.

A live electric light wire on Jackson avenue broke early this morning during the heavy storm and was found in the road by Chief Marshal Wilson. The Electric Light Company was notified and soon repaired the break.

Plainfield Gains $280,000 in Taxable Valuation, and Leads all Other Union County Towns—The Official Figures.

The work of the county board of assessors was not finished Monday afternoon until four o'clock. The assessors completed their labor by fixing the county tax at a very slight advance over that of last year, 55 cents. The tax rate for Elizabeth will be $2.88, ten points lower than last year. This is due to the decreased appropriations.

Elizabeth has also gained $113,650 in taxable valuations, which is but half the amount gained in 1895 over 1894. The other large gains in the county are as follows: Plainfield, $280,000; Summit, $140,000; Cranford, $117,000. The total gain was $800,000.

In only one place was there a noticeable decrease, Rahway, where the valuations fell $18,000 below the figure of 1895.

The valuations, polls and apportionment of the county and school taxes as fixed by the assessors are as follows in Plainfield and nearby towns:

Plainfield—Real estate, $6,575,906; personal, $1,098,706; liabilities, $174,612; total, $7,500,000. Poll, 3,070; county tax, $38,752.00; school tax, $19,809.00

Fanwood—Real estate, $415,900; personal, $151,300; liabilities, $20,700; total, $546,500. Poll, 298; county tax, $2,823,08; school tax, $1,443,41.

Fanwood borough—Real estate, $188,400; personal, $35,600; liabilities, $15,400; total, $208,600. Poll, 44; county tax, $1,077.83; school tax, $550.95.

Mountainside—Real estate, $125,050; personal, $9,650; liabilities, $1,000; total, $133,700. Poll, 79; county tax, $690.82; school tax, $353 12

New Providence—Real estate, $215,225; personal, $18,775; liabilities, none; total, $270,000. Poll, 260; county tax, $1,395.09; school tax, $713.12.

Westfield—Real estate, $1,304,525; personal, $119,725; liabilities, $45,250; total, $1,379,000. Poll, 567; county tax, $7,125,29; school tax, $3,641.21.

FELL ON THE TRACK.

But Prompt Action Saved Him From the Wheels.

Railroad men are accustomed to narrow escapes but, after George Green, foreman for George O. Stevens & Company, the enterprising coal dealers, had a little experience Monday afternoon, every man in the crews of the two engines that were nearby, came over to shake hands with him and congratulate him on his escape.

A train of coal cars was being shifted about preparatory to being placed on Stevens & Company's trestle. Green was explaining how the cars should be arranged, and was standing on the step of the rear car, and as switch engine No. 30 pulled the cars past a switch, the engine stopped and the sudden bump of the car caused Green to lose his balance and fall directly on the rail. The train then started to return, the switch having been turned. As Green saw the car coming he put up his feet, resting them against the brake bar, and so he was pushed off the track. The train was stopped, as soon as the engineer saw something was wrong. But had not Green done this he would have been crushed beneath the wheels of the cars. As it was, his side was badly bruised by his fall on the rail. This was his second narrow escape from being run over by a coal train.

FRACTURED THE COLLARBONE.

Mrs. Horace Cunningham Seriously Hurt in a Runaway Yesterday.

Late yesterday afternoon while Mrs. Horace Cunningham, of 954 West Front street, was returning from a carriage ride she met with a severe accident. She was turning off of Front street into the driveway at her home when an electric car passed going at a good speed. The car frightened the horse and he gave a plunge, upsetting the wagon and throwing Mrs. Cunningham out with great force against a tree. The woman sustained painful injuries and had to be assisted to the house.

A physician was sent for and he learned that the collarbone was fractured. Proper treatment was given and the patient is doing as well as can be expected. The horse was not injured and the damage to the wagon was slight.

Crop Report.

TIPP GETS THREE YEARS

PENALTY PAID BY THOMPSON FOR SHOOTING HIS WIFE.

The Judge Was Lenient in Meting Out Justice to Him—By Good Behavior He Will Reduce His Time Nine Months.

Gilbert Thompson, known familiarly about the city as "Tipp, the Bootblack," who attempted to take the life of his wife by shooting her on July 2d, was brought up before Judge McCormick in County Court this morning and sentenced to three years in State's prison.

In passing sentence the Judge said that he would be lenient with the prisoner since certain phases of the case had been brought before him, and the fact that his wife would recover from the injuries inflicted on her.

Thompson will be taken to Trenton tomorrow to commence serving out the sentence. By good behavior in prison he will be able to reduce his sentence to two years and three months by commutation.

Mrs. Thompson is still confined to the hospital, but is improving rapidly Her face will be somewhat disfigured and one eye will be missing, this having been gouged out by the bullet.

Thompson was represented by Charles A. Reed, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, who made a strong plea for leniency when Thompson pleaded guilty last week.

A FALSE ALARM.

A Supposed Burning Church Was Only a Regular Fire.

Just as everybody had settled down this morning for a quiet, rainy day, there was a general stir when the loud tones of the fire alarm sounded box 25. The fire department turned out in short order and found that the alarm had been sent in because smoke was pouring out of the cupola on top of the Crescent Avenue church as it did several years when the church was partially burned. The firemen investigated and found the smoke came from a fire that is always built in the bottom of a ventilating flue so as to cause a draught.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

An Employe of Pond's Shop Struck in the Abdomen With a Stick.

Harry Scully, an employe of the Pond Machine Tool company, sustained an injury while at work yesterday afternoon, which leaves him in a very precarious condition. He was working at a lathe when one of the sticks used in the machine got out of position and struck Mr. Scully with full force in the abdomen. He was prostrated when found soon after, and was taken at once to the hospital.

This afternoon at 3:30 Dr. Long assisted by the hospital staff will make an examination, and it is thought that an operation may be necessary.

Jumped the Track.

One of the trolley cars while making a trip from the mountains last evening about 6:30, jumped the track in front of French's carriage factory, and before the car could be stopped it had almost reached the sidewalk. After working an hour and a half the car was finally replaced on the track. Several times previously cars have jumped the track at this same point, and it is said to be caused by a poor joint in the track.

TOLD PLAUSIBLE STORIES

FIVE MEN WHO FOUND A BED IN A FREIGHT CAR.

When Arraigned Before Judge DeMeza They Told What Appeared to be Hard Luck Stories and Were Then Discharged

While most of the readers of The Daily Press were at their comfortable homes with a roof over their heads to protect them from the heavy shower that passed over this city this morning about 2 o'clock, there were five wanderers tramping along the railroad. To protect themselves from the fury of the storm they all took refuge in a a train of empty freight cars that were standing on the siding near the North Avenue station, and there they were found by Patrolmen Saunders and Myers. They were arrested and locked up, and this morning were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. They were not a hard looking crowd, everyone looked like a hard working man, and their stories were of the same old strain, no work and therefore no money. They were not together, but met by chance last evening when the torrents of water began to fall.

The spokesman of the party was Wm T. Owen, 35 years old, a boilermaker from Atlanta, Georgia, on his way to Elizabethport. Adolph Hoffman was a soda-water man from Denver and had failed to find work at Long Branch. He was 48 years old. George Nelson, 38 years, was a carpenter in hard luck, returning to his home in Newark. John Bonko had spent part of his 22 years at Yonkers on the railroad and was looking for a job. The other man of the party was Robert Christi, from Nanticoke, Pa. He had been a coal miner, "but," he said, "I couldn't make an honest living there. We only had three shifts a week and last month I only made $11 and had to pay my month's board out of that. I just couldn't do it. I thought maybe I might find something to do around New York." He had an honest-looking face and he talked as if he had given up all hope.

The Judge was inclined to be lenient and suspended sentence on them after warning them to keep off the railroad as they would surely be arrested again. They thanked the Judge and started out again in the pouring rain.

A LARGE FUNERAL.

Several German Societies Attend the Funeral of the Late Eugene Hoerster.

The funeral services of the late Eugene Hoerster were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 from the house where a short service was conducted, and at 3 o'clock from the German Reformed church. The funeral was one of the largest ever held in the borough, which gave evidence that the departed was well known and well thought of. The services were in charge of Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the church. The Saengerbund Society, the Independent Scheutzen Corps and the German Beneficial Association were present and acted as an escort.

The church was filled to its utmost capacity and many were obliged to remain outside. Rev. Mr. Hauser offered prayer and read the Scriptures, after which a delegation from the singing section of the Saengerbunds rendered one of their impressive selections. Rev. Mr. Hauser then spoke at some length regarding the departed. Valuable truths were presented setting forth the fundamental principles upon which life is based. At the close of the remarks the singing section rendered another selection.

Those present were given an opportunity of looking upon him who had been their friend and acquaintance.

The floral tributes were very beautiful and costly. They consisted of a large harp, bearing the word "Brother," from the Saengerbunds; an anchor from the German Beneficial Association; a pillow, with the inscription "Comrade," from the Independent Scheutzen Corps; another pillow, with the word "Papa" inscribed, from the decedent's little daughter; a wreath from C. Treft, the Newark brewer; and several smaller wreaths from friends.

Interment was in North Plainfield.

The pall-bearers were Charles Schaefer, Otto Barry, Independent Scheutzen Corps; Charles Filber, Henry Reupert, German Beneficial Association; Frederick Bechtle, Jos. Haurand, Saengerbunds.

While the funeral cortege was entering and leaving the church, Professor Schroeder rendered a solemn funeral march.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION

GEORGE A. CHAPMAN TAKES UP THE SIDE OF GOLD.

He Draws Conclusions That Makes it Appear That to Adopt Free Coinage of Silver Would be Bad For All.

The questions which are decided by the election in November next are perhaps as vital to the welfare of this Nation as any which have ever come before the people, and, yet I meet men every day who do not in the least comprehend the financial question at issue. I have given considerable thought and study to questions of finance, and while I realize how very limited is my knowledge of this vast subject, I believe I do understand the elementary principles involved in the financial question which is now absorbing the attention of our people.

I venture, therefore, to present a simple explanation of the subject, hoping that it may serve to enlighten some of my fellow citizens who have had no opportunity to inform themselves.

"Free silver men pose as bimetallists and some of them claim that as the silver dollar is as good as the gold dollar in this country, so would it be if their free coinage plan was carried into execution. No statement could be further from the truth. Bimetallism, in the interpretation of the word as it is commonly used, contemplates the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold, both metals being legal tender for all debts. In other words, any person having silver or gold bullion may take it to the mint and have it coined into dollars free of charge, and all creditors must accept these dollars for their full face value, in discharge of debts due them. Under these conditions it would be impossible for both metals to remain in circulation permanently as money at any conceivable ratio, whether determined by international agreement or otherwise. The relative value of silver and gold is governed by the inexorable law of supply and demand, and therefore will fluctuate. So soon as one dollar should become more valuable than the other, it would cease to circulate as money, because men have the wisdom of the serpent, and insist upon paying their debts in the cheapest money which the law permits.

In 1792 Congress fixed the ratio for coinage at 15 to 1. That is, it declared that the silver dollar should contain 15 times more of silver than the gold dollar contained of gold. At this ratio the gold dollar proved to be the more valuable by about three per cent, and gold went out of circulation, leaving this country upon a silver basis for more than forty years.

In 1834 Congress changed the ratio of coinage to 16 to 1. At this ratio the silver dollar proved to be the more valuable by about three per cent., and from that time until 1873, silver dollars were not in circulation as money in this country. In 1873, Congress after prolonged debate repealed the law permitting the coinage of silver dollars, thus doing away with a law which had been obsolete for nearly forty years. And this was "the crime of 1873."

Both gold and silver remain in circulation in this country today, because the Government, by the use of its credit, arbitrarily maintains the parity between the metals. But this is made possible only because the amount of silver coin is limited. Men accept the silver dollar today at par because they believe, if no more silver is coined, the Government will be able to keep the silver dollars now in existence, exchangeable for gold dollars, notwithstanding the fact that the gold dollar is intrinsically much more valuable.

The financial plank in the Chicago platform proposes that any one, not only Americans, but any one in the world who has either gold or silver bullion, may bring it to the United States and have it coined, free of charge, into dollars, the relative quantity of metal in each to be as one ounce of gold to sixteen ounces of silver.

As an ounce of gold will buy today nearly thirty ounces of silver, no one will bring gold to be coined, but the whole world will rush to have fifty-three cents worth of silver stamped by our Government as a dollar. If a free coinage law should be passed, gold would go out of circulation immediately, producing a very serious contraction in the volume of the currency, and panic and general disaster would ensue. The only currency remaining in circulation would be based upon silver dollars now worth about fifty-three cents each. Who would be the principal sufferers? Clearly, those who are dependent upon fixed incomes; widows, orphans, pension-

TWO CONVENTIONS

Silver Party and Populists Meet To-day at St. Louis.

SMOOTH SAILING FOR THE FORMER

But the Populists Are Still Divided on the Question of Endorsing Bryan and Sewall—Both Sides Confident and Fun Is Expected.

St. Louis, July 22.—The Siamese twin conventions which meet here to-day in different halls, but at the same hour, have as the ligature that binds them together in a settled purpose only the free silver plank of the Chicago platform. There is no attempt to disguise the truth that on all other issues the two conventions will be hopelessly divided. The national silver party, whose call, issued Jan. 4, 1896, stated that the paramount issue it had to consider was: "The gold standard, gold bonds and bank currency on the one side, and the bi-mettalic standard, no bonds and government currency on the other." On this platform a representation of 1,318 votes was proposed for the "national silver convention," but not more than 300 of these straight silver delegates are recorded as present in the city, and scarcely more than that number was present when Dr. Mott of North Carolina called the convention of the silver men to order.

Smooth Sailing for Silver Party.

The representation of the people's party, or as it is generally termed the populist party of the United States, was established on a ratio which should have yielded 1,358 delegates and 656 delegates a total of 2,014. Chairman Taubeneck, who is not the least sanguine of the executive officers of the people's party, said this morning before the convention met that he did not expect a larger attendance than 1,000 delegates and alternates. The national silver party meets in what is known as the Music hall. Its course will be all plain sailing. It has only one purpose in view, the endorsement of free coinage of silver. It will listen with more or less attention to long scholarly addresses from Francis G. Newlands of Nevada, the silverite congressman, its chosen temporary president, and from William P. St. John of New York, ex-banker, who will be the permanent president. This body will in all probability follow its programme, which is to indorse the Chicago nominees on a silver platform, issue an address to the people, and either adjourn promptly or prolong the convention by long speeches until its more turbulent neighbor has concluded its proceedings.

Populists Divided.

The people's party assemble in the same hall which recently echoed with the name of McKinley as the republican nominee. As to what its course of procedure will be the claims of the two factions were this morning quite as divergent as they have ever been. The presence of Senator Jones of Arkansas, chairman of the democratic national executive committee, and his frequent interviews with prominent populist delegates has naturally given rise to rumors that a "deal" was on which would secure the endorsement of Bryan and Sewall by the populists and such a recognition of the people's party as would induce them to sink for the time being their own identity. Against this theory Mr. Taubeneck, chairman of the people's party, interposes the strongest kind of a disclaimer, asserting with vehemence that the populists intend to nominate candidates of their own upon a platform of their own.

Both Sides Confident.

There has been strong talk of nominating a southern populist for the second place on the ticket, even if Bryon should secure sufficient strength to be endorsed for first place. But shrewd manipulators who are managing matters say that "the tail goes with the hide," and that if they carry Bryan through, of which they have no doubt, Sewell will follow. The "middle-of-the-road" men, on the other hand, are claiming to have carried everything before them. They held a meeting last night and counted twenty states as with them in a determination not to endorse the Chicago ticket. But their opponents say that they counted all the recalcitrant Bryan men as representing their states, whereas the full delegation, if polled, would have been adverse to them.

Picturesque Gathering.

Both sides seem at loss to estimate the significance of the selection of senator Marion Butler of North Carolina by the national committee as the temporary chairman of the convention. He has been claimed by each faction, and appears not to have committed himself irrevocably to either. This may, perhaps, explain his unanimous election as the temporary presiding officer of the convention. That it will be a picturesque and curiously interesting gathering is already assured. Among those to be present are Gen. Weaver of Iowa and Mr. Streator of Illinois, both former candidates for the presidency on the populist ticket, and General Fields of Virginia, candidate four years ago for the vice-presidency. Eugene V. Debs, and his lieutent, Burns, who shared his imprisonment; Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, Mrs. Mary Ellen Lease, "Gen." Jacob S. Coxey, and Carl Brown—these and other possibilities will mingle with the grizzled wheat farmers of the west, cotton planters of the south, and the enthusiastic new converts from the eastern and middle states who go to make up this convention.

Senator Butler for Temporary Chairman.

By a unanimous vote and with no other candidate named, the populist national committee selected Senator Marion Butler of North Carolina for temporary chairman of the convention

Reformed Populists Oppose Bryan.

The reform press association, composed of populists and free silver newspapers, met in the headquarters of the Texas populists yesterday. A committee reported an address which was flat-footed for independent action by the populist convention. It denounced fusion or coalition with either of the old parties, and declared emphatically against the endorsement of Mr. Bryan. The reading of the address was followed by a stormy scene. It was put through with a rush, however, and the Kansas members of the association walked out of the room to emphasize their disapproval. They drew up the following resolution and attached their signatures thereto: "With the spirit of the resolution we are in accord, but believe that the only way to relieve the people of this country from goldbugism and McKinleyism is to nominate Bryan and Sewall on a populist platform.

Wants a Woman Suffrage Plank.

Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, who was one of the most emphatic bolters from the prohibition convention in Pittsburg, when the dissatisfied free coinage and woman suffrage advocates marched out of the hall, is here to urge upon the populist committee on resolutions the adoption of a woman suffrage and anti-saloon plank. Mr. Streator of Illinois, the people's party candidate for president in 1888, and James G. Field of Virginia, the candidate of the same party for vice-president four years ago, have come out in favor of the endorsement of Bryan and Sewall. The endorsement of Bryan by the silverite convention seems certain. The leaders of that party give this assurance, and are working hard with the populists to convert the doubtful delegates. A large number of the populists are demanding recognition of "some substantial character" from the Bryan people. No clear way to comply with their request has yet been suggested, but this does not alter the course of its promoters.

Senator Jones Views.

Jones of Arkansas, chairman of the national democratic committee, was an early riser this morning, but he was up none too soon to receive the populist delegates anxiously awaiting a conference. The Bryan forces outside the populist party have been materially strengthened by the arrival of Senator Cockrell, dem., of Missouri, and Senator Pettigrew, pop., of South Dakota and Congressman Towne, rep., of Minnesota, who were among those who walked out of the republican convention. None of the other bolting republican senators will be here, the republicans believing their position is sufficiently and clearly stated in the address sent from Colorado Monday. In addition to these men, Gov. Stone of Missouri and Senators Jones and Stewart of Nevada have given the democratic chairman energetic assistance in his efforts to steer the convention into the highway that leads into the democratic camp. Senator Jones was quite confident this morning. He said the endorsement of Bryan was the only logical thing to do, and he was thoroughly grounded in the belief that this would be the outcome of this convention.

Has Made No Promises.

In the course of his talk, Senator Jones denied that he had made any statement offering to place a certain number or any number of populists upon the democratic executive committee. He said: "No promises of any kind have been made by me, but I have said all the time that, in this fight for free silver, republicans democrats, populists, and silverites must stand together, and so far as I am personally concerned I propose to do all that I can to bring about this union of forces."

Blows Exchanged.

The contesting delegations from Illinois got mixed up in the hallway outside the room in which the national committee were hearing their respective claims last evening and blows were exhanged. The lie was passed, and in a second the two factions were mixed up on the floor. Dr. Taylor was thrown down twice. He used his fists to good advantage and landed several blows on the face of his opponent, Barnes. The men were pulled apart, but got together a second time. Dr. Taylor was thrown and several men piled up on top of him. There were threats of resorting to fire arms when the police arrived and restored order.

IS A MOLE RANCHER.

Curious Industry of a Californian That Pays Well with No Trouble.

"No, boys, it ain't money that makes my pockets bulge out that way, but it is the equivalent," remarked a gray-haired, gray-bearded rancher from Mendocino, as he took in the slack of a hay rope that did service for a belt.

"To tell the truth, my breeches pockets and my coat pockets, too, are pretty well lined with moleskins. Within the last year I have developed into a mole hunter, and it pays. I have several acres in strawberries at Ukiah, and they need considerable water. I used to put in a lot of time digging little trenches and turning water this way and that, but it was disappointing to go out the next day and find that I had irrigated a mole hole. I set a watch on the little pests and I soon learned their habits. Since then it is no trouble at all to get them.

"In the first place I found that a mole never comes straight to the top of the ground, but always at a slant, and you will see the ground agitated for some time before he throws up his hill. If you step within 20 feet of him when he comes to the top, he will instantly stop work and run. It's no use to try to catch him then.

"But a mole is the victim of habit. If he is disturbed at his work at two o'clock to-day he will not come back until exactly two o'clock to-morrow. You can set a watch by him and depend on its being right. Well, I watch around in my berry patch and take the time whenever I disturb Mr. Mole. The next day when it is time for him to come back I take my station near his hole. As soon as he throws up his little mound I plant my foot behind him and close up the hole. Then all I have to do is to scoop him out of the dirt and throw him into my pocket. I kill him, stretch his skin on a shingle, and a man here in the city pays one dollar apiece for them to make purses of." —San Francisco Post.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weekly Weather Bureau's Bulletin for Eastern and Middle States.

Washington, July 22.—The crop bulletin issued by the weather bureau for the past week says that the week has been generally favorable for growing crops in the principal agricultural states. New England—Rain needed; some barley has matured a week early; pastures drying. New York—Wheat, rye and some barley being harvested; some corn laid by; oats nearly ripe; damage to oats and corn by army worms continues. New Jersey—Corn is tasseling; melon crop in southwest counties seriously injured by lice, some fields plowed under; actual damage by army worm is small, newspaper accounts exaggerated; cutting of oats begun. Pennsylvania — Cultivated crops in good condition and have made rapid growth; most wheat and hay housed; large oat crop ripening and some harvested; army worms destructive in northern counties. Maryland—All growing crops still in good condition; peach shipments continue, but the best of the crop has not ripened.

VENEZUELAN MATTER.

House of Commons To Have a Chance To Discuss the Case.

London, July 22.—In the house of commons yesterday Sir William Vernon-Harcourt, the leader of the opposition in the house, asked if the government leader, the Hon. A. J. Balfour, would afford facilities for the discussion of the papers in the Venezuelan matter which were recently laid upon the table in the house of lords. Mr. Balfour said in reply that the expression of such a desire could not be ignored, but the negotiations anent Venezuela were still pending. He would, he added, confer with Sir William to see how it would be possible to meet his views.

FOR MEDICAL TREATMENT.

A Wounded Cuban Officer Arrives at New York—Brings Important Messages.

New York, July 22.—Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the Atlas line steamer Alene, from Kingston, Jamaica, was Rafael Perez, a Cuban officer who comes to this city for medical treatment. He held an important place in the insurgent army. He was shot in the eye, the bullet coming out through the cheek. He succeeded in reaching Kingston, where he took passage on the Alene. Perez, it is also reported, brings important dispatches to the Cuban junta here.

Wants a Foreign Corporation Enjoined.

Boston, July 22.—In the supreme court a petition was presented to Judge Knowlton and Assistant Attorney-General Hallowell, asking that the Boston Health company, a foreign corporation, doing business in the commonwealth, be enjoined from the prosecution of its business until it shall have complied with the statute of 1894 requiring foreign corporations to file at the state house a certified statement of its financial condition. The corporation is already three months behind time in the filing of this statement. The court issued an order of notice upon it returnable Friday.

Applications for New Railroads.

Albany, July 22.—The state railroad commission will give a hearing on Aug. 28 on the applications of two railroad companies which desire to construct their roads. One is the Syracuse and Suburban, which desires to construct a street surface road from Syracuse to Fayetteville and Manlius, and the other, the Newtown Creek Terminal company, which wants to construct a steam road along Newtown creek for the benefit of manufacturers along the creek.

Gould's Yacht Leaves Portland.

Portland, Me., July 22.—George J. Gould's steam yacht Atalanta, which arrived in this harbor yesterday and attracted a great deal of attention, after taking a supply of coal at once proceeded to Bar Harbor.

Insurance Company in Trouble.

Boston, July 22.—The supreme court has granted a petition for a receiver for the Guardian Life Insurance company of Boston. Liabilities, $6,000; assets, $1,500.

HUMOROUS.

—She—"You got the best of me when you married me." He—"The best was none too good, either."—Detroit Tribune.

—Bell—"Why did the old novels all end with: 'And they lived happily ever after?'" Nell—"Because the new woman was not known then."—N. Y. Herald.

—Johnny—"You're the meanest, hatefulest, spitefulest thing I know!" Tommy—"An' you're the crabbedest, uglist—" Father—"Boys, boys! You forget that your mother is in the room."—N. Y. Press.

—"Bobbie, you are perfectly awful to-day, and just when grandma is visiting us, too!" "Well, ma, it's only to please you. You told me the other day that you thought I kept my good manners for visitors only."—Harper's Bazar.

—Interesting Reading.—"What if I should cease to love you?" he asked in a moment of reckless abandon. "Then, dear, I should have your letters published as unique contributions to the literature of the century," was the soothing reply.—Detroit Free Press.

—"I guess I am stuck," said the answer-to-correspondents man. "What is it?" asked the rest of the force, in deep sympathy. "Girl writes to know which one of her fiances should have the preference in going with her to church—the first one or the second."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—Col. Carter was negotiating for the purchase of a farm, and the agent was commenting on the advantages of the property he had for sale. "One great feature of this farm," he said, "is the water. There is one of the best wells in the state there. The water has been analyzed over and—" "I have no doubt, suh," said the colonel, "that it is a good well. But I don't think I shall keep any live stock."—Washington Star.

ODDITIES OF ANIMALS.

Some Queer Features About Them Seldom Noticed by Observers.

Try it. Gather 10,000 of the threads spun by a full-grown spider, twist them together and see if they equal in substance the size of one of your hairs.

Oysters live ten to twelve years when they have the chance. In this country they don't get the chance.

Many horses are fond of beer, and to a tired horse a bottle of beer in his gruel is a great restorative. It acts as a "pick me up," and often makes a horse with no appetite eat freely. Brewers understand this, and that is one reason why their horses always seem to be in good condition.

The large horned beetle can carry 315 times its own weight. One has been known to walk away with a two and a quarter pound weight.

Live bees are sometimes shipped on ice so as to keep them dormant during the journey. This is particularly the case with bumblebees, which have been taken to New Zealand where they are useful in fertilizing the red clover that has been introduced into the colony.

The amount of light that can be obtained from fire flies is not generally known. These insects have two bright spots on their thorax and also brilliant wings on the abdomen, and give light sufficient to enable one to read at a little distance. Two or three placed in the center of a room will shed a soft light all over it. They are very common in Havana, Brazil, Guiana, Venezuela and Mexico. In those countries at night the natives affix the little creatures to their shoes, and thus obtain light to see the road and frighten away the snakes. Mexican women use them as jewels. They tie them in little gauze bags and put them in their hair or on their clothing. They keep them in wire cages and feed them on scraps of sugar cane.

Reynard is a knowing animal. The foxes are much tormented by fleas, but when the infliction becomes too severe they know how to get rid of the insects. They gather from the bark of trees moss, which they carry to a stream that deepens by degrees. Here they enter the water, still carrying the moss in their mouths, and going backward, beginning from the end of their tails, they advance by slow degrees till the whole body with the exception of the mouth is entirely immersed. The fleas, during this proceeding, have rushed in rapid haste to the dry parts, and finally to the moss, and the fox, when he has, according to his calculations, allowed sufficient time for all the fleas to take their departure, quietly opens his mouth. The moss floats off, down the stream with its burden of fleas, and when it is out of jumping reach the fox finds its way to the bank much relieved.—N. Y. Herald.

Live Fish of Great Age.

"The age of the fish is almost unlimited," observed an official of the fish commission, in reply to a question. "Prof. Baird devoted a great deal of time to the question as to the length of life of fish, and he found that the ordinary carp, if not interfered with, would live 500 years. In his writings on the subject he stated that there are now living in the Royal aquarium in Russia several carp that are known to be over 300 years old; that he had ascertained in a number of cases that whales live to be over 200 years old. A gentleman in Baltimore has had an ordinary gold fish for 63 years, and his father informed him that he had purchased it over 40 years before it came into his possession."—Washington Star.

Lightning Is Not Zigzag.

The popular conception of the path of a flash of lightning is that it is a zigzag sharper in its outlines than the average Missouri rail fence. Photography, however, has exploded that notion, the plates showing that such flash tracks are perfectly devoid of angles, the blazing route taken by the fluid being more like the course of a sinuous river. The first observer to note this was James Nesmith, who, in 1856, before the British Society of Sciences, declared that to his naked eye it was a sinuous streak, without branches, zigzags or forks.—St. Louis Republic.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Showers Tonight; Probably Fair Thursday; Fair and Cooler Friday.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 81 Degrees.

Hoke Smith's Charleston Journal will support Bryan and Sewell.

Continuing on the same principle of government that animates the Common Council to provide a night lunch to the police, it is as much their duty to provide the firemen their three meals a day.

The offer of The Press to give a suitable prize to the lady bicyclist who appears in the parade of the Midsummer Night's Carnival with the most uniquely decorated wheel will doubtless stir the artistic accomplishments of the bicycle girl to such an extent that it will rack the brain of the judges to select the one deserving of the honor.

Senator Smith will return from his trip abroad in time to take an active part in the campaign. Between the time of the nominations and the period when active campaign work is started there is plenty of time to take a vacation. The thing, however, which seems to make his absence undesirable at the present time is the fact that he is chairman of the Democratic State organization, and before he returns the State convention will have been held and the policy of the party in this State mapped out. Where there are so many diverse elements in the party as at present, it would seem that strict party loyalty would inspire him, as a leader, to assist in shaping with his personal effort whatever line of action his better judgment dictates.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

I was in a dry goods store a day or two ago and listened to a conversation between a clerk and customer that was a clear case of heteromony. The customer was a young lady who had stepped in to purchase a few yards of flannel with which to make a bathing suit. The clerk was an affable and loquacious person, intent on serving the customer to her satisfaction and at the same time to the interest of his employer. After unrolling several pieces of flannel, the prospective visitor to the seashore seemed disposed to purchase the required material from a piece selling for fifteen cents.

"Oh, by the way," said the clerk, 'here is a piece that we are selling for twenty-five cents a yard. It is the best"—

But the young lady frowned as though the fifteen-cent material would do just as well, and then the clerk, as if he had played a trump card in driving his bargain, said:

"You know this piece won't crock your underwear."

The young lady blushed and took the fifteen cent flannel.

There is nothing ficticious about the sobriquet "Farmer James" Martine. Any day, when the weather is fair and politics not to absorbing, the orator can be seen making hay while the sun shines. And what a delightfully pleasant farm-house Mr. Martine lives in. Right in the midst of the city and yet removed from its dusty streets and hurly-burly life, entrance to which is made through a row of majestic maples that fan the brow of the heated in these dog days, it is no wonder that James sticks to the old homestead.

A New Brunswick damsel has created a seasation by dancing a jig on a cemetery vault. But who can blame her? If she can find a smooth surface anywhere else in that old Dutch city that would warrant her indulging in the art of Terpsichore without imminent danger of meeting Mother Earth suddenly and forcibly, she has but to show me the proof and I will provide her with a grand-stand seat for the Midsummer Night's Carnival next Tuesday evening. Of all the rocky roads and rickety sidewalks, New Brunswick certainly takes the cake.

A. J. Gavett, constructing engineer of the sewer system, comes along this morning and says that "Teekay" Keller must have been mistaken about the aroma of the sewage beds being wafted as far away as the railroad. Mr. Gavett says that he was on the beds the same afternoon Mr. Kellar imagined that he smelled a stench, and that while there was a slight odor arising from the beds, it was not of sufficient redolance to permeate beyond the immediate vicinity of the beds themselves. He says that there must have been a dead carcass of an animal or some other source of smell that met the nasal tubes of Mr. Keller. We all hope 'tis true.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

THE CZAR IS PROVIDENCE.

The Russian Peasant's Faith in His Sovereign's Omnipotence.

A man who was present at the coronation of the late czar says that he has kept like a never-to-be-forgotten vision the memory of the ecstasy of the crowd prostrated at the threshold of the church where the holy mystery was taking place.

"I recall," he adds, "a certain little, old woman whose extraordinary fervor drew tears to our eyes. Over her dirty dress she carried a ragged bag, which contained, doubtless, a piece of black bread. She was evidently from some distant province, and had been walking for a month or more, living on alms, sleeping in a stable with the cattle, impelled by a mysterious force. Perhaps she was fulfilling a vow, perhaps her poor, distorted brain pictured Moscow as a place of felicity, a paradise, where the unhappy would be cured of their sorrows. Squatted in the mud, her hands clasping a shepherd's staff, she was gazing fixedly before her. Her wrinkled face of waxlike color was transfigured with enthusiasm. Her lips murmured a prayer, but her eyes were gazing into Heaven. There was in this eye a superhuman expression, sad and serene at the same time. This was dead to all thought, to all sentiment of real life; she existed as in a dream. Touched with pity, I approached her and slipped a ruble into her hand. Without a glance at him who bestowed this fortune, the old woman evidently believed that a miracle had been accomplished, tears ran down her cheeks, and she extended her arms toward the Father, toward the czar, to whom she attributed this benefit."—Courrier des Etats-Unis.

Much Relieved.

Mrs. Society—Mercy on me! Don't you know that man your daughter is going to marry?

Mr. Meek—No—o. I've been afraid to ask her.

Mrs. Society—He's a prize-fighter, a regular tough. He's fought a score of men, and half killed a dozen women.

Mr. Meek (much relieved) — Oh! Then he's all right. I was afraid he was some poor lamb like myself.—N. Y. Weekly.

Miscalled.

Judge—What is your Christian name, Mr. Glim?

Glim—Robert Ingersoll.

Judge—What! Do you call that a Christian name?—Bay City Chat.

The Fact That Doctors

frequehtly advise change of air and climate to those suffering from catarrh is proof that catarrh is a local and climatic disease, and not a constitutional affection. Therefore, unless you can afford to leave home and business, you can find the remedy in Ely's Cream Balm. Applied directly to the seat of the disease, it effects instant relief and a satisfactory cure after a short continuance. No mercury nor injurious drug is contained in the Balm. 50 cents. All druggists.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street ers of the United States Government, for they would receive no more dollars then than now, but the dollars they would then receive are now worth but fifty-three cents each.

Next, in degree, to suffer, would be the wage earner, the workingman.

A committee of experts appointed by the United States Senate to investigate the subject, reported that during the war when our currency was at a heavy discount, wages advanced about forty-one per cent, and that commodities which the wage earner would buy advanced one hundred and sixteen per cent. In other words a man who formerly earned $1.00 a day would then earn $1.41 a day; but the commodities which formerly he could have purchased for $1.00 he would then be obliged to pay $2.16 to obtain. In some such proportion would the workingman be defrauded, if the propositions contained in the Chicago platform are enacted into law.

From a purely economic standpoint, therefore, I believe it would be disastrous for this country to permit the unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at a ratio of 1 to 16.

But there is a moral side to this question which, in my judgment, is of still greater importance.

If a farmer had borrowed from his neighbor 100 bushels of wheat, and should propose to discharge his debt by repaying 53 bushels of wheat, that would be called a dishonorable proposition. If the Congress of the United States should enact a law making such a transaction legal, any honest man would declare that such a law simply legalized swindling. And yet that would be precisely the effect of enacting into law the provisions of the financial plank in the Chicago platform. Not only would this be true as applying to the discharge of debts by private citizens, but it is proposed that this great Government with its enormous resources, and at peace with all the world, shall pay back the one hundred cent dollars it has borrowed from the people with dollars now worth but fifty cents. In the words of Gen. Garfield, "It is a fearful thing for one man to stand up in the face of his brother man and refuse to keep his pledge; but it is a forty-five million times worse thing for a nation to do it. It breaks the main spring of faith; it unsettles all security; it disturbs all values, and it puts the life of the nation in peril for all time to come."

But this Chicago platform goes still further. Listen—"and we favor such legislation as will prevent for the future the demonetization of any kind of legal tender money by private contract." This means that the right of a free American citizen to enter into a contract with his fellow man to buy or sell for gold or for silver specifically, shall be taken from him. Was ever before such a monstrous proposition submitted to this liberty loving people?

If Mr. Bryan can be elected on the Chicago platform, it will demonstrate to my mind that universal suffrage is a failure, and that our republican form of government is nearing its end.

But arouse ye! loyal men everywhere! Let us rally around the dear old flag with determination to maintain it aloft, unsullied, the emblem, now as ever, of liberty, honesty and righteousness.

Let us forget that we are Republicans, let us forget that we are Democrats, let us go forth shoulder to shoulder to do battle for the preservation of our country's honor, our slogan being, "God and our native land." Then by the grace of God we shall succeed.

Respectfully Yours,
July 20, 1896. Geo. A. Chapman.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints,—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. cent yet—she could not be more beautiful. The duchess herself was not slow to see that charm of distinction, and to acknowledge it with her own lovely graciousness.

It was when they were leaving the house that just as the duchess was passing to her carriage, her cloak slipped from her shoulder, and a young officer of the Imperial guard, standing near, passed an idle jest, only half under his breath, about that dazzling shoulder.

The duke waited upon his wife to her carriage, and then returned; and pausing deliberately to draw off his glove, he slapped the young officer with it across the cheek, and went back to the carriage which was waiting.

"It was a foolishness," the duchess heard M. Etienne saying when he came in shortly after their return. "It was a madness. Why have heard it? Why have flattered the flaneur with notice? At a time, too, when we wish especially for quiet. His friend will be here tomorrow—and of course the duke will waive considerations of rank—"

"What! A duel!"

"The Bois."

"You mock yourself with me!" said her grace.

"Not at all. It is a sous-lieutenant of the Imperial guard—born in some barrack—and although the duke has been an unrivaled swordsman, his hand is less sure than it was, and this M. Leconte is the finest swordsman in France."

"I cannot believe it!"

"As your grace pleases. But it will be all the same if it is pistols, for Leconte's ball—I made inquiries—goes straight as a sunbeam."

"Oh, M. Etienne!" cried the duchess, clasping her hands. "Do you mean—"

"I mean," said M. Etienne, quite heedless in his vexation, "that it is exceedingly doubtful if the duke is alive to-morrow to regret his folly—"

CHAPTER II.

"Eh bien, prophet of evil," said the duke, coming down the room, "with what tales are you frightening the duchess! Come, shall it be billiards?" and sauntered off with him.

And the duchess went to her own apartment where Olympe awaited her; and five minutes afterward, wrapped from head to foot in a vast cache-misere, she had stolen down a private passage to the street, with Olympe beside her. "We must ask the gend'arme, Olympe, he may have to go to the prefecture; we must learn where he, Leconte, is to be found." And learn she did; and in less than an hour an angry concierge had been pacified with a handful of gold pieces and had ushered into the room, where the young sous-lieutenant sat busy with a letter, his sister from the country.

The moment that the door closed the duchess dropped her vast wrap into Olympe's hands and stood before him in all her starry beauty, the sheen of her pale satins, the sparkle of her innumerable diamonds, the dazzle of her white shoulders, just as she had come from the opera.

For a moment he was aghast. But he had sprung to his feet. "To what do I owe the honor—" he began.

"Oh, monsieur!" cried the duchess, "I come to you a supplicant! An hour ago my husband insulted you—"

"Bitterly!"

"Oh, monsieur!" clasping her beautiful uplifted hands and raising to his the eyes overflowing with tears. "And it means—"

"Sapristi! It means bloodshed, madame!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, no, no!" she cried. "Not that! Not that! And for such an idle thing—oh, never that! Oh, monsieur, you are successful, you are powerful, the emperor is your friend, you can afford to be magnanimous. I beg, I beg you to let it pass—"

"Let it pass, madame! You know not what you say. Let it pass! Ha! ha!"

"What good, alas, what good will it do you to take his life?"

"It will efface the stain on my honor, the sting of his blow. Behold, my cheek burns with it yet!"

"And mine, too, believe me," she said, lifting again the great innocent eyes to his. "It was hot-headed—it was wrong—oh, if there is any reparation—"

"Sacre! There is no reparation," said the officer, like a hero of tragedy, "but death—his death or mine."

"Oh, do not say so! Life is so precious—death is so dreadful—and, oh, monsieur, forgiveness is so beautiful!"

"Forgiveness of such a humiliation!"

"Is it more of a humiliation than I undergo; I, a woman, who come to you in your apartment, and beg my husband's life of you? I have asked—I have heard—they tell me your ball never fails—"

"And is it monsieur, your husband, who perhaps sends you here?"

"Ciel! It is you who now insult him as grievously! Oh, you cannot, for that momentary burst of foolish vexation be willing to take from him life, from me my husband, from my little sleeping son his father! I implore you—"

"Duchess," said the lieutenant, "you are only wasting time, and compromising yourself here in my apartment."

"I confide in your honor, your silence," she cried.

"It is well," he answered. "But no more. You ask too much."

"Oh, have you no mercy?"

"None. The insult was given in the face of all the world, and in the face of all the world it must be wiped out."

"Monsieur Leconte, you have proved your valor on the battlefield. It is not the first rencontre you have had with pistols and with swords. Your courage is a byword. If you treat this affair as beneath notice, as the action of an exasperated man whom you have reason to pity, it will not injure you. It will give you great friendships, of which you may be glad in the future. Your friend, the emperor, does not wish an added excitement just now. Oh, believe me, you can well afford to send no challenge—to act as if nothing had taken place—to give it your disdain."

The officer gazed at her wonderingly—so young, so beautiful, so resplendent, so sad, so imploring. Perhaps her last arguments gave him cause. And then the statements relative to his courage—they were certainly true—it was well known. And to win the Sarazines Beauxlieux, perhaps, to the empire—it might be worth while. And then a mad, rash humor seized him. "Madame," he said, "I will accede to your wishes on one condition. Your husband's blow still tingles on my cheek. I will repay it—by leaving my kiss upon the cheek of his wife!"

For a moment the duchesse turned, gaspingly, holding both hands to Olympe, and her pallor, where the rose bloomed beneath the ivory, became the pallor of death. But directly she had summoned her resources. What had she come here for but to purchase the life of her boy's father at any cost? She turned again and glanced up at him, and then dropped her lids till the long black lashes swept her marble cheek. "Volontiers, monsieur," she said, and she made a step forward, softly turning her cheek.

But the man did not move. The beautiful creature there, so proud, so chaste, willing to purchase safety for her child's father at the price of this insult to herself, this insult of which in all the years of her life she would be sensible, the color now rising slowly in her cheek, vividly, in a stain, as if to meet the affront. No, he could not!

"Forgive me," he said. "And go. You have saved your husband's life—for my bullet would have pierced his heart. Go. I will keep your secret." And doubting her senses, bewildered, full of joy, the duchess suddenly fell on her knees before him and seized his hand and covered it with kisses. And then Olympe had the cache-misere about her, and the officer had gone down with them and put her into the carriage. When the duchess recalled that scene and its expressions of her gratitude, she knew it never would have happened so but for that Basque woman, her peasant grandmother.

And so it came about that no challenge arrived at the Hotel Beauxlieux the next day, nor any day thereafter. And when his wonderment had subsided, the contempt that the duke already felt for the new people was a thousand times enhanced by the circumstance. "A court of shopkeepers!" he cried. An imperial guard who kept silence under a slap on the face—they were all part and parcel together—he despised them, and was at no pains to keep his despising quiet. And thus this very action of the duchess was the cause of his making himself more offensive to the imperialists than he had been, so offensive that at last it was open war with Duke des Sarazines Beauxlieux, and he found the old chateau in the Landes, a place better suited to his health than the house in Paris where kings had been his guests.

But after all it was not love, certainly not wifely love, that had made the duchesse interfere on her husband's account in that matter of the challenge. It was a life to save—and she herself the cause of the trouble—it would have been almost as necessary for her to try to avert the evil had the person concerned been St. Malo, or Montaguevert, or a stranger. She had a warm and quiet affection for her husband, an immense belief in him and admiration for him, but that was all.

When the duke died and left her with his son, she wept; she was bereft. But here was the duke, and now all the more the duke, all the more proudly and fondly insisted on since shorn of imperial favor.

For before the duke died, after he had refused the friendship of the emperor and had confronted his hostility, and had returned with his wife and child and the people of his court to the old residence on the Atlantic shores, it was with fortunes sadly impoverished by the reckless expenditure with which he had promoted the legitimist issues.

Delicate Dress Goods.
Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

A BLOODY VOYAGE

Further Details of the Triple Murder at Sea.

FIRST MATE IS PROBABLY CRAZY

The Bodies of the Victims Hacked with an Axe—Consul at Halifax To Take Testimony—The Accused Must Be Tried in the United States.

New York, July 22.—At the offices of the part owners and local agents of the Herbert Fuller, Swan & Son, it was said that the telegram received from the Halifax agent of the vessel, stating that the man suspected of the murder of Capt. Nash was the first mate, Thomas Bram, a Nova Scotian, who lived in New York city with his mother and wife, was a great shock and surprise. Mr. Swan of the firm said that he knew the first mate, and could hardly imagine the latter committing such a crime, as he was on excellent terms with Capt. Nash when the vessel left Boston and was a quiet man generally. Mr. Swan thought he must have been insane. Mr. Swan also said the murdered skipper was not a hard master, and never had any trouble in shipping a crew.

Story Told by Mr. Monck.

Halifax, N. S., July 22.—The story of the triple murder at sea on board the barkentine Herbert Fuller, which sailed from Boston on July 6 and put into this port yesterday with the dead bodies of Captain and Mrs. Nash and second mate August W. Bramberg, is the worst brought into this port by a sailing vessel in many years. The only passenger aboard, Lester H. Monck of Boston, and who took charge of the vessel after the tragedy, says that he knew nothing whatever of the crime until he heard of it from the first mate. During the night of July 13, he says, he heard a scream which he supposed was uttered by Capt. Nash's wife, but heard no further sound and paid no attention to what he thought might be a fancy. In the morning he went on deck. The first mate informed him that the captain, his wife and the second officer had been murdered in their berths, and asked Monck, who slept in in a little cabin between the one occupied by Capt. and Mrs. Nash and the one occupied by the second mate, if he had been alarmed at anything during the night.

Heard Mrs. Nash's Scream.

Monck told him he had heard some one scream, and he had not paid any particular attention to that. Both the cabins of the captain and second mate immediataly adjoin that in which he slept, so that he must have slept deeply not to have heard something of what was going on on the other side of the thin partitions. The murders could not have been committed without noise, for the weapon used in accomplishing them was an axe. The victims were hacked in a most sickening manner, blow after blow having evidently been inflicted upon them to make sure that life was extinct. Mr. Monck says that he assumed charge of the vessel and, with the assistance of the mate brought her into port. According to his story, Mr. Monck questioned the various members of the crew as to what they knew of the tragedy, but each one professed entire innocence and ignorance. Mr. Monck ordered the bodies taken out of the cabin and placed in a boat and towed astern, which was done. The following were the names of the officers and crew: Capt. C. I. Nash, first mate, Thomas Bram of Boston; second mate, August W. Bramberg of Finland, but a naturalized American citizen; steward, Jonathan Spencer of Rosario; crew, Frank Lohese, a native of France; Charles Brown of Sweden, Henry G. Shea of New Jersey, O. Anderson of Sweden, and Henry Berook of Holland.

A Matter for the United States.

The consul general will take the evidence of all the men at the consulate here and send it to the district attorney in whatever state the accused is to be tried. The alleged murderer cannot be tried here, as the act was committed on the high seas on an American vessel, and, therefore, comes under the jurisdiction of the United States. When a reporter of the United Press visited the vessel he found the pilot, William White, in charge. The pilot stated that he had boarded the vessel six miles southeast of Devil's island. At that time she was heading this way, but before he got to her the helm was put down and the vessel headed off shore. He immediately surmised that there was something wrong. As Pilot White neared the ship and rowed around the stern those on board told him to be careful of the boat astern as it contained corpses. He asked what was the matter and one of the crew said: "There has been murder aboard and that boat contains the bodies of the captain, his wife and the second mate."

Monck a Young Boston Man.

Boston, July 22.—The father of Lester H. Monck, the passenger on board the barkentine Herbert Fuller, is a large real estate owner in this city. The young man is a member of the sophomore class of Harvard college. Owing to ill-health he was sent on this voyage to recuperate. It was his intention to go to Rosario, and from there sail for Liverpool; thence to Italy. His father left here last night for Halifax by train.

Vanderbilt Out of Danger.

New York, July 22.—It was stated this morning by a member of the family that Cornelius Vanderbilt had improved steadily all night. The clot in the blood vessel on the brain, which caused the paralysis, is belived to have been absorbed, and that all danger is now passed.

NOTHING TO DISCUSS

Rumored Summons of the Cabinet To Gray Gables Discredited.

OLNEY'S VISIT WAS PURELY SOCIAL

Summer Vacation of the President Not Likely To Be Disturbed—Treasury Gold Reserve the Only Matter That May Call for Action at Present.

Washington, July 22.—The report that President Cleveland had summoned members of his cabinet and other party leaders to Gray Gables for a conference is not generally believed, as there is nothing really urgent at this time, except, perhaps, the condition of the treasury gold reserve. The Cuban matter will not probably again be considered until next fall, or until Consul-General Lee's report has been received by the president, which, as heretofore stated, it is generally understood he was instructed to prepare. The Venezuelan affair may possibly call for some attention before the president's vacation is ended, but this is hardly probable.

Olney's Visit Purely Social.

Buzzard's Bay, Mass., July 22.—Secretary of State Olney, who arrived at Falmouth Monday night, came up from his summer home yesterday and paid his respects to the president. Mr. Olney's call was a short one, as he returned to Falmouth on the first train. The presence of the cabinet officer at Gray Gables so soon after his return from Washington would naturally lead many to believe that his visit was an official one, but such, it is stated, was not the case. The call was said to have been purely a social one, as Mr. Olney had not seen the president since he came to Gray Gables, and the visit had nothing whatever to do with either the Cuban or Venezuelan correspondence. After Mr. Olney had left, the president went squinteague fishing with Joe Jefferson. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hamlin has arrived at Marion for the summer.

VICTORIA AT BUCKINGHAM.

The Queen To Attend the Marriage of Her Granddaughter To-day.

London, July 22.—Queen Victoria arrived at Buckingham palace yesterday from Windsor for the purpose of attending the marriage of Prince Charles of Denmark and her granddaughter, Princess Maud of Wales. On her way to the palace from the railway station her majesty called at Marlborough house, the London residence of the Prince of Wales. While the queen was at dinner last evening in Buckingham palace a fire occurred in one of the apartments. An alarm was sent out, and a number of fire engines were speedily at the scene. The fire was confined to the apartment in which it originated, and the damage was slight.

MATABELES DEFEATED.

Gen. Carrington Achieves a Victory in the Matoppo Hills.

London, July 22.—Gen. Sir Frederick Carrington, commander of the forces operating against the rebellious Matabeles in Rhodesia, telegraphs that yesterday he attacked the Matabele stronghold in the Matoppo hills south of Buluwayo. The fighting continued until late in the afternoon, when the position of the natives was carried and the kraals occupied by them were burned. Eighty of the Matabeles were killed. The British lost three killed and eleven wounded.

To Educate Homeless Children.

Albany, July 22.—The George Junior Republic association of New York city has been incorporated by the secretary of state. The object for which the corporation is formed are the establishment, founding, carrying on and managing an institution for the reception and education of children in need of a home. Operations will be principally conducted at Freeville, Tompkins county, but the principal office of the association will be in New York city.

Wants a Match with Fitzsimmons.

New York, July 22.—"Denver" Ed Smith, the well-known pugilist, and his backer, J. H. Hildebrandt of South Africa, will sail for England to-day on the American line steamship Berlin. While in England he will endeavor to get on a match with Bob Fitzsimmons. Failing in this his backer will go to South Africa, where Smith is to fight Joe Goddard, the Australian, who is now in that country.

Gaudaur and Stansbury Matched.

New York, July 22.—Negotiations have been completed for a match race between Jake Gaudaur and James Stansbury to decide the single scull championship of the world. They will row over the Thames course from Putney to Nortlake on Sept. 7 next for $5,000. Gaudaur will leave for England immediately after the Halifax regatta next week.

Died in His Bathtub.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Robt. Randolph, of Park avenue, has purchased a Grasshopper.

Miss Carrie Kellogg, of Mount Pleasant, has a new Crawford.

Raymond Carpenter, of Manning avenue, has purchased a Cleveland Swell Special.

James Arnold, Jr., of Manning avenue, has ordered one of the "Grasshopper" bicycles.

Israel Jones, of the Victor Wheelmen, chaperoned a party of twenty-five cyclists to Boynton Beach today.

Warren MacLaughlin, of the borough, will pitch for the Cape May nine at Asbury Park this afternoon, tomorrow and Friday afternoons.

Philip B. and George H. Macintyre, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, returned yesterday from their fishing trip to Mountain View. They caught quite a number of fish but had more experience.

A collision occurred on West Front street Monday night between P. Simmons, the colored racer, and a man named Moraller. Both were thrown from their wheels by the force of the collision, but neither was seriously injured and no damage resulted to the wheels.

The Y. M. C. A. cyclers are the first club in this city to respond to the call for the Midsummer Night's Carnival. Capt. Cuming, as well as the other members, was greatly pleased and he called a meeting of the cyclers at the Y. M. C. A. building at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, after which the club will join the paraders at the Crescent square.

Several young people of the borough enjoyed a run last night to Springfield and Westfield and return. Refreshments were served and a social time was had at Mrs. Joseph's. Those who went were the Misses Sadie Holmes, Einbarger, Young, Schuck, Carroll, Joseph, and Messrs. Winckler, Dolliver, Carpenter, Carroll, Norton, Hummer and Shepherd.

Those who have been able to go on any of the general runs of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League will be glad to know that on Thursday evening another of those delightful runs will be held. Railway is the destination and the Railway men have long been talking about the cordial welcome they would have ready. The run starts from the Y. M. C. A. building on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock sharp. First Lieutenant Edward Laing will be in command of the Plainfield party.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will have a hard game to play Saturday afternoon when they run up against the crack nine from Flemington on the latter's grounds. Warren MacLaughlin will pitch for the Flemingtons and Chauncey Burt for the Plainfield team.

The following is the correct score of the game between the North Plainfield and Dunellen teams last Saturday:

										R.	H.	E.
North Plainfield	1	2	2	2	1	0	1	3	6	18	12	5
Dunellens	1	3	0	1	0	4	0	3	3	15	7	8

Batteries: North Plainfield, C. Woolston and C. Westerfield; Dunellen, Craig and Taylor.

The second game of a series between the Juniors, of Dunellen, and the Young Crescents, of this city, was played yesterday afternoon on the Y. M. C. A. grounds. The first game played at Dunellen was won by the Dunellen team. Yesterday the home club had out their full team and won easily. The battery for the Young Crescents were: Uhdal and Montcross, pitchers; C. Keller, catcher; for Dunellen, Liable, pitcher; Fisher and Churchill, catchers. The score by innings was as follows:

Young Crescents	2	0	1	2	4	6	1	16
Dunellen Juniors	2	0	2	0	0	1	0	5

The deciding game will be played at Dunellen next Tuesday afternoon. The game will be called at 1:30.

GOLF.

A team of six players from the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will go to New Brunswick Saturday afternoon to play the first of a series of matches with a team from the New Brunswick Golf Club.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

A tug-of-war has been arranged between David Lord's nine men team from South Plainfield and the "Daves" of Perth Amboy. The date will be announced later.

Miss Mary VanEps, of Franklin place, left town today for New Germantown, where she will attend the wedding of Miss Laing and T. C. Hegeman, which takes place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A Pleasant Summer Resort.

Mount Mensi House, near the Delaware Water Gap, Pa, is fast becoming quite a resort for Plainfield people. The following were registered there last week: Assemblyman W. R. Codington and family, Miss Elizabeth Cornwell, Wm Trehune and family, Wm. Terry and family, C. T. Nightengale and family, Mrs. D. VanZandt and family. The renowned cold cave, where the thermometer registers 38 in the hottest day in summer, is situated on this property.

The grounds have been greatly improved and the house newly furnished throughout. A cooler and more desired place for rest and recreation is hard to find, as it is an ideal spot for a family resort. Time is spent during the day in pleasant, shady mountain walks, drives, fishing and bathing, while the cool evenings are whiled away in parlor amusements.

At the Revere House.

Recent arrivals at the Revere House: Mr. and Mrs. J. Parker, S. C. Baker, A. F. Baker, of this city; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Taft, G. Southard, of Brooklyn; F. Hendrickson, Miss F. Fay, of Trenton; E. S. Seal, of Easton; M. C. Burton, J. C. Sersol, S. Wood, S. W. Wilson, Philadelphia; F. K. Rupprecht, Miss V. Delmore, F. P. Kimball, E. Chichester, G. B. Hedges, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Staats, T. Harrison, T. U. Pearson, of New York.

Mrs. Ballington Booth Tomorrow.

Tomorrow evening Mrs. Ballington Booth will visit this city and make an address at the First Baptist church. Admission is free.

RELIEF FROM BANKS

Efforts in New York City To Strengthen the Gold Reserve.

$18,000,000 HAS NOW BEEN PLEDGED

Bank President Tappan Believes the Amount Will Be Increased to $20,000,000—The Treasury Reserve Today Stands at $89,603,865.

New York, July 22.—President Frederick D. Tappen of the Gallatin National bank, said last evening: "The gold to be contributed to the treasury has been collected entirely among banks which belong to the New York clearing house. About $18,000,000 has been pledged up to the present. It is hoped to increase the amount to $20,000,000. Some of the trust companies which have gold may be asked to contribute. William Sherer, the manager of the clearing house, visited the uptown banks yesterday afternoon. I telegraphed to a prominent bank officer in Boston, asking him to collect gold there for the treasury. He replied by telephone that he would interest the banks in the Boston clearing house in the matter. Contributions by Boston banks will be deposited in the sub-treasury in that city. When I started out to secure contributions of gold by the New York banks I make up a list and put opposite the name of each the amount of gold which I thought it should contribute. I did not fix the amount in proportion to the gold holding of the bank, but simply set down the amount I thought it could spare. I have not met with a declination from a single bank that I selected as a contributor. There has been the heartiest co-operation by the banks. The gold will not be deposited in the New York sub-treasury in a lump. It could not be handled. It will be deposited to suit the convenience of the banks and the ability of the sub-treasury to receive, count and examine it. The list will not be completed before to-morrow and no gold will be delivered to the sub-treasury before that day. There is no way of preventing gold exports so long as it is cheaper for the Berlin bankers to obtain gold in New York than in London or elsewhere. The situation may change so that it will be cheaper to get gold in London."

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

It would be hard to convince a man suffering from bilious colic that his agony is due to a microbe with an unpronouncable name. But one dose of DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure will convince him of its power to afford instant relief. It kills pain. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

"Sir," said a Heidelberg student to a night watchman, in the wee sma' hours of the morning, "sir, I would like to ask you a question."

"Go ahead, young man," answered the dignitary; "that is what I am here for."

"Well, sir, does the law permit me to call a policeman an ass?"

"You had better be gone immediately, or I will lock you up."

The votary of Alma Mater advanced a few steps on his way home, but returned and asked humbly:

"But, sir, is it permitted to call an ass a policeman?"

"The law doesn't say anything about that, young man."

"It doesn't, eh? Well, good morning, Mr. Policeman."—Amusing Journal

To Be Worked on Early Purchasers of

The Spalding Bicycle

After the adoption of our 1896 model and a careful estimate of the cost of manufacture, we placed the price on the Spalding Bicycle at $100. The price is now $100 and will continue at $100 throughout the season, no matter what other manufacturers may do.

We don't believe it is fair, honest or good business policy to sell a standard article like the Spalding Bicycle at one price in May and reduce its value in June by a material reduction in price. As a matter of common fairness to early purchasers of Spalding Bicycles and as an evidence of good faith on our part we will, in case of reduction in price during the season, send a rebate check to every purchaser of a Spalding Bicycle of the amount of any such reduction that may be made by us during the season. This is our meaning of a

JOHN HOURIGAN'S ROOST

AN EVICTED TENANT'S AIRY ABODE IN THE STREET.

It is a Composite Stack of Hay and Furniture, in Which He Has Burrowed a Shelter for Himself and Wife.

John Hourigan, of Westfield, a stone mason, and Isabel, his wife, are at present abiding on top of a composite stack of hay, hencoops and household furniture in front of his late residence in Spring street, in that village, from which they were evicted on Saturday. The stack represents the combined architectural genius of George H. Embree, who is the agent of the Philadelphia owner of the house formerly occupied by the Hourigans, and Constable John M. C. Marsh. And this was the order of its building: Four forkfuls of hay from the Hourigan barn were laid as foundation. Upon this was placed a washstand, the head of a big bedstead, and a clothes rack, more hay, the bedroom crockery, bed slats at all angles, the kitchen chairs, more hay, cooking utensils, three wire netting hencoops, corn fodder, bedding, two large tin slop cans, the foot and side boards of the bedstead, a scythe, more hay, the kitchen stove, and a big deal table. The four pigs of the Hourigan fold were transferred to the vacant pen of a neighbor.

It is not because they can't pay the rent that the Hourigans slumber on this potpourri. They can pay it, but won't. On Agent Embree's first visit with a threat of eviction last March Hourigan was ill in bed, as he had been for almost a year. Mrs. Hourigan produced a wad of bills from her stocking and began to count out the $6. Her husband bounded into the room and snatched the money.

"Never," he cried; "never on your life! Let him fix the front fince; an' the bricks a' fallin' from the chimmney an' the windey panes that let in the cold that is turnin' me red blood blue in me veins. Look, ye mutherer, look!"

Mr. Ebmree fled. The contest was not renewed until two weeks ago, when due legal notice of eviction was served. Meanwhile more than ever has the invalid Irishman become a thorn in the flesh of the Spring street neighborhood, which is composed mainly of negroes and their families. It has been the belligerent stone mason's delight during his convalescence to sit in the darkness of his threshold and make embarrassing comments upon the conversation of Mrs. Williams, who lives across the street, with Mrs. Barton, who lives two doors further up the street.

Hourigan has burrowed under the shelter, and in that secure retreat defies the rain. In clear weather he sleeps outside, the greater part of the time treating the neighbors to frank opinions of themselves, Mr. Embree, and the constable, touching up their personal characteristics, family life, and genealogical trees.

Mr. Embree is a Town Committeeman. He has served notices upon his colleague, N. B. Gardner, who has immediate charge of the Spring street district, that the highway is obstructed. Mr. Gardner intimates that the sub-Committee on Sewers, of which Mr. Embree is a member, has full power to act. Mr. Hourigan sits aloft and grimly smiles.

"It took the slobs six months," he says, "to run me out of me house. It'll take 'em a good deal longer to run me off the earth."

Where to Save Small Amounts.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—For the information of "Englishman" and others who wish to save small amounts, I will say that the Co-operative Association will receive members on payment of $1 as entrance fee and fifty cents weekly, and will allow six per cent. interest per year, payable quarterly, on all even sums of $5 up to $125. The secretary and treasurer will attend at J. T. Vail's office, Saturday evenings, to receive applications and deposits.

S. R. Struthers, Secretary.

Thought to Be a Dangerous Character.

The tramp arrested on the top of a freight car a day or two ago, and sent to the county jail for thirty days by Judge DeMeza, was given the "star chamber" degree by County Detective Keron on his arrival at the county jail. A mask was found on his person, which he confessed he wore at times to disguise himself when riding on freight cars. He also admitted that his name was not Gatehill, as he had told the local authorities. It is believed that he is a dangerous character.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

DEOCEIAN UNION FIELD DAY.

Catholic Young Men to Contest for Prizes at Caledonian Pack.

The Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union of Newark will hold their annual field day exercises and reception at Caledonia Park, Newark, Saturday, August 8th, commencing at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The events will be as follows: 100 yard dash; 300 yards dash; 440 yards, (novice race); 880 yards run; one mile run; putting 16 pound shot; running broad jump; running high jump; one mile relay race, open to club teams of four men, each man to run one-fourth of a mile.

Gold medals will be given each winner, and silver medals will be given to the second men in each event. To the winner of the relay race a silk banner will be given, and a silk banner will also be given to the Association scoring the highest number of points. A gold medal donated by Rev. B. M. Bogan, spiritual adviser of the Union, will be awarded the athlete scoring the highest number of points. All entries should be sent to the secretary, John F. O'Hara, 48 Commerce street, Newark. There will probably be a number of entries from the Plainfield Union.

Cashier Trueleben Takes a Wife.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth St. John, of Port Jervis, N. Y., and Frederick Trueleben, cashier of the U. S. Express Company in this city, was celebrated last evening at the home of the bride's parents, at 7 o'clock. Arthur Spicer, of this city, was the best man. After the ceremony and reception the bride and groom left on a wedding trip through Canada. They will return to Plainfield on Monday and take up their residence at 215 East Fifth street. The employes of the local express office presented Mr. and Mrs. Trueleben with a very handsome willow rocker, as a token of esteem.

Special Music.

The music committee of the Jamesburg Sunday-school convention are making great efforts to have that part of the services the usual success. Benj. H. Everitt, to whose endeavors the splendid singing of last year was largely due, will lead again this year. He is planning for a choir of a hundred voices. The book used will be "Hymn Songs," published by John J. Hood, of Philadelphia. Four plates with music from this book will be printed in the fifty-page programme now in the hands of Editor Hammell, of the Jamesburg Record.

New Commutation Scale.

The Central Railroad Company has adopted a new schedule of commutation rates which will go into effect August 1st. By the new arrangement the total cost per year will be $90.10, and if a man desires to come to Plainfield for two or three months during the summer and commute to New York he can do so at a reasonable cost. For the twelve months the rates are graduated as follows: $8 10, $8, $7.90, $7,85, $7.75, $7 65, $7.60, $7.40, $7 20, $7.05, $6.85, $6.75.

Hearing Postponed.

The hearing in the case of Mrs. McDermitt, Mr. and Mrs. John Brick and Geo. Shea, was adjourned on Tuesday in Justice Newcorn's court until Friday. Lawyer W. A. Coddington represents Mrs. McDermitt, Judge DeMeza will plead for Mr. and Mrs. Brick, while Shea, has thus far secured no lawyer.

Forty-Fourth Birthday.

Mrs. Randolph Marsh, of Plainfield avenue, yesterday celebrated quietly at home her forty-fourth birthday. During the day relatives and friends called and bestowed congratulations upon the hostess, and last evening a family gathering was held at her home.

The Wandering Waif.

W. R. Mattox is coaching an amateur dramatic company that is planning to give "The Wandering Waif" at Cranford in the near future. The cast includes W. R. Mattox, Miss Phœbe Mattox, Miss Bertha Clum, C. H. Clum and Frank Splane.

Campaign Club to Be Organized.

A meeting of the U. S. Grant Club will be held tonight in Spencer's hall for the purpose of hearing reports from the delegates who attended the recent convention at Asbury Park. A campaign club will also be organized.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following two realty transfers have been recorded from North Plainfield in the Somerset County Clerk's office: Alvah A. Clark to John Spencer, $1,400; Alvah A. Clark to Sarah A. Vail and Wm. R. Codington, $1,145.

Patrolman Thomas McCue will remain off duty another week, owing to illness. Jerry Cash will be on duty in his place.

Persons who have a coughing spell every night, on account of a tickling sensation in the throat, may overcome it at once by a dose of One Minute Cough Cure. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

LIFE IN THE FAR EAST.

A MISSIONARY OF INDIA GIVES AN INTERESTING LECTURE.

Tells of the Conditions That Surround the Natives, Who, He Says, Are Not Oppressed With Taxes—Characteristics.

"Life Among the Hindoos" was the subject chosen by Rev. L. R. Janney for his missionary talk at Vincent chapel last evening. Considering the weather the attendance was remarkable.

Mr. Janney has lived and worked in India for many years and he was thoroughly conversant upon the subject. In opening he sang two hymns, "There is a Happy Land" and "Jesus Christ, My Excellent Saviour." The first he sang to the American tune, using the Hindoo words, and the latter was rendered in the Hindoo tune and words.

The forepart of his talk was devoted chiefly to a geographical description of the country. He spoke of the very warm weather in Southern India, where the thermoneter would reach as high as 150 degrees, the lowest being 106. He said that on the plains they would have rain for three months steady, averaging a rainfall of 150 inches. The people were obliged to take their clothes twenty-five miles away to find the sun in order that their clothes would dry.

"India," he said, "contained a population of 287,000,000 people, with a small proportion of English. The people are not patriotic and are divided into castes. The English Government is the best the people ever had, as the native kings were very unjust. At present the people are not oppressed with taxes. When the tax is due the people flock to the tax offices and pay quickly, as they are afraid of the English rulers. In all there are about 2,000,000 Christian people in India and 208,000,000 Hindoos. Among the women there has been no change in the fashion for dress in the past 3,000 years, while many changes have been wrought among the men. I have seen a man's head dress made of cloth which contained 210 feet of material. The people will pay five times more for head dress than anything else. India is a land of many Nations, religions, dialects and languages. The many religions taught vary considerable in their meaning. In talking with a Hindoo his object is to find out what you are thinking about and then win you over to his side. A peculiar fact is that they will not kill anything. If mosquitoes bother them they will brush them away and if a bedbug is on their clothes they will take it off and put it on some one else."

Mr. Janney then gave interesting incidents in connection with his own personal life in India in dealing with the people, and his talk gave evidence that he was successful in reaching them. He talked nearly two hours, after which he exhibited a rare collection of idols which he brought with him to this country. A collection was taken at the close.

Heroic Act of An Officer.

Patrolman Nicholas Myers is entitled to special credit and an extra button. While patroling his beat in the Third ward about 2 o'clock yesterday morning he discovered two cows which had "wandered from the old feed box," and were grazing peacefully by the wayside. He arrested the cattle and took them to Day's livery stable on West Sixth street, where the owner appeared yesterday morning and paid $2 for their safe keeping.

Enjoying a Picnic.

The Sunday-school of the German Reformed church is enjoying a picnic in Hyde's woods this afternoon. The scholars are whiling away the time with playing of games, and a bountiful supply of refreshments are on hand. The committee in charge consists of Rev. Mr. Hauser, A. Wolff and Phillip Bach.

Culver Released on Bail.

Nathan Culver, the old man who has been locked up in the Middlesex County Jail at New Brunswick for some time past, charged with a serious crime, has been released on $700 bail. Culver came here from Oklahama on a visit, and he claims the charge against him is simply a trumped up one.

A Big Catch.

An immense snapping turtle, weighing thirty-seven pounds, was on exhibition in front of W. J. Stephenson's restaurant on North avenue yesterday. It was captured near Perth Amboy by Michael J. Coyne, and will be served Friday in Stephenson's restaurant as soup and steaks.

PLANS OF THE CARNIVAL

THE REGULAR RAILWAY TRAFFIC WILL NOT BE INTERRUPTED.

The Band Will Be Sidetracked on Switches When They Discourse Music—Riders Will Not Follow Cars Continually

The interest in the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" still appears to be increasing, and many riders have begun preparing for the decoration of their wheels. Designs from Plainfield's previous bicycle parade will reappear in line, while many new and fantastic arrangements are being constructed.

The parade committee held another meeting last evening at Grand Marshal Martin's store, and the plans were thoroughly discussed. The committee were not able to announce the line of march as was expected, as several difficulties appeared, but they will be easily settled by a conference with Supt. John H. Adelmann, which will be held today, and the path of the parade will be ready to be announced tomorrow. The name of John H. Adelmann has been added to the list of aids, he, of course, taking charge of the trolley part of the carnival.

The trolley cars have excited considerable interest, and many questions have been asked regarding them. The regular traffic will not be interrupted on 'Carnival Night," as the band car will be located on a switch for all its concerts along the route. The bicycles will not follow the cars the entire distance, but will leave them at times to pass through some of the residential portions of both the city and borough. There will be no stops for the paraders, and only the smooth level roads will be selected for the paraders in line to pass through. The residents along the line of march will vie with each other in trying to decorate their homes in the prettiest manner, and colored fire will aid materially in the illuminations.

The carnival is the chief topic of interest among the cycling contingent, and there promises to be a grand turnout of cyclists, both men and women. The committee has decided to place the third division for the colored riders under the charge of Captain Israel Jones, of the Victor Wheelmen, whose capabilities in directing his club are well known.

Any details of the parade may be learned from Mr. Martin or any member of his committee, who will only be too glad to furnish the desired information. Besides Mr. Martin, the committee consists of Louis G. Timpson, John H. Adelmann, F. R. Stevens, C. B. Morse and M. F. Elderton.

Fifteen Crowded Cars.

The excursion of the Sunday-schools of the First Presbyterian, Congregational and Park Avenue Baptist churches to Asbury Partk today was the largest excursion that has left the city this summer for the seashore. It took fifteen cars to accommodate the crowd and every car had its seating capacity taxed to its utmost. Everything this morning pointed to a pleasant day at the seaside. The excursion will reach this city on its return tonight about 7:30.

Trimming the Trees.

Of late many complaints have come in to the city officials to the effect that in numerous places in the city there was no use of having electric lights at night, as they were almost hidden from view by heavy foliage on the trees. Street Commissioner Meeker has his men at work trimming these trees and the improvement is easily noticed.

Lamp Exploded.

William Totten lighted a kerosene lamp in his sleeping apartments on Somerset street, Tuesday night, and the oil in the lamp took fire. He threw lamp, shade and all out of the window and there was a lively little fire in the roadway for a few minutes. Finally a trolley car came along from over the brook and fanned out the flame.

Effects of the Shower.

The heavy shower last evening caused the water to rise to considerable depth under all the railroad bridges in this city, but in Liberty street it was the highest. There the water backed up as far as Third street and flooded saveral cellars, but comparatively little damage was done.

More Macadamizing Proposed.

The members of the Somerset county Board of Chosen Freeholders are in session at Bound Brook today. The object of the special meeting is to consider the macadamizing of the connty road between that place and Somerville.

It would be hard to convince a man suffering from bilious colic that his agony is due to a microbe with an unpronouncable name. But one dose of DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure will convince him of its power to afford instant relief. It kills pain. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

NEW FREIGHT HOUSE READY.

Central Railroad Employees Will Take Possession Next Monday.

The new freight house has at last been completed and is ready for occupancy, and the employes of the company will take possession next Monday morning.

The structure is a handsome one in every detail. It is built of red brick, and is about 200 feet long and 75 feet wide. There are twenty-one large doors, ten on a side and one on the east end.

The offices, including a telegraph office, are situated in the west end of the building and are all that could be desired in the interior conveniences. The main part of the structure, where the freight will be stored, is about twice the size of the house now in use. The roof is supported by large iron girders, and in it are large skylights which will afford plenty of light. The structure will be lighted throughout by electricity and heated by steam.

The once vacant field, upon which the building is situated, has been transformed into a large freight yard. The approach to the new building for teams will be the North avenue side.

As soon as the new freight house is in full operation, the old one, opposite the depot, which has been an eyesore to the travelling public for many years, will be torn down and removed. If the Company can secure a suitable plot of ground near Grant avenue, part of the old structure will be taken there, and converted into a freight house, for the convenience of the merchants of the West End.

Contract Case Finally Settled.

For the third time the case of Pearson against Bohl, on contract, was tried yesterday before Justice Newcorn and the following jurors: J. W. Davis, John Ross, C. H. Hook, J. S. Ten Eyck, D. S. Pope, J. N. Anderson, Robert Walker, W. R. Moore, Calvin Sutton, J. Cashman, T. S. Van Horn and James Southard. The case was given to the jury at 6:15 last evening and one hour and a half later they returned with a verdict of $1 for the plaintiff. This throws the cost on the defendant. Lawyer H. C. Runyon represented the plaintiff and Lawyers Swackhamer and Kirch the defendent. The case was hotly contested throughout.

Accident on the Central.

One of the most dreaded accidents to train crews occurred on the Central Railroad near White House last evening. Engine No. 111 which reaches this city about 10 o'clock with a freight train was completely stripped on one side by the breaking of a driving rod while the engine was coming swiftly down a heavy grade. No one was injured.

Not Superstitious.

Contractor "Ran" Marsh, of Plainfield avenue, never was superstitious. On July 1st he set a hen with the ill-fated thirteen eggs, and id just three weeks to the day, thirteen fine, healthy chickens hatched out. Provided they all live, Mr. Marsh may keep them for thirteen years, with the hope that they will lay thirteen eggs each day.

An Operation Performed.

The condition of Harry Scully, who was injured at Scott's Press Works and who is now at the hospital, is about the same. An operation was performed yesterday afternoon and it was learned that there was a rupture of the intestines. Proper treatment was given and there is slight hopes of his recovery.

A Quarterly Meeting.

A quarterly meeting of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church will be held next Sunday. There will be services all day. In the morning at 10 and afternoon at 3 o'clock Rev. L. Sturges, Presiding Elder of this district, will conduct the services, and the Lord's Supper will be celebrated in the evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Off For a Cruise.

Edward Mackey and William Boyd, of this city, members of the Naval Reserves, left today for Hoboken to accompany the Naval Reserves on a cruise on the training ship Portsmoth. The ship will leave Jersey City next Saturday and be away for several weeks.

"Washington Echo Meeting."

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold a "Washington Echo Meeting" tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The meeting will be led by E. E. Anthony. Horace J. Martin will lead the singing of the convention hymns.

Collision at the Car House.

A collision occurred at the car house of the street railway this morning. Car No. 9 was coming out of the house, followed by Car No. 10. No. 9 slowed up, the brakes on No. 10 refused to work, and the collision smashed the fender on the latter car.

Miss Gertie Jones, of West Second street, will go tomorrow to Mt. Pleasant to visit friends.

NO DISTINCTIVE TITLE.

A COMPANY OF UNOSTENTATIOUS CHRISTIANS IN SESSION HERE.

Sometimes Called the Plymouth Brethren, But Repudiate the Appellation—Delegates From All Over the World.

A company of Christians, Plymouth Brethren, (so called) assembled today at the home of Paul J. Loizeaux, Brook avenue, for the purpose of following out a study of the Scriptures. The conference will probably continue during the next two weeks.

Persons are present from Minnesota, Nova Scotia, Canada, Wisconsin, the South, Quebec, England and a number of other places. Every evening lectures will be delivered and on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock and in the evening at 7:30. The lectures are open to the public. All other meetings are private, being intended as above mentioned, for a personal study of the Bible. These people call themselves Christians and repudiate any distinctive title or name. They are unostentatious and seek seclusion in their studies.

Several large tents have been erected on the grounds of Mr. Loizeaux, at the corner of Westervelt avenue and Chatham street, where the meetings will be held and where the delegates will take their meals. Places have been provided for sleeping. The First Church of Christ building on Grove street will be used for sleeping apartments for a number and arrangements have been made for that purpose. Among those who will lecture during the conference are F. W. Grant, of this city, S. Ridout, Baltimore, and Mr. Greenman, of Halifax.

A RUSTY NAIL IN HIS HAND.

Painful Wound Sustained by George Cose This Morning.

George Cose, of Grant avenue, who is employed in Fred Firstbrook's store on Liberty street, sustained a very painful injury to his left hand while at work this morning.

He was in the barn at the time, feeding a horse, when he ran a rusty nail completely through the palm of his left hand. He was unable to extricate it himself and called Mr. Firstbrook to his assistance. After several attempts the nail was finally removed. Mr. Cose allowed the wound to bleed freely in order to get out the poison, and as soon as possible had the wound dressed by a physician.

Tea at the Camp.

The managers of the Children's Camp will give a tea tomorrow afternoon form 4 to 6 at the Camp. All who are interested in this work are cordially invited to attend. The children who have been so untiring in their efforts to help this cause are especially invited. If the afternoon should prove stormy the tea will be postponed until Saturday. William Hand & Son will run stages from the end of the trolley line on Somerset street to the camp for 10 cents a head each way. The first stage will leave at 2 o'clock.

Farewell to Brigadier Evans.

Brigadier Evans, of this city, who for some time has been in command of the Central Division of the Salvation Army, was tendered a farewell demonstration at the Essex Lyceum, Newark, last night, previous to his departure for the Midland Division of the Army. At the demonstration Staff Captain Mrs. Dunham, Adjutant Damon and Mrs. Damon, and Adjutant Mrs. Marsh made addresses. A brass band from New York played and delegations from this city, Jersey City, Bloomfield and the Oranges were present.

A Charming Affair.

Cycling parties are becoming very populra for these summer evenings and a very pleasant one was arranged for Tueday evening by Miss Huntington, of Franklin place. The party enjoyed a spin out Park avenue in the direction of Metuchen and then returned to Miss Huntington's home where a number of guests, who have not yet mastered the wheel, awaited them. Refreshments and a social chat made the rest of the evening pass only too quickly.

Gave a Bicycle Party.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Drayton, of Franklin place, gave a delightful bicycle party Tuesday evening to a few of their friends. Their pretty residence was illuminated with numerous Japanese lanterns which were strung about the piazza. The party that participated in the ride numbered twelve, while the rest of the guests remained on the piazza and partook of the refreshments that were served to the cyclists on their return.

SILVER CONVENTION

Permanent Organization the Work of the First Day's Session.

OVERTURES TO THE POPULISTS

Committee To Call on the People's Party Convention and Ask for the Appointment of a Conference Committee.

St. Louis, July 23.—The first day's session of the national silver party's convention in Music hall did nothing outside of effecting permanent organization and appointing a committee to confer with a committee from the populists' convention. At 12 o'clock, one hour after the time set for calling the convention to order, there was not more than 200 persons present. A band in the gallery kept those present in good cheer until the convention opened. W. P. St. John, the New York banker, stepped on the stage at 11:52. He was received with slight cheering, as not many knew him. Temporary Chairman Newlands entered the hall a few minutes later and took a seat on the stage. Chairman Mott rapped for order at 12:29 o'clock. There were then about 400 delegates and others present. Francis G. Newlands was introduced as temporary chairman. He made a long speech almost entirely about silver. He said that the democratic party was for 16 to 1 independent of the world, which sentiment was cheered. His reference to Bryan was also loudly cheered. Bryan, he said, was young, courageous, wise, enthusiastic and conservative. "We must accept the brilliant leader of democracy and march with him to victory," he said. "We must put up silver and put down gold to rational bimetallism." Temporary Chairman Newlands concluded his address amid cheers and applause at 1:25 o'clock. The secretary called the roll for the committee on credential. A young woman, Miss Lillie B. Pierce of St. Louis, costumed as the Goddess of Liberty, read the Declaration of Independence amid great cheering. A permanent organization was undertaken, committees being named by calling the roll of states. While this was in progress a motion to adjourn until 4:30 o'clock was carried amid a great deal of confusion.

Afternoon Session.

Most of the delegates were in their seats promptly at 4:30 and quite a sprinkling of visitors were in the galleries. Mr. Williams, a delegate from Nebraska, moved that a committee of three be appointed to invite the delegates to the populist convention to take seats in the galleries for the afternoon, the populists not being in session. It was unanimously adopted. The rules of the present congress were agreed upon as the rules of the convention. The committee on credentials reported no contests and suggested that any portion of a state delegation present in the convention could cast the full vote of the delegation. The report was adopted.

Permanent Organization.

The permanent organization committee reported in favor of William P. St. John of New York as permanent chairman. As his name was mentioned the convention cheered vociferously. Hon. Charles A. Towne, of Minnesota was named as vice president of the convention, and again the delegates manifested their pleasure. Robert E. Diffenderfer of Pennsylvania was named as secretary. The report was adopted with a cheer. Mr. St. John was then conducted to the chair. He prefaced his remarks by saying that it having been intimated that he would be asked to preside over the convention he had put his remarks in writing, that what he had to say might be in a shape which he would not regret having said. He therefore asked the indulgence of the convention while he read rather than trust to the eloquence of the occasion. At the outset Mr. St. John captured the delegates by interlopating a statement that he should speak from a banker's standpoint, and that if he were addressing a gathering of bankers he would use no different terms. Mr. St. John's assumption that the convention would prevail upon the patriots calling themselves the people's party to endorse Bryan and Sewall was received with hearty applause, continuing for nearly a minute. The assertion that the threatened flow of silver from the east had no force and that the entire stock of gold would be retired was also without force, for all of it, but ten or fifteen millions circulating on the Pacific coast, had already been retired, was greeted with loud applause. When Mr. St. John concluded many delegates rose to their feet and cheered.

Motion To Confer with Populists.

The next business in order, Chairman St. John announced, was the appointment of special committees. Mr. G. W. Baker of California moved the appointment of a committee consisting of one from each state to meet a similar committee from the populist convention to take up the question of differences between the two parties for the purpose of coming to some rational agreement, to the end that the nomination of Bryan and Sewall might be ratified by the two conventions. Mr. Olmstead of Oregon, speaking for the populists, seconded the motion, making the suggestion that each state delegation select its representative on the committee. Some desultory discussion ensued as to the propriety of the silver men making the first advances. Mr. Olmstead again addressed the convention stating that the two conventions were called to meet here to-day in order to consolidate the free silver forces for the campaign. The populists being the older party and having always stood for free silver, it would ill become their dignity, he thought, for them to take the first step. A delegate from Illinois offered as a substitute for Baker's motion one to the effect that each state delegation select a member of this conference committee and that the populist convention be notified of the action with a request that a similar committee be appointed by that body. A delegate asked if it were the intention to await the report of the proposed committee before proceeding to nominate Bryan and Sewall. (Cries of "No.") "What's the use of appointing it then?" he asked. But no one answered.

Illinois Substitute Adopted.

A delegate from Kansas, Mr. Shinn, expressed the opinion that it was not wise or expedient for the silver convention to force themselves upon the populists. There was really no difference between the two bodies. (Cries of "Mistake"). Mr. Shinn tried the convention and was frequently interrupted by cries and applause to all of which he stated that he would speak until he had finished. Mr. Warden of Wisconsin pleaded for the expedition of business. "Let us," he said, "appoint the committee on conference, adopt a platform, nominate a candidate and go home." (Applause). After further discussion the previous question was ordered on the motion of the delegate of Illinois which was accepted by the author of the original motion, and it was agreed to. After the committee on conference had been nominated a delegate asked the chair what the committee would confer about. Chairman St. John said he had no further information than the questioner, but he inferred, as the committee was composed of level headed men and had but one object in view it would rise to the occasion. (Cheers). On motion of a delegate of Michigan, at the unanimous request of the delegation from that state, it was ordered that hereafter the proceedings of the convention be opened with prayer. At 6:25 p. m., on motion of Mr. Cornell of Colorado, the convention adjourned until 10 a. m. to-day, notwithstanding the objection of some delegates who wanted another recitation from Miss Pierce who was on the platform during the first session.

6,000 TROOPS ANNIHILATED.

Mohammedan Rebels Destroy the Chinese Force Sent Against Them.

Vancouver, B. C., July 23.—Chinese advices received here say that the Mohammedan rebels at Lanchu have routed and almost totally annihilated the force of 6,000 imperial troops that were sent to suppress them. The rebels are said to be marching through the country killing and pillaging on all sides. The authorities now purpose sending 4,000 troops, but these will doubtless be killed like the others. It is estimated that it will take 50,000 troops to subdue the Mohammedans.

VENEZUELAN BLUE BOOK.

Claim That Dutch Control of Disputed Territory Was Recognized by Spain.

London, July 23.—The promised Blue Book of Venezuela was issued last night. It comprises 356 pages, their contents consisting of documents from the Dutch and Spanish archives from 1621 to 1790. An official summary is prefixed, which claims that the documents prove that for over two centuries prior to 1796 the Dutch controlled the territories which are now in dispute, and that their control was recognized by the Spaniards.

Caught in the Shafting and Killed.

Oxford, N. Y., July 23.—At the mill of the F. G. Clarke Bluestone company an employe named J. J. Rathbone was drawing up a bolt preparatory to putting it on a pulley, when he was accidentally caught in the shafting and almost instantly killed. Rathbone's head was crushed and his face disfigured almost beyond recognition. One of his legs was torn from the body and the foot was severed from the other leg. He leaves a widow and two children.

His Wound Not Fatal.

Hartford, July 23.—The wound inflicted upon himself by Kantoro Takani, a Japanese student at Trinity college, who attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, is not a fatal one.

IN A BLAZE OF GLORY

Close of Cleveland's Founders' Day Celebration Last Night.

SPEECHES, FIREWORKS AND PARADE

Addresses by Major McKinley, Gov. Coffin and Others—President Cleveland's Part in the Exercises—Connecticut Was Well Represented.

Cleveland, July 23.—Founders' Day, the banner day in the Cleveland centennial celebration, wound up last night in a blaze of glory. At 8 o'clock the immense white arch sprang into brilliancy, the lights having been turned on by President Cleveland, who touched a button at Gray Gables, Buzzards Bay, Mass. There was pyrotechnics, illuminated parade and a jubilee night such as this city has never before seen. The day opened with booming cannon, clanging bells and shrieking whistles. All the business houses were closed. The exercises of the day were held in the Central armory. After music by the Cleveland vocal society, Mayor McKisson delivered an address of welcome on behalf of the Cleveland centennial commission. When the mayor in his address mentioned McKinley's name the great audience broke into loud cheers and applause. He referred to him as the next president. Handkerchiefs and fans were waved and the demonstration was like that so often witnessed in a national convention. President Cleveland sent the following message which was read by James H. Hoyt: "I congratulate the citizens of Cleveland upon the close of her first centennial and wish it may be only the beginning of her greatness and prosperity." The dispatch was warmly applauded. A centennial ode written for the occasion by Col. J. J. Platt was read and then Governor Coffin of Connecticut was introduced. He was heartily greeted by the audience. His speech was short. It was historical in tone and full of gracious compliment to Ohio, to Ohio men and to the people of Connecticut. At the close of Gov. Coffin's speech the audience rose to its feet and gave three cheers for "Old Connecticut." Major McKinley was then introduced by Mr. Hoyt and received with great cheering. He made a speech of some length, reviewing the history of the city and the western reserve in general. He was repeatedly interrupted by applause. The state of Connecticut was well represented at the celebration.

NEW KITE RECORD.

A Three Pound Meteorograph Raised to a Height of 5,961 Feet.

Bayonne, N. J., July 23.—The observers of Blue Hill observatory near Boston have notified William A. Eddy that a three pound meteorograph, made by Richaud of Paris, was raised by means of two and one-eighth miles of piano wire on July 20 to a height of 5,961 feet above the hill, thus breaking all kite altitude records. The three Eddy kites, made by Fergusson, passed through and beyond the clouds, and were only visible at intervals between breaks in the clouds. The kites and instruments remained at the highest point half an hour and exerted a pull of from 110 to 120 pounds. A good record was obtained, showing that the air was very dry above the clouds and about 18 degrees colder than at the earth's surface. The ascension was managed by Hotch, Clayton and Fergusson.

Want Boston Streets for Railways.

Boston, July 23.—A petition has been filed at the office of secretary of state by George A. Lancaster, Jas. H. Mellen and their associates in Boston, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and New York for a charter to operate a system of elevated and surface railways in Boston and its suburbs. This same association of gentlemen put in a bid to the transit commissioners on Monday for right to use the Boston subways. The Lynn & Boston and West End Railway companies also put in bids.

EVENING SESSION.

No Light, and Adjournment Taken Until To-day.

When the populists got together in convention in the evening they found themselves in trouble. No provision had been made for lighting the hall. Neither gas nor electricity gave a ray of light. The candles provided by the newspaper correspondents and the telegraph companies for their own use, served to make the darkness intense and more picturesque. There was a full attendance on the floor and many spectators in the galleries. For half an hour humorously inclined people in the galleries and on the floor indulged in jokes at the expense of the populists and jeers and college yells prevailed. Some attempts at explanation were made from the chairman's platform, but they were received with derision and hootings. Finally some of the delegates started to sing the national anthem. Others joined in and the band played the accompaniment and this restored better humor. The band continued to play and it was promised from the chairman's stand that light would soon be forthcoming. The real explanation of the trouble was that whoever was in charge of the arrangements had neglected to engage service for the evening from the electric light company until late in the afternoon when it was too late to turn on the current without great risk, as preliminary tests of the circuits were necessary. Some suggestions of adjournment were made but they met with no favor, the crowd rather enjoyed the darkness and the fun. The band kept up its music—Dixie and other popular airs—and the crowd shouted and varied the shouting with cheers and jocular remarks. This condition of things went on without a particle of light, save from the few candle points stuck on the reporters' table and one on the chairman's table. Some negro melodies were sung from different parts of the hall. John Brown's spirit went marching on, and college yells were indulged in. Their were cries from the crowd for Jacob Coxey to make a speech, and also calls for Mrs. Lease. She was on the platform and said: "Wait 'till the lights are turned on and I'll talk until you can't rest." Finally the patience of the managers was exhausted, there was no prospect of the electric light being turned on, and, yielding to the necessities of the case, it was announced at 8:50 p. m. that the convention had adjourned until 10 a. m. to day.

NEW JERSEY BRIDGE PROJECT.

Application Made for a Receiver for the Atlantic Construction Company.

Newark, N. J., July 23.—The action begun in the court of chancery yesterday may tie-up operations on the New York and New Jersey bridge project, application for a receiver being made to Vice Chancellor Emery by Gustave C. Henry, stockholder in the Atlantic Construction company, which is to construct the bridge. The company is capitalized at $1,500,000. It is declared insolvent by Henry, who also swears that the bridge franchise is all of value owned by the concern. Its capital, he says, was eaten up by constructing the New Jersey approach to the bridge. Senator Voorhees, representing Henry, claimed that the Atlantic company was about to water its stock from $1,500,000 to $5,000,000, which would injure stockholders' interests. Action was deferred until August 18.

GIFT TO WORCESTER HOSPITAL.

Dedication of the Samuel Winslow Surgery Yesterday Afternoon.

Worcester, Mass., July 23.—The new Samuel Winslow Surgery at the Worcester City hospital, the gift of Col. Samuel E. Winslow to the city as a memorial of his father, the late ex-mayor, was dedicated yesterday. In the morning physicians from all over the country inspected the surgery, which cost $25,000 and is one of the finest in the country. The formal exercises were held late in the afternoon in the surgery. Mayor Sprague turned it over to the trustee of the hospital, whose spokesman was Dr. T. H. Gage.

Received Poisoned Wine and Cake.

New Haven, Conn., July 23.—Mrs. C. Hartels of Sherman avenue, this city, received by mail a day or two since a package of cake and a phial of wine. She received also a letter signed "S. R.," which stated that the cake and wine were portions of her correspondent's wedding feast. The cake smelled strongly of some chemical and the cake and wine were turned over to Dr. Converse. The latter found the cake saturated with carbolic acid and a great quantity of belladonna in the wine. The police are investigating.

Rhode Island Yacht Club.

Providence, July 23.—The Rhode Island Yacht club began its annual cruise yesterday with good wind and weather and with the largest fleet in its history, the big sloops including the rivals Tomahawk and Minerva. The run yesterday was to Wickford, to-day to Newport and to-morrow to Bristol.

$7,750,000 Turned into the Sub-Treasury at New York.

MORE READY WHEN CALLED FOR

Believed That $20,000,000 Can Easily Be Raised—Boston Expected To Contribute $2,000,000—Meeting of Foreign Bankers.

New York, July 23.—The movement inaugurated Monday to protect the treasury gold reserve, as mentioned in these dispatches, made further and important progress yesterday, and it brought with it a firmer and more confident tone for stocks and bonds generally. President Tappen says there is no doubt that the total will reach the amount originally decided upon, namely, twenty millions. Up to the close of business last evening $7,500,000 of the gold already subscribed had been turned into the sub-treasury, and if occasion warrants it the remainder can be handed over within the next twenty-four hours. It will be seen that Mr. Tappen and his associates have been eminently successful in their self-imposed task.

Meeting of Foreign Bankers.

An informal meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. of foreign bankers, who met to consider what could be done to prevent or diminish gold exports or in any other way in their power to assist in the maintainance of the gold reserve, supplemental to the action of the banks in putting their gold at the disposal of the treasury. The following committee was appointed, to whom the whole subject was referred to formulate a plan: J. Pierpont Morgan, chairman; John Crosby Brown of Brown Bros. & Co., A. Luttgew of August Belmont & Co., Jacob H. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., William Salomon of Speyer & Co., E. Mayer of Lazard Freres, H. Ickelheimer of Heidelback, Ickelheimer & Co. While nothing of an official character was known, the general impression is that the foreign bankers have practically agreed to supply the wants of remitters until the crops begin to move. The Belmont-Morgan syndicate in 1895, under their contract with the government, controlled the sterling exchange market and checked gold exports; so the experiment is not a new one by any means. A member of the firm of William H. Crossman & Bro. attended the conference. This firm was not in touch with the Belmont-Morgan syndicate and about a month previous to the expiration of the contract referred to shipped considerable gold. Mr. Crossman's presence at the meeting is therefore considered significant. The street is firmly convinced that the deal with the foreign bankers will be carried through, and for this reason the withdrawal of over $2,000,000 in gold from the sub-treasury yesterday caused no uneasiness.

Boston Banks Will Aid.

Boston, July 23.—Boston bankers are coming forward in pursuance of the course taken in New York and are subscribing a part of the gold holdings for the benefit of the national gold reserve. President Beal has been about the street conferring with the different bank officers in relation to the matter. It was proposed that each bank should turn over 30 per cent. of its gold and a subscription paper was circulated for signatures. The banks showed no apprehension at the situation and in general there was a readiness to help out the government in the way offered. There was no general conference of bank officers in regard to the matter, although Mr. Beal had a talk with several representatives at the clearing house. The rest has been done by personal interviews with the bankers in circulating the subscription paper. The total amount expected to be raised by the Boston banks is $2,000,000.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, July 23.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day had declined to $86,839,528. Yesterday's withdrawal were $2,776,500, of which $2,012,000 was for export.

New Astronomical Discovery.

Geneva, N. Y., July 23.—Prof. William H. Brooks, director of Smith observatory, while observing the moon Tuesday night with the large telescope, made a most interesting and unique discovery. A dark round object was seen to pass rather slowly across the moon in a horizontal direction. Prof. Brooks believes that it was the passage of a dark meteor between the earth and the moon, far beyond the earth's atmosphere, so that it remained non-luminous. The observation is new in astronomical records.

To Promote McKinley's Election.

Boston, July 23.—The Business Men's Non-Partisan Campaign committee of Boston, to promote the election of McKinley and Hobart, in the interest of sound money, was organized at a meeting held in the rooms of the Merchant's association yesterday afternoon. Those present at the meeting were all representative business men. Rudolph Blankenburg of Philadelphia was present and explained the organization of the business men of that city in the interest of sound money.

Sudden Death of an Aged Clergyman.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 23.—The Rev. Dr. Halsey Wing Knapp, the well-known Baptist clergyman, died yesterday at his residence in this city. He was as well, apparently, as usual in the evening before, except for a slight attack of indigestion. The deceased was born in New York city and was 72 years old. He was at various times in his life pastor of various churches in Brooklyn and elsewhere.

There seems to be a dearth of candidates for the Democratic county nominations.

The desire to be "regular" just as far as possible has led many Democratic papers to print the Democratic nominations at the head of their editorial columns while they are doing their utmost to defeat the candidates in their editorials.

Here is the way that "Freeholder," that sarcastic writer of the Jersey page of the New York Press, sizes up the Socialist Labor nominations:

Firebrands of socialism are but dimly ignited in the Eighth district, and the ticket nominated at Plainfield gives a fair estimate of the really small number of pessimists the two parties will have to console, or extinguish, in November.

The Press "Oh'd" for a Y. M. C. A. building. The building is one of the sights of Plainfield. The Press "Oh'd" for the removal of the freighthouse. We have the assurance of the honorable officers of the Central Railroad that the freighthouse will go in a short time and a pretty waiting station and park will grace its present location. Now we say, Oh for the abolition of the free midnight lunch of the police.

GREAT PROJECT HALTED.

Every Jerseyman was interested in the plan to build a bridge across the North river from the Jersey side to a point somewhere near Forty-second street, and it will be with regret that they learn that the company who were the promoters are involved financial trouble and are likely to abandon the project. The company was capitalized at $1,500,000, of which $80,000 was paid in. Naturally, in such an immense undertaking as the building of a bridge a mile long, there was drawbacks that discouraged some of the less venturesome stockholders, and as a result there was a reduction in the revenues to carry on the preliminary work. An application has now been made by Foster M. Voorhees, representing a dissatisfied stockholder, to appoint a successor for the company. Even the complication does not end the company's career, it will greatly retard its work. Since the movement to bridge the Hudson was first set on foot the promoters of the scheme have had many obstacles to overcome. In the first place special legislation had to be obtained from Congress before the work could be taken up. A charter was finally granted to the New York and New Jersey Bridge Company to build the bridge, and the Atlantic Construction Company was to have erected the Jersey end. Plans were drawn, which had to be submitted to a commission of engineering experts. These were all disproved of by the Secretary of War because the estimated cost exceeded the limit. New plans were drawn and preliminary work is still being carried on.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

I hear that those progressive women of the Town Improvement Association are considering whether or not it would be worth their while to establish a drinking fountain for man and beast on North avenue. Quite a commendable effort, I think. Consider the delight with which the poor equines that haul the public hacks from the North Avenue station to various parts of the city would welcome such an innovation for their parched tongues.

* * * * * *

One of the familiar sights to be seen on North avenue every afternoon after the arrival of the club car train from New York is the demure figure of Mayor Gilbert preambulating towards the city offices on Park avenue. His Honor always walks, unless, perchance, some personal friend with whom he wishes to chat, gives him a ride in his equipage. But it is such a short distance and the Mayor has so little exercise in his office in New York that it is seldom that he is seen in a vehicle. At his office where he looks after the municipal machine there is always plenty to occupy his mind until dinner time. Perhaps it is a poor man seeking a license with which he may become a public purveyor of some article, an aggrieved citizen seeking official redress, or again it may be an important city official or influential citizen in consultation with him on important matters. But whoever he may be, rich or poor, in broadcloth or overalls, so long as he is civil and has business, he receives attention. And that is why the Mayor is popular with all in whom he comes in contact. Mr. Gilbert is quite an enthusiastic bicycle rider and not infrequently he inspects the streets and other phases of municipal government aboard his wheel.

* * * * * *

If it isn't one odd construction of law that brings the New Jersey office holder into publicity it is another. My attention has been called to the extremes which Somerville's constabulary are going to in the enforcement of certain ordinances for the regulating of bicycling. Sometime ago the officers of that county seat passed an ordinance making it compulsory for riders to ring their bells when approaching crosswalks. Monday night two Plainfield young men pedaled into that town on a little evening trip. Since the ordinances of that town are not on the tip of the tongue of all strangers, they approached a crosswalk, in the proximity of which they saw no person, without ringing their bells. But in the background regaled a vigilant officer. His ears did not hear the tinkle of their bells and he hailed them. Like all good Plainfielders they had a proper respect for the hand of the law and pulled up to hear what the officer had to say. With a few words he told them they had committed the awful crime of riding over a crosswalk without ringing their bells. They protested that no one was in sight when they approached the crossing and besides, they were not aware of the existence of such an ordinance. Protests were of no use, excuses of no avail. In due course of time they were arraigned before a town justice. He promptly discharged them. There is various ways of enforcing laws. The Somerville way is the fool-way.

* * * * * *

You may be a yellow metal man or for a white metal man in this currency discussion now, but which ever way the election goes, there is bound to be plenty of blue men at the end.

* * * * * *

Why doesn't the Common Council make an effort to have the socalled city park transformed into a popular resort for the people. With the grass cut and a few benches placed along its paths, it would be something more than a waste of land and an eyesore to the residential section of which it is a part. In a city like Plainfield, famed for its beauty and progressiveness, it is rather odd to think that there is no place where one can find a free and pleasant spot to loiter on a sultry evening, when it is considered how picturesque and particularly suitable those few acres are for a breathing place for the people.

NOT HELPLESS.

No Baby Need Die of Cholera Infantum.

No Trouble Where the Diet Was Lactated Food.

Hot Weather Fatal to the Carelessly Fed —Baby Should Grow as Much in July as in December—Health and Growth Wholly a Matter of Proper Food.

The most pitiable sight in the world is that of a sick baby, that can neither eat, sleep nor hold up its head.

In nearly every case parents or nurses are responsible, and not the hot weather.

Even those children who are inclined to be sickly are not helpless in the hottest weather if they are in the hands of parents who know how very much depends on the child's food being right.

A LACTATED FOOD BABY.

Children born delicate grow to be strong when fed on an exclusive diet of lactated food. The rich ingredients just suited to a baby's stomach, plump out its tiny frame, and make the converting of its food into solid flesh and bone an easy matter.

In hot weather a baby's entire alimentary system is quick to be deranged; its appetite and power of assimilating its food are very apt to flag. Lactated food at such trying times not only keeps a baby fully nourished, but prevents any possibility of diarrheal disorders.

The principal element of mother's milk is sugar of milk. This is the basis of lactated food. With it is combined the nutritious elements of the great cereals, wheat and barley, and the necessary bone-forming salts. This makes lactated food a perfect and natural substitute for mother's milk. Mothers should remember that the best food that can be given to a baby in summer, lactated food, is so inexpensive that it is within the reach of every family. For twenty-five cents a mother can buy a package that contains enough to make ten pints of cooked food.

If anything but mother's milk is used, use lactated food. It is prepared with exacting care under the personal supervision of Prof. Boynton of Vermont university, and is recommended by physicians as the best possible diet for infants, invalids, for children getting their teeth, or being weaned, especially during the summer months.

Mrs. M. Koch of Dorchester, Mass., recently wrote to the proprietors of lactated food:

"I enclose the picture of our little girl, Emma Marguerite Koch, aged eighteen months.

"When she was two weeks old we commenced to feed her on lactated food. She has never since been sick, and is a perfectly healthy child. This picture was taken when she was fifteen months old. We have a baby six months old, whom we feed on lactated food also, and he thrives on it."

First Dose Helped.

North Plainfield, July 15th, 1896.—"Several years ago I took Hood's Sarsaparilla after having the grip, and my health was benefitted almost from the first dose."—B. D. F. Randolph, 132 Grove street. Hood's pills are easy to take.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and state of extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing buisness during the spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adopted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

while relying on success and ultimate repayment. During the duke's subsequent illness innumerable wrongs were done his estates, winked at by authority, and never reported to the central powers. Undertakings into which the duke had allowed himself to be drawn, in the fever of adventure belonging to the era, came to nothing—perhaps at an imperial frown. Banking houses failed, factors retained funds, government seized here, landslides destroyed vineyards there; and in the time of the first seclusion of the duchess, after her widowhood, robberies right and left, public and private, dispossessed her of vast resources. When she attempted to look into matters for herself, she was little wiser than before; but she discovered that she must dismiss her ladies and the gentlemen of her household and live as she understood lesser nobles, or even quite plain people, lived. Her one faithful friend remained with her, her adviser and the boy's tutor. That he was a physician of note she thought fortunate, for the boy's sake; she did not know of how much note, sent for and consulted with by the greatest. She never knew the sacrifice of station and income he made by remaining with her. But it was necessary, even had it been contrary to his inclination, for M. Etienne was also to some extent a man of affairs, and even the little that was left had been rescued by him. The greater part of the chateau was closed, to go slowly to decay. What did she and her boy want more than few rooms and simple fare? With only the servants that were indispensable and in ways she knew as a girl at home with her father she took up life again, at once too proud and too humiliated to expose her condition to old friends—one by one those old friends, themselves in grief or seclusion, or exiled with one or the other of the unacknowledged kings to whom they gave allegiance, disappearing from the face of the earth.

But none the less was she a duchess of the Sarazines Beauxlieux. None the less was her son the duke. And apart from her absorbing love as his mother, she had an adoring veneration for him as the last of the Sarazines Beauxlieux.

"You will remember," she said to the child, holding his hand as she sat beside his bed at night—she had not been able to delegate this delight even when service was abundant, and formality triumphant, although she half feared it was a survival of that peasant strain in her again. "You will not forget, Beauxlieux, even in your sleep you will not forget who you are."

"How is it that I can forget?" asked the child. "Do not all children remember themselves?"

"All children!" said the mother. "There is only one Beauxlieux! And it is that which you must recall. All that it means, all that the Beauxlieux have been since the beginning of the world."

"I AM NOT A KING, MOTHER."

"Were we there then?"

The question gave her pause. "The strongest, the bravest, the best, came early to their own, Beauxlieux," she said then. "And in that, it signifies to you that in your veins flows the last best drop of their blood, and you can never be anything but as strong, as brave, as best, as they."

"Well, mamma, it is that I will try," said the child dutifully, and contentedly folding both little hands over hers, as he fell asleep.

"You will not try," she said. "You will be."

At another time, after she had seen him conduct himself too masterfully towards two little lads he had come across in the forest, she reminded him that he was not the Duke des Sarazines Beauxlieux for his own pleasure. "It would be an injustice on the part of Heaven," she said, as they sat in the firelight, "if a king were a king for his own happiness. He is a king because he is fit to rule, because he can care for his subjects better than they can care for themselves, because he is great and generous, and the good God trusts to him the lives and happiness and honor of his people. A great trust, Beauxlieux, a vast responsibility."

"I am not a king, mamma."

"No? But you are a duke, a leader."

"Then, my mother," said Beauxlieux, "although they may not be my people, yet there are Jean and Pierre—and there are my books and M. Etienne—if they shared with me."

"In your instruction? I do not know," said the duchess, retreating into her fortress of haughtiness. "I will think of it. Still they are two souls—to let in the light on them—I will speak of it with monsieur."

And thus through confiscation and wrong and ruin the duchess kept the idea of greatness, and moved with a dignity becoming it.

And let come what privation would the Beauxlieux diamonds remained in her possession. If anyone in the outside world thought of them at all, it was supposed they had gone with the rest of the vast properties. But they reposed still in their cases within the iron strong box, in a secret place of her own apartments. And every few years, on the evening of some birthday of the young duke, she opened their receptacle and saw the great live things shining at her, and they seemed to her the embodiment and expression of all the old and rightful Beauxlieux splendor.

The poor duchess had no new dresses; but her faithful Olympe kept her clothed from the almost boundless resources of her former wardrobe, according to the rumor of the modes that reached them. And she would have some garment put on, the shimmer of whose luster was softened by the cobwebs of the ancient lace belonging to the ladies of Beauxlieux, and with the largest of the diamonds around her throat and on her hair, would sail down the grand staircase to the salon, where the young duke, and monsieur, his tutor, awaited her, as resplendent, as stately, as beautiful as a goddess. At least so it seemed not only to Jean and Pierre, who, according to Beauxlieux' request, and on monsieur's advice, had been admitted to share the young duke's studies, Pierre's eyes opening as if the riches of the earth suddenly blazed upon him, but Jean feeling as if a queen of Heaven were no lovelier or no more fittingly adorned, but to her son also who felt, in her presence, scarcely the need of Heaven, and to M. Etienne who never, by so much as a glance, said what he felt.

CHAPTER III

Life went on then at the chateau in a still and peaceful manner, and, living only like a gentlewoman of most restricted means, perhaps the duchess did not really know how happy she was. Frequently M. Etienne went away for a brief while to Bordeaux, to London, to Paris and back, sometimes to assist at an operation, sometimes on consultation. The poor duchess, who had once only to express a wish and it seemed as if the forces of nature fell in line to grant it, did not know that practically the greater part of the money spent in the household was that brought home by M. Etienne, and after those journeys—M. Etienne, who could have commanded fortunes had he not chosen rather to remain the protector of her and of her child. Seldom anything broke the tranquil monotony. Once Beauxlieux was nearly drowned, and the joy of his revival was more than joy could have been at the restoration of power and wealth. Once Jean broke his leg and the monsieur set it, and the duchess tended him, the little fair-haired fellow with his appealing face, as if he had been her own, and he loved them as a dog might love them, or rather as a slave who had still the memory of his own tribe and cabins. As for little Pierre, nothing ever happened to him; he kept himself out of every trouble; he was always brought in innocent from every scrape; you might suspect him, but you could never bring the mischief home to him. Victorine, the half niece of Olympe, who had been brought to the chateau at the wish of madame, when the child's parents died, was Pierre's able abettor; and many a time did Jean suffer in silence a reprimand for the fault of those two impish things. But Victorine was very pretty and little and tender, and if Pierre could connect her with his misdemeanors, he knew he was safe from betrayal from Beauxlieux and from Jean. The duchess liked to see Victorine's pretty youth and brightness about her, thinking of no possible consequences, and had her taught by Olympe to rip and sew and dress hair; and then, in the motherliness of her nature, and because there were no daughters of neighboring seigneurs, as in old times, to be taught the fine arts of home, she would have her an hour or two a day with herself in the morning, leading her into the mysteries of lacemaking and embroidery of water-color painting, reading history and poems, greatly to Olympe's ill-concealed joy. Sometimes Duchesse des Sarazines Beauxlieux smiled to herself, a little bitterly, to think that the niece of her serving-woman, and the children of a charcoal burner and of a fisherman should be the half of her household.

But while her son grew and increased in stature and strength and in all the finer and nobler aspects of his being, the duchess asked no more. Under M. Etienne's care his scholarship was all that could be wished; and in the matter of physical accomplishment the tall, lithe stripling fenced and boxed and rode and shot with the best; and his mother thought with fond pride how well he would take his place and part when he should be called to it.

Occasionally now the monsieur took Beauxlieux with him on his journeys to Paris or elsewhere, and his mother was satisfied that he should first see the world, and perhaps what is called life, with M. Etienne beside him. They made no use of his title, however, then. "It would be absurd," said Beauxlieux, "without a sou, so to say, in one's pocket." But he was aware that that was something not to dwell on before the duchess. When he came home he

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

BURIAL OF A POPE.

Impressive Ceremonials That Follow the Death of the Pontiff.

When the death of the reigning pope draws near, the cardinal secretary of state informs the dean of the Sacred college, who summons his colleagues to the residence of the dying man; the cardinal vicar issues orders that prayers be offered in the Roman chuches; the cardinal penitentiary attends the bedside of the pope, to whom the sacristan of the pope's chapel rdministers extreme unction. As soon as may be after death has occurred, the body must be formally recognized by the cardinal camerlingo, who, in obedience to an ancient custom, first knocks thrice on the door of the bed-chamber. Getting no answer, he enters, and taps thrice with a silver mallet on the dead man's forehead, and thrice calls him by name. No response coming, the camerlingo declares that the pope is dead. Thenceforth the camerlingo is the most important of the cardinals, having charge of the preparations for the conclave, of the government of the palace, and of the transactions with the representatives of foreign powers, to whom he officially announces the pope's death; the papal guard of Swiss halberdiers attends him when he goes out; his arms are stamped on the medal of the vacant see; he takes an inventory of the property in the palace, and affixes seals to the dead pontiff's papers. But in order to prevent him from overstepping his authority the Sacred college appoints three cardinals—a bishop, a priest, and a deacon—who are called the heads of the orders, and whose business it is to oversee his acts. They serve for three days, being replaced by others chosen in rotation.

Meanwhile the great bell of the capitol, the so-called "Paterine," has tolled the news to the citizens in Rome. Formerly this was the signal for unlocking the jails and for unrestrained disorders. Brokers used to set up booths where pools, as at a horse race, were sold on the probable next pope, enormous sums being squandered in this species of gambling; more recently that scandal has been less open. Every one is on tiptoe with excitement; churchmen as well as laymen display an eagerness out of tune with the grief in which the church is officially declared to be plunged.

For during the novendial, or nine days succeeding the pope's death, the celebration of his obsequies and the mourning for his loss are supposed to absorb universal attention. His body must first be embalmed and then attired in funeral apparel. When masses have been said over it in the presence of the cardinals, it is removed to St. Peter's, where, on a magnificent catafalque, it l

THURSDAY, July 23. Sun rises 4:38 a. m., sets 7:32 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:32 p. m. and 3:38 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The ten-mile handicap road race of the Union County Roadsters that was run off last Saturday, and in which W. J. Mooney was the winner, has been declared off by C. H. Mitchell, the referee. One of the contestants, Elijah Stout, Jr., charged that Mooney had been paced by a tandem.

The arrangements for the big lantern parade of the Alcyone Cyclers of Elizabeth have been completed and will take place this evening. The parade will form at Union Square, and be reviewed at Liberty Square. The prizes offered are unusually fine and should cause many to enter the parade. The principal prize is a souvenir emblem silver cup of handsome design and valued at $50. It will be given to the club having the greatest number of men in line, commanded by a road officer. The other prizes are gold watches, one each to be presented to the lady and gentleman riding the most artistically decorated wheel.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The Young Men's Association of the Monroe Avenue chapel has always been an enterprising society, and has done its share in the furtherance of honest sports. A number of its members are athletes of more or less expertness, and they are very much interested in the general outdoor sports. An effort is being made to get up a field day for September in conjunction with some other club if possible, and if not, they will endeaavor to conduct it alone. A committee consisting of Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, Chauncey Burt and Walter Manning, have the matter in charge and will undoubtedly make a success of it.

GOLF.

A meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be held in the clubhouse tomorrow evening at which time a constitution will be adopted and much other important business will be transacted.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

P. B. Macintyre and brother Geo. M. Macintyre left town yesterday for Princess Bay, L. I., where they will try their luck at fishing.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

W. C. Townsend, of Somerset street, is ill at his home.

Miss Josie Feller, of Pearl street, is sojourning at Asbury Park.

Miss Stelle Bittenbinder, of East Front street, is visiting at Stroudsburg, Pa.

Miss Daisy Snyder, of Easton, is visiting her sister, Miss Millie Snyder, of East Front street.

A. H. Atterbury and family, of West Seventh street, have gone to Marion, Mass., for the summer.

Quicker Mail Delivery.

Another improvement is to be made in the mail service in this city by the addition of another carrier. Ed Hann, who carries mail in the business portion of the city, will take a route in the First ward, which was formerly covered by J. W. A. Bauersachs, and the latter will carry mail only in the borough. Substitute Letter-carrier Chas. Glaentzer will carry mail in the business portion. This change is made because of some of the routes being too long and will be the means of a more prompt delivery of mail.

They Will Be Provided For.

Philip B. and George H. Macintyre, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co., left yesterday afternoon for Prince's Bay, where they expect to spend today fishing. Mr. Martin has arranged to have a truck at the station on their return to carry their fish and any thing else that may be necessary.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits; 75c. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, druggist, Park and North avenues. 2 12 y

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

LIVELY NOONDAY ROW.

Ross, the Restaurant Man, Scraps With a Colored Girl.

Park avenue was roused from its usual quietude this afternoon by a great commotion in the restaurant owned by Ross, near Front street. According to the business men of the near vicinity, quarrels have been frequent between Ross and a colored woman employed by him, who is known as Kittie. One of these quarrels started this afternoon and very soon had assumed immense proportions.

Kittie called Ross names which would not look quite proper in print and he returned her compliments. Finally Ross became so angry that he started to strike her, but another colored woman employed in the place interfered and Ross desisted.

The racket could be heard for a block away, and quite a crowd gathered, and several of these heard the woman say to Ross that he had forgotten how he had almost gotten down on his knees to her in his efforts to keep her quiet about his selling intoxicating liquors.

It is said the affair was caused by the woman demanding the money due her and Ross refusing to pay her at that time. She finally got her money, but not until after the proceedings had been gone through with.

BRYAN ON FIRST BALLOT.

Populist Steering Committee Figure Out 707 Votes For Him.

St. Louis, July 23—The delegates to the Populist National Convention were late today in assembling at Convention Hall.

At the hour set for the beginning of the morning session, 10 o'clock, not one-quarter of the seats in the pit were filled and the galleries were nearly empty.

Chairman Butler called the convention to order at 10:11.

The Bryan steering committee said this morning that a sufficient number of votes were pledged to nominate their candidate on the first ballot, which they figure at 707.

This estimate was said to be very conservative, and it was thought it underestimated the Bryan strength by at least 100 votes. As the total number of delegates will not exceed 1,300, it will be seen from the figures that Bryan will have a clear majority of 100 at least.

WOMEN FOR CLEAN STREETS.

They Begin a Crusade That Has Good Results, and Will Keep It Up.

The streets of the borough have become so much neglected of late that the female residents of Bound Brook have organized the Health Protective Association, and propose to see to it that the streets are kept clean.

Some of the most prominent women of the borough have become identified with the movement, and they recently found an ordinance imposing a fine of $2 on all citizens who permitted refuse to gather or grass and weeds to grow in front of their homes. Notices were therefore sent to all owners who had neglected the streets in front of their residences, and there has been a real old-fashioned cleaning up. The women propose to go still further, and beautify the streets, as well as keep them clean. Plans for doing this will be discussed before any scheme is adopted.

SPYING AGAINST SALOONS.

Sunday Observance League Get Evidence Against Violators in Westfield.

Judge McCormick, of the Union County Court, has assured President Burhans, of the Westfield Sunday Observance League, that if evidence is presented to him showing that there are any saloons that keep open on Sunday he will revoke their licenses without delay. There have been complaints heretofore, and he expresses himself as encouraging the efforts of the League in that direction.

Acting on this incentive, the League directed its efforts Sunday to watching the saloons and to gathering evidence against the places where, it is alleged, intoxicating liquors are sold without a license. Moral suasion is being used in the case of other offenders, with the result that the majority have agreed that if there is a general Sunday closing they will join in it.

George Firstbrook, of the West End, went to New York today to meet Thos. Reid, of Worcester, Mass., whom he will bring home with him for a short stay.

The Fact That Doctors

frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from catarrh is proof that catarrh is a local and climatic disease, and not a constitutional affection. Therefore, unless you can afford to leave home and business, you can find the remedy in Ely's Cream Balm. Applied directly to the seat of the disease, it effects instant relief and a satisfactory cure after a short continuance. No mercury nor injurious drug is contained in the Balm. 50 cents. All druggists.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

STORM TO SUNLIGHT.

MRS. BOOTH THUS DESCRIBES THE BIRTH OF THE VOLUNTEERS.

The Organization Was Started With Limited Funds and Facilities, But is Rapidly Growing in Influence and Power

The appearance in this city last evening of Mrs. Ballington Booth, wife of Commander Booth, of the American Volunteers, attracted to the First Baptist church an audience that occupied every seat in the large auditorium. Howard Case presided at the organ and rendered an appropriate selection while the people were gathering. When Mrs. Booth entered a volley was given by the soldiers. In the absence of Rev. Dr. Yerkes, who was obliged to fill a previous engagement, Rufus K. Case presided, and read a letter of regret from Dr. Yerkes. After the congregation had joined heartily in singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," and Major Trumbull had offered prayer, Mr. Case introduced Mrs. Booth with the following words: "My impression is that you are already acquainted with Mrs. Booth, though perhaps you have never met her personally. You have heard of her self-sacrificing labor, and how wisely, persistently and modestly she has worked with great success. On your behalf I welcome you tonight." Turning to the Commander's wife he said: "Mrs. Booth, we extend to you a warm sympathetic welcome to our city and church. May God go with you and bless you with your husband in your labors in this country of your adoption." At the close of the remarks, while Mrs. Booth was rising to her feet a long hearty applause was given. Mrs. Booth spoke in part as follows:

"I am glad to speak to you tonight, for I feel as though your welcome is not only one of curiosity but from the heart. I come not to vindicate this new movement, nor to rake up the past, nor to say unkind words, nor to give an exposition of principles and lastly not to tell of the great things we expect to set on foot. There is a great wide, beautiful field to labor in and there is room for all. The name chosen for our banner is 'The Lord Our Banner,' and in the four months of our existence the Lord has been our banner. We started single handed and so far everything has prospered. This movement, like a great many others, was born in a storm, but God has led us into the sunlight. Commander and I have suffered and sometimes when I have looked into his face, I wonder that it is not wrinkled and stained. I know some of the experiences of the past. God has been with us all the way through and we can read victory on our banners. This organization is not ours. Our plans were laid differently, but we now thank God for the young movement. God is to lead. There are no life vows in our organization, for we believe that all life vows should be made to God and we want people to go where He leads. The progress of our organization has been remarkable and it has surprised us. We did not expect thousands to rush into our ranks at once, as some people believed they would. The foundation came first and that has been well and truly made. We started alone in two rooms with $100 borrowed money and not the millions as reported.

"Suggestions came thick and fast from all quarters. One person said we were to go to Jerusalem and make that place the capitol of the world. Our friends, the reporters, bothered us considerable and for a time it seemed as though they would not let us grow. When we had nothing to tell them they made up stories and thus, no doubt, amused the public. We started with five staff officers and we now have forty-five staff officers and 100 posts in four months time. The Defenders' League formed itself and we now lack twenty-six persons of having a membership of 1,700. There is one thing the Commander has set his face against and that there is to be no debt around us, and there will be none. We have faith and practical common sense. The Volunteer Gazette recently started is now paying for itself, and next week a new monthly magazine will be placed in your hands. We don't want to talk too much, but we want to show the American people what we can do."

Mrs. Booth then went on and gave an interesting account of her prison work among convicts and told how she and her husband intended to make it a special feature. She related many touching incidents that had come under her personal supervision. At the close a collection was taken. Members of the local post occupied seats in the loft and in front of the pulpit was placed the Volunteer and American flags. The service closed with a prayer by Mrs. Booth. She was obliged to catch a train and in consequence she was unable to meet personally those present. Among the interested persons present was Col. Evans, son of Brigadier Evans of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Booth is an earnest talker and she won many friends in this city last evening.

BLACKMAIL IS CHARGED

FORMER PLAINFIELDERS IN THE MESHES OF THE LAW.

Mrs. George Roberts Charged With Palming Off a Child as a Son That Was Her's—Her Husband Arrested.

One of the most sensational suits that is attracting attention in New York is the alleged blackmail case of Mrs. "Frank" Roberts against millionaire Marvin Cross, of Brooklyn.

The woman in the case is the wife of George Roberts, formerly of this city, and by the legal action taken yesterday on the part of Cross, Roberts has also become involved in the affair as an accomplice.

The story is that for years Cross has been paying hush money to Mrs. Roberts under the belief that he was the parent of her child. He was a man of prominence in business and political circles, and his family moved in the best of society. At one time it is said that he paid as high as $14,000 to Mrs. Roberts under the threat that she would publish him, and thus humiliate himself and family and practically ruin their standing in the circles in which they mingled. Some time ago Cross's wife died and he resolved to refuse to pay Mrs. Roberts anything more.

The refusal was met a few days ago by a suit being instituted by Mrs. Roberts in which she sought the courts to compel Cross to provide for the support of his alleged offspring, who is now thirteen years of age. The announcement created a great sensation in New York and Brooklyn. Detectives were put on the case by Cross and they claim to now have the evidence which proves that Mrs. Roberts has perpetrated a monstrous hoax on Cross for years. The child which she claimed he was the father of, it is now said, was not her son, but the son of her sister-in-law who died some years ago and who was adopted by Mrs. Roberts.

In the attempt to make Cross pay more money before the suit was started, Roberts himself took a hand, and yesterday both he and his wife were arrested at their home in Mt. Vernon, where Roberts is the manager of the theatre, on the charge of blackmail. When arraigned in court they waived examination and were released on $500 bail each. It will probably be November before the case is brought to trial.

Mrs. Roberts is well-known in this city. In 1887 she came to Plainfield with her mother, Mrs. Swift, and was known as Mrs. Frank Townsend. For several weeks they stopped at Laing's hotel, then located where the Babcock building now stands. The child, which she claimed was the son of Cross, was with her at that time. They came from Philadelphia and Mrs. Townsend conducted herself in a ladylike demeanor. It was while stopping here that she met George Roberts and they became enamored with one another. They frequently took carriage drives together and were in each others company a great deal of the time. They returned from a carriage drive one day and said they had been married at Dunellen. Shortly after they moved to Philadelphia where they resided for several years.

REGRETS HIS DEPARTURE.

Brigadier Evans Has Become Attached to the Central Division.

The following words were spoken by Brigadier Evans at his farewell meeting in Newark Wednesday evening: "I have been expecting this farewell meeting for over three years. Tonight is the saddest night I have experienced in the Central Division. Not only in Newark, but all around Newark, we have been marching steadily on, and we have been victorious. Our division has been cut in two; we have lost three corps, but we now number seventy-four corps. Farewell to the division, farewell to Newark, farewell to our comrades, farewell to our friends. Trust in God as you have before and confide your troubles to him. We are going west and know but little of it, but we're going to work for the same cause. We can't preach; we don't pretend to preach; but we can tell of our salvation. There never was a better field for work in Newark, and we are getting stronger every day."

Since Brigadier Evans has come to the Central Division the original number of ten stations have been increased to over 100. The Midland Division, to which he and nineteen other officers have been transferred, covers over 2,000 miles of territory. It embraces Southern Illinois, Iowa, Arkansas, Texas and Missouri.

Brigadier George French will be transferred from St. Louis to take Brigadier Evans' place. Several changes will soon take place in the local corps.

MIKE WATSON ARRESTED

HE IS CHARGED WITH SELLING LIQUOR WITHOUT A LICENSE.

He Was Arrested This Morning by Roundsman Mattox and Held in $200 Bail—To Be Tried in Two Weeks.

There is probably no man in Plainfield who has been charged with illegal liquor selling oftener than Michael Watson, who keeps a grocery store on Grant avenue. Two years ago he fought the city in the different courts, appealing at every conviction to a higher court until finally the case was settled. He was arrested a number of other times on the same charge previous to that time and now the police authorities think that they can convict him of illegal liquor selling.

Watson has no license, but the police were certain that liquor was being sold there. Sergeant Kiely made an investigation and managed to obtain evidence, which he considered good, that Watson was selling strong drinks and on Sunday, too. Sergeant Kiely made the complaint, and this morning Roundsman Mattox visited Watson's store and placed him under arrest. He was taken before City Judge DeMeza and pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was held in $200 bail, which he furnished in bills, and his trial was set down for August 7th. The trial promises to be a sensational one, judging from Watson's past record as a fighter in the courts.

A Family Dinner Party.

A pleasant family dinner party was given at Mountain Park Inn last evening by Mrs. Wilson and her son Edward Wilson, of Central avenue Covers were spread for twenty-four and the menu was complete in every respect. After dinner the guests spent the evening at the inn and enjoyed themselves exceedingly. Those present at the dinner were: Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGee, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Waring, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Flanders, Miss Yerkes, Miss Grace Yerkes, Miss Waring, Miss Florence Waring, O. G. Waring, L. E. Waring, Edward Waring, Edward Wilson.

A State Officer Entertained.

Friendship Rebekah Degree Lodge, No. 4, I. O. O. F., had the pleasure of entertaining the State President, Mrs. C. Voelker, of Atlantic City, at their meeting last evening. Delegations from Elizabeth and New Brunswick were also present, as was also another delegation from Newark, who rode here on their wheels. The menbers listened with interest to an address by the State President and other visitors. At a late hour a fine collation was served to all. During the business part of the meeting Mrs. Jacob Kettering was elected representative of the local lodge to the State Assembly.

A Promenade Concert.

The Oriental Bicycle Club, of this city, gave a promenade concert and dance in T. A. B. Hall last evening. The concert lasted till 11:30, after which dancing was enjoyed until 4:30 this morning. At 2 o'clock the grand cake walk was held, and after an exhibition that excelled anything ever given in Plainfield before, the cake was awarded to Walter Carter, better known as "Cack." The attendance was large and everybody had a pleasant time. The club will receive a handsome sum as profits of the affair. Music was furnished by O'Reilly.

Fair for the Children's Home.

A fair for the benefit of the Children's Home was held on the lawn of William Barlow, of Prospect place, yesterday afternoon. It was gotten up by Miss Sophie Barlow and the Misses Osgood, who were assisted by the Misses Grace and Alice Barlow and Cornelia Faber. The lawn was charmingly decorated with lanterns and flags. Ice-cream, cake, candy and fancy articles were sold and $27 was realized.

Enjoying Country Life.

A party of ninety-four women and children came from New York yesterday afternoon to the Westfield Fresh Air Camp, while the party that has been staying there returned. This is the third installment and they remain there for two weeks.

At the Inn.

Below will be found a list of the late arrivals at the Mountain Park Inn: Mrs. L. A. Powelson, New Brunswick; Miss King, Brooklyn; Geo. H. Whitney, D. D., Mr. and Mrs. Barnaby, Miss Evans, R. J. Shaw, Miss E. D. P. Smalley, F. E. Marsh, A. B. Bears, Miss Daniels, Plainfield.

THE PARADE MAPPED OUT

A LONG ROUTE SELECTED BY THE COMMITTEE.

The Bicycle Riders Will Not Follow the Cars Over All the Route, But Will Invade Other Residential Streets.

The route of the bicycle parade, in connection with the "Midsummer Night's Carnival," has at last been selected, and residents along the line of march may now prepare their decorations for Tuesday evening.

The parade committee met last evening at Grand Marshal Martin's store, and, after thoroughly discussing the different routes, selected one that it is thought will meet all requirements. The selection was a hard one to make, as it was necessary to conform to the schedule of the band car and yet cover the entire city, following good roads and avoiding hills.

The car will start from the North Avenue station at 8 o'clock, and at the same time the bicycle parade will start from its meeting place at the square in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The car and cyclists will meet at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fifth street and the route of the parade will then be through East Fifth street to Richmond street, to Putnam avenue, to Franklin place, (leaving the car which will stop at the Putnam avenue switch for a twelve-minute concert and then go to Netherwood, the band playing going and returning), to Watchung avenue, to Crescent avenue, to West Eighth street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Seventh street, to Park avenue, to the corner of Ninth street, and countermarching on Park avenue, to North avenue, to Watchung avenue, (meeting the car), to East Front street, (the band playing), to Grove street, (leaving the car while the band gives a twelve-minute concert), to Park place, to Jackson avenue, to Grand street, to Fairview avenue, to Linden avenue, to Grove street, to Rockview avenue, to Washington avenue, to West Front street, (meeting the car), to Grant avenue, (leaving the car), to West Seventh street, to Park avenue, to North avenue, disbanding in front of the North Avenue station.

The car and band after separating from the parade at Grant avenue, will go to Dunellen, the band playing going and returning, and will reach the station in time for the band to give several selections there as the parade is disbanding. The car will then go over the West Fourth street and Somerset street branches, music being given at intervals while the cyclists that care to can follow.

The cars, for there will be three and possibly four open cars in line, will be for the accommodation of all, the usual fare being charged.

The Daily Press prize for the most uniquely decorated lady's wheel has aroused considerable interest among the fair sex and some pretty designs may be expected. The prize, which will be well worth winning, will be announced before the time and the competition for it promises to be very close.

Conductor and Passenger Scrap.

An obstreperous colored man boarded a Netherwood street car on South avenue between 9 and 10 o'clock Wednesday evening and asked the conductor to let him off at Oak Tree. He was told the car didn't run to that place, whereupon he grew angry and got into a altercation with the conductor. Both the conductor and passenger dropped to the ground and rolled around in the mud, while the car went on its way. A lady passenger, who sat facing the rear of the car, noticed the occurrance and signalled the motorman to stop. The colored man was wholly to blame and should have been locked up for his freshness.

Death of Miss Leah Fisher.

The death of Miss Leah Fisher, aged 65 years, occurred yesterday at her late home on West Third street. Miss Fisher has lived in this city a number of years, and has quite a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon from her late residence, 510 West Third street, at 3 o'clock.

Scully is Dead.

The death of Harry Scully occurred this morning at 8 o'clock at the hospital, after two days of terrible suffering from an injury received while working at Scott's Press Works. Mr. Scully was thirty-two years of age and was well known in this city. He was born at Millstone at which place the funeral will be held Monday morning next at 9:30.

FUN AT THE SEASHORE

FOUR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS HAVE A GAY TIME AT ASBURY PARK.

Took in All the Attractions From Bathing to Shooting the Chute—Exciting Incident Returning, at Elizabeth.

But for the land breeze, yesterday could not have been a better day for an excursion to the seashore. The fifteen cars that carried the combined excursion of the Sunday-schools of the Congregational, Park Avenue Baptist and First Presbyterian churches, were crowded, and the day proved to be a very enjoyable one. The run to Asbury Park and return was unusually fast, each trip being made in considerably less than two hours. The excursionists found the Park cool and comfortable, and in company with a large party of excursionists from Somerville and Raritan, soon made the town a busy place. The "shot the chute," rode in the Ferris wheel and "did" the town in a complete manner. The water was very cold, but many braved its chilliness to enjoy a plunge in the breakers. The Plainfield train pulled out of Asbury Park at 6 o'clock, following the Somerville excursion train. Four young people, three from Somerville and one from Plainfield, (the latter's name could not be learned) failed to show up on time and were left behind.

Several hats were blown away, but no really exciting incidents happened until the train was turning the big curve at Elizabethport onto the main tracks. Howard Martin, of Sandford avenue, came out from New York and tried to catch the excursion train home from there. The train was moving along quite rapidly and he ran at full speed alongside, attempting to catch the rear platform. The brakeman warned him to keep off and then struck at him. Although not within striking distance Martin dodged, lost his balance and fell heavily on the crushed stone of the roadbed. He regained his feet only to fall again. His friends on the train saw him and shouted to those inside that Martin was killed. "Manager" William Sweeney heard the shout and started to drop off the platform. He had just let go and his feet were almost on the ground when Fred Barker, of the N. Y. & N. J. Telephone Company, who was on the excursion, grabbed Sweeney by the collar and hauled him back on board the car. Martin returned late last evening badly battered by his fall. His hands were all cut, while his clothing was badly torn and he was bruised all over.

A PLEASURABLE TRIP.

Central Railroad Will Run an Excursion to Mauch Chunk.

Next Wednesday the public in general of this city can avail themselves of the opportunity given them by the Central Railroad of New Jersey to visit Mauch Chunk and Glen Onoko and take a ride on the switchback railroad.

On that day the company's midsummer excursion to these resorts will be run. It will have all the characteristics of previous outings to these favorite spots, and, as usual, the rate of fare will be so low as to be within reach of all. At this season the person possessed of a vacation sometimes asks himself, "What shall I do today?" Now, here is a chance to have a fine day's outing and see a country that abounds in beautiful scenery. There are several bustling cities between here and Mauch Chunk and they are worth seeing, if only from a car window while gliding by. Glen Onoko is a charming resort to spend a few hours at, while a ride on the switchback railroad is filled with exciting incidents from the time your car begins to move from the summit of Mount Pisgat, until it returns. A lunch car will be attached to special train. Fare for round trip $1.75. Switchback tickets half price if purchased on train. Excursion will arrive home about 8:30 p. m.

Roselle Man in Trouble.

Perrin H. Sumner, who has large property interests in Roselle, is again in trouble over a real estate transaction, in which it is claimed he secured $2,500 without giving value. He has not been in New Jersey for a long time owing to some difficulty over a former transaction.

A Popular Entertainer.

SILENT AND DESERTED.

SAD HISTORY OF THE FILLMORE AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Built on the Outskirts of the City it Was Too Far Away for the People to Attend and Has Been Abandoned.

Save for the chipper of the sparrows who have sought a nesting place under its protecting eaves, no sound disturbs the quietude which pervades the spot where the edifice of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church stands as a silent monument to the mistaken idea once possessed that a colored church would prosper in the extreme east end of the city. No word of gospel, no paen of praise, no fervent prayer now sanctifies this structure wrought for the worship of the Diety by this once energetic flock of Mt. Zionites.

It was about three years ago that differences arose in one of the colored churches in this city, and a portion of the congregation left and resolved to form a society of their own. Few in numbers but strong in enthusiasm and devotion they held meetings each week in the basement of Reform Hall. From time to time additions were made to their membership, and they thus prospered until a time came when it seemed that they would be able to support a house of worship for themselves. A committee was appointed, and after a great deal of work a site was selected on Fillmore avenue, between North avenue and East Third street. An option was secured on the office of the old oil cloth factory, situated in that vicinity, and it was finally bought and moved to the lot, and there formed the nucleus for their new edifice. A cupalo was erected from the front elevation, the interior decorated and furnished, and taken all in all, it was a very creditable and cosy little worshiping place for this little band of religionists.

But all this was not accomplished except by resort to fairs, festivals, socials and the like which go to make up the financial resources of churches. One Sunday in the winter of 1893 the church was dedicated with special services, and there was great rejoicing among those who had labored and sacrificed for its erection. For several weeks the interest in the church remained at a high point. But after the third or fourth month it was noticeable that the attendance was falling off. One after another of the members failed to attend until there was a mere handfull of the faithful. Their receipts diminished accordingly, and the elders began to look about to find out the cause of the condition.

Tnen the reason presented itself and the leaders realized that they had made a mistake in building a church so far away from the populated section of the city. Few of the lots in that section were graced with sidewalks, and with the warm weather taking the frost out of the ground, together with spring rains, the paths were one mass of mud. The majority of the church attendants declined to brave these conditions, and no amount of individual work on the part of the few who were struggling to maintain the church, could change the tide of non attendance. From that time on the church continued to go deeper in debt, notwithstanding the efforts of the still faithful in the matter of concerts, socials, etc., to raise funds for the current expenses.

Finally the contributions became so meagre that the edifice had to be abandoned and the few remaining attendants returned to the basement of Reform hall for their service. Now the church stands silent and deserted.

SUING FOR $10,000.

W. R. Francis Wants to Mulct the Central for Injuries.

Suit was brought yesterday by William R. Francis against the New Jersey Central Railroad for $10,000 damages sustained by Mr. Francis at the depot in this city on April 9th. Mr. Francis lives in New York and was about to board a car when, the train suddenly starting, he was thrown to the ground and severely injured. Counsellor W. S. Angleman represents Mr. Francis in the case.

—Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, Chairman of the Union County Republican Executive Committee, has called a meeting of the committee for today at Elizabeth.

Planning for a Trolley Ride.

A party of young people from this city are planning a trolley party and outing for this evening if the weather is suitable. They take a special trolley car from the North Avenue station to Dunellen where they will spend the evening and return later.

VICTORY FOR BRYAN

His Supporters Capture the Populist Convention.

"MIDDLE-OF-THE-ROAD" MEN BEATEN

After a Day and Night Session of More or Less Exciting Scenes Permanent Organization Is Effected with Senator Allen as Chairman.

St. Louis, July 24.—William Jennings Bryan, the democratic nominee for president, has captured the populist convention, winning a decided victory over the "middle-of-the-road" men when a decisive test of strength was brought about last night when the selection of permanent chairman was reached and Senator Allen was selected. The opponents of Mr. Bryan took defeat gracefully and "Cyclone" Davis, the most active opponent of the democratic nominee, introduced Senator Allen to the convention. What the convention will do regarding the second place on the ticket is still somewhat in doubt, but it is generally believed that Sewall will be nominated with Bryan. Nominating speeches today will be limited to ten minutes.

Covention Called To Order.

Half an hour before the convention was called to order there were not more than 500 people in the galleries, but a majority of the delegates were present. The heat in the hall was very oppressive, and, as on the day before, many of the delegates waived conventionality and divested themselves of their coats, some even removing their waistcoats. Among the conspicuous persons on the platform was Jesse Harper of Kansas, who is said to have nominated Abraham Lincoln for the presidency at Chicago in 1860. Senator Stewart of Nevada was also on the platform, seated between Senators Allen of Nebraska and Kyle of South Dakoa, all of them strong advocates of the indorsement of Bryan and Sewall. When Senator Butler appeared on the platform the band struck up "Dixie" and the delegates cheered. At 10:10 he called the convention order, and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Smith. The committee on credentials was then called for, but no one responded, and the states were called for members of the committees on permanent organization and resolutions. After the announcement of the committee on permanent organization its members retired. The delegates sat in the sweltering heat while the announcements were being made. There were at times long delays and the delegates grew perceptibly impatient. The middle-of-the-roaders were extremely suspicious. They intimated that it was part of the plot to defeat them. There was a ripple of applause and a few shouts when the name of Jacob S. Coxey was announced as a member of the committee on platform from Ohio. The committee on rules were named and retired at 11:45 a. m. After the committee had retired the convention was entertained with campaign songs by C. E. Conneley of Oklahoma and Miss Pennington. Eugene V. Debs entered the hall and received an ovation. Mr. Washburn of Massachusetts at 12:17 o'clock offered a resolution denouncing as false the report in newspapers that certain states will repudiate the action of the convention. A motion to lay it on the table was carried. A motion to adjourn was voted down as the crowd desired more music and speeches. At 12:42, when it was announced that the committee on credentials would not be ready to report until 3 o'clock, a recess was taken until that hour.

Convention Reassembles.

The convention reassembled during the hottest portion of an oppressive day to find the credentials committee was ready only to make a partial report. The majority report was then submitted. It recommended that the delegates be recognized in all the uncontested cases; that in the case of the first seven Illinois congressional districts both contestants and contestees be seated, with the right to cast half votes, and that, in case of Colorado, the delegates known as the Patterson delegates be seated and cast the full vote of the state. That report for the admission of the delegates whose seats were uncontested was agreed to. Men were stationed on the right and left of the chair to report in audible tones the various motions and questions so that all the delegates could learn what was going on. The Colorado case was then taken up amid much confusion, but was finally postponed until the minority report was ready. The Illinois case was then taken up. The majority report declared against the Taylor delegates and in favor of the contestants. Minority was for the Taylor men. Fifteen minutes on each side was allowed for discussion. After argument on both sides by several gentlemen a vote was taken, resulting in the adoption of the majority report by a vote of 665 to 442. Great confusion followed announcement of ballot. Several delegates challenged the accuracy of secretary's count. The chair declared majority report seating both Illinois delegations. The Illinois regulars asked permission to withdraw for consultation. The majority report seating the forty-five Colorado regulars was adopted. The minority made no fight. The Missouri contest was withdrawn. Lafe Pence was recognized amid much confusion, and fielded the floor for the report of the committee on permanent organization. The committee on credentials, at 36 minutes after 6, announced that it was ready to make a final report. The chair ruled it out of order, and recognized Mr. Coxe of Virginia, chairman of the committee on permanent organization. Great confusion followed.

Opposition for Allen.

When order was restored the committee on permanent organization reported, naming Senator Allen of Nebraska for permanent chairman. A minority report, naming James E. Campion of Maine, was made. Senator Allen is the candidate of the Bryan men and Mr. Campion represents the "middle-of-the-road" populists. Great cheering for Campion and shouts for Allen followed the reading of the two reports. "Middle-of-the-road" banners were carried in procession through the aisles and pandemonium reigned for ten minutes. Maine, Ohio, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Georgia, Utah, Michigan, California and Missouri follow the "middle-of-the-road" banners round the hall. Deafening yells. The secretary read the names of members who signed the minority report on permanent organization. Streeter of Illinois denied that he signed. Considerable dispute followed. The report of the committee on credentials as a whole was adopted. Mr. Brown changed his motion. He moved to lay both reports on the table in order to take up the question of rules. Pence of New York moved previous question. Mr. Brown's motion was defeated. Chairman Butler resumed gavel, but could not maintain order.

Allen for Permanent Chairman.

Amid the greatest confusion the roll call on permanent chairman was ordered, and while the call proceeded there was almost a continuous uproar, during which one of the Cook county contestants had a scrap with the assistant sergeant-at-arms in front of the platform. The police were called to clear the crowd away. After fifteen minutes of pandemonium a semblance of order was obtained and the roll call proceeded. When the result was announced, Allen, 758; Champion, 564; Ignatius Donnelly, 1, the Bryan men celebrated their victory by the wildest scenes of jubilation, which continued for fully fifteen minutes, the crowd singing the Doxology. The chair appointed Lafe Pence of Colorado, J. H. "Cyclone" Davis of Texas and Ignatius Donnelly of Minnesota to escort Mr. Allen to the chair. Senator Allen was introduced by "Cyclone" Davis. He was received with tumultuous cheers. When quiet was restored he began his address, which was a strong denunciation of gold bugs of Wall street, an arraignment of old parties and an appeal to all citizens to stand together for the doctrines of populism. The speech was wildly applauded, and when the speaker closed another wild scene of rejoicing by the Bryan men was inaugurated. Senator Allen spoke for an hour and forty minutes. When he asked which the people's party would prefer, McKinley or Bryan, there were shouts of Bryan and of "We don't want a democrat!" He urged uniting the forces of this country against plutocracy. He said the nomination of a third ticket may mean the election of McKinley and that republicen boodle is being used to bring about that result.

Committee To Confer with Silverites.

A communication from the silver convention asking for a conference committee to confer with their committee was then read by Senator Butler. This was greeted with loud shouts of "no." A motion, however, was made to appoint a conference committee of twenty-five. A motion to lay that motion on table was also made. The latter was lost and the motion to appoint the conference committee was carried. The report of the committee on rules was then presented and read, but without action on it the covention, at eight minute past 10, adjourned till 10 o'clock to-day.

To Beat His Own Record.

New Brunswick, N. J., July 24.—A. W. W. Evans, member of the New York Athletic club, the noted long-distance bicyclist, started at 6 o'clock this morning in an attempt to beat the 24 hours' record—his own—of 307 miles. He will ride from this city to Plainfield and Elizabeth and back until he has completed the task. He will be paced by a tandem bicycle team. He is confident he will cover 400 miles.

McKinley Talks To Workingmen.

Alliance, O., July 24.—When Major McKinley returned from Mount Union college yesterday afternoon to take the train for Cleveland he was met at the depot by over a thousand workingmen, and in response do repeated calls for a talk addressed them briefly. His reference to the financial question was loudly cheered.

TREASURY OFFICIALS QUIET.

No Information for Publication Regarding the Action of Banks.

Washington, July 22.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $89,603,865. Yesterday's withdrawals were $164,100. There was no information for publication at the treasury of the contemplated action of the New York banks in coming to the relief of the treasury. Acting Secretary Curtis said he had no "official information" to give out. The treasury has about $87,000,000 in United States notes and about $35,000,000 notes, and could readily exchange $20,000,000 of these for gold. Both classess of notes are redeemable in gold on presentation, so that if the New York banks exchange gold for them, and later on they desire gold, all that is reqnired is to present them to the treasury for redemption and they will get gold for them.

Not Candidates for Governor.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 22.—Hon. Perry Belmont has been spending a few days in Poughkeepsie as the guest of Chairman Hinckley of the democratic state committee. He has said that under no circumstances will he be a candidate for governor this fall. Chairman Hinckley also says that any talk about Senator Hill being a candidate for governor, or willing to accept the nomination, under any circumstances, is all moonshine. "Senator Hill ought not to be asked," he said, "to step into the breach every time the prospect seems darkest."

Labrador Fisheries.

St. Johns, N. F., July 22.—The first fishery news from Labrador has been received here. Excellent catches are being made along the southern part of the coast, but the northern part is blocked by ice, preventing navigation. This ice will probably stop the Peary expedition steamer Hope from reaching the coast so as to land a party there, which was originally intended.

Meteor in Irish Waters.

London, July 22.—The Daily News to-day says that Emperor William's yacht Meteor has arrived at Dublin to take part in the Kingstown regatta. The paper adds that the Meteor is threatened with arrest owing to her captain refusing to pay the heavy salvage demanded by a tug for assistance rendered to the yacht a few days ago.

Pope To Receive American Pilgrims.

Rome, July 22.—On August 8 the pope will receive a number of American pilgrims, including 150 priests from the dioceses of New York and Philadelphia. After mass shall have been celebrated, the pilgrims will present to his holiness an American flag embroidered with gold.

Pure

Blood is essential to perfect health. This is a scientific fact. Every organ, nerve and muscle must be fed and nourished. It is the function of the blood to furnish this nourishment, and the quality of nourishment these organs receive depends on the quality of the blood. If the blood is

Rich

Pure and full of vitality it will properly feed and support the whole mechanism of the body. If it is poor and thin disease and suffering will be inevitable. The great success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in curing stubborn cases of scrofula, eczema, rheumatism, neuralgia and many other similar troubles, is based upon its power to enrich and purify the

Blood

This is also the reason for the great popularity of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a building up medicine. By making pure, rich blood, it gives vigor and vitality even in trying seasons, when, owing to impoverished blood, thousands are complaining of weakness and weariness, lack of energy and ambition, and that tired feeling.

RESERVE RESTORED

New York Bankers Place $15,755,000 in the Sub-Treasury.

MORE TO BE GIVEN FROM TIME TO TIME

Estimated That the Government's Gain Throughout the Country Will Reach $23,000,000—Foreign Bankers To Stop the Outflow.

New York, July 24.—Up to this morning the amount collected and turned into the sub-treasury here by the bankers who started out the first of the week to stop the drain of gold upon the national treasury was $15,755,000. This means that the treasury gold reserve has not only been returned to the one million mark, but is now about two millions in excess of that figure. Further amounts of gold will be delivered to the treasury officials from time to time and it is estimated that the gain to the government through the contributions of the banks throughout the country will reach $23,000,000. The Chicago, Boston, and Philadelphia banks are to co-operate with the New York financiers. It is understood that the Philadelphia banks will take action to-day.

Exportation of Gold Checked.

The committee of seven appointed by the conference of foreign bankers at the office of J. Pierpont Morgan Wednesday were in session yesterday afternoon, but no statement was given out. It is known, however, that the bankers stand ready to supply remitters until commercial bills come into the market. To do this it is understood a pool of £10,000,000 has been formed, and if necessary it will be increased to £15,000,000. This part of the bankers' programme will be carried through without a shadow of doubt. The first effect of the new combination was witnessed yesterday in the reduction of 1-2 cent in the posted rates of sterling exchange to 488 and 489. After the rates were reduced it was currently reported that there would be no gold exported by Saturday's European steamers.

FOR A NEW CONVENTION.

Decision of the Conference of Gold Delegates from Several States.

Chicago, July 24.—Representatives of the gold standard democracy of Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Nebraska and Illinois in conference at the headquarters of the honest money democracy of Illinois in the Palmer house last evening decided to issue a call for a new convention. A letter was read from Euclid Martin, chairman of the democratic state central committee of Nebraska, whose gold delegation was supplanted in the Chicago convention by the Bryan delegates. He explained that he was in Chicago on his way east to meet his family returning from Europe and was unable to attend the convention here. He added: "Before leaving Omaha I had a conference with some leading democrats, but no definite conclusion was reached as to what was best to do. I can safely say that the leading democrats of our city and state view the recent action of the national convention at Chicago in a very serious light and are much in fear that great harm has come to the democratic organization thereby. A small portion of the peolpe will ever know the real facts, and many are not sufficiently imbued with the dangers of the situation to induce them to forsake their party organization. It seems to me we must have a ticket, that we must have standard-bearers, and they must be men whom we recognize as representing the real democratic party. Whatever action is taken by your conference I have no doubt will be acquiesced in by the state which I would have the honor to represent were I able to be present. The preservation of the party is paramount and when we preserve intact the great party to which we are so firmly attached we at the same time are serving our country best."

Philadelphia Gold Democrats.

Philadelphia, July 24.—The gold democrats of this city have prepared a statement to be sent broadcast throughout the state. The statement expresses condemnation of the Chicago platform and the candidates and recommends to all democrats to do what they can to insure the defeat of Bryan and Sewall. It will be sent to all sound money democrats in the state with the request to get the signatures of as many party men as possible in their respective counties who will support a gold platform. The address in conclusion recommends that sound money democrats in each county organize and prepare to appoint delegates to a state convention to be called at an early day and "of co-operating with democrats in all states in taking such steps as the good of the party and the exigencies of the situation shall demand."

Missouri Republicans.

Springfield, Mo., July 24.—After a struggle lasting all day and until late last night in the republican state convention, Robt. E. Lewis of Henry county was nominated for governor. This is generally considered a serious defeat for the faction headed by Chauncey I. Filley. The platform adopted in substance approved each and every plank in the St. Louis platform and endorsed the nomination of McKinley and Hobart.

Naval Intelligence.

Washington, July 24.—Lieut. W. S. Hogg has been ordered to the office of naval intelligence, August 1. Leaves of absence for three months have been granted to Lieut.-Col. William A. Elderkin, assistant commissary general of subsistence, and Lieut. Erederick V. Krug, 20th infantry.

WHITNEY'S VIEWS

Believes a Third Ticket Is Becoming Inevitable.

PUTS THE BLAME ON REPUBLICANS

Says They Should Have Been the First To Welcome Gold Democrats to a Non-Partisan Union To Stamp Out the "Silver Heresy."

New York, July 24.—William C. Whitney, in an interview with a representative of the United Press, was asked if, in his judgment, there would be a third ticket nominated by the sound money democrats. He replied: "I think events and the course of the republican leaders are making it inevitable. The general situation is far worse to-day, in my opinion, than it was ten days ago. The republican managers and candidates have shown no realizing sense of the situation. They have failed to avail themselves of a great opportunity for benefiting the country. If the present condition of affairs continues for any length of time sound money democrats are bound to organize and it cannot be prevented. The truth is there does not seem to be in the east a realizing sense of the seriousness of the free silver movement. I was satisfied before we went to Chicago that nothing could be accomplished in the direction of changing or modifying the free silver idea, and I said so. Nevertheless, it was our duty to go there and emphasize the strength of the convictions of the eastern democrats, and to afford the country an object lesson, showing so plainly that it could not be misunderstood the undemocratic and revolutionary spirit which dominated the movement. In this we were successful. The democratic mask was pretty effectually removed from the face of the populism which had forced itself for the time being into a position of control. That was all that the sound money democrats could hope to accomplish and that they did effectually and unselfishly. There never has been in any party convention such a vigorous declaration of independence as was exhibited at Chicago when 254 delegates refused to participate in the selection of candidates.

Duty of the Hour.

"What was the duty of the hour? Clearly it was one that devolved upon the republican party and its candidates. There should have been an immediate recognition of a new situation, and the republicans should have been the first to welcome sound money democrats to a non-partisan union, subordinating all other things to this question of national honor. It was a new issue. It dwarfed all others. An opportunity was offered to fight for the established institutions of the country, the fundamental things that underlie party differences—law and order, national honor, common honesty, the integrity of the courts—all such things, without which we do not exist as a nation at all. A single glimpse at the Chicago platform and at the spectacle of one-third of the democratic party in open revolt should have been enough to have shown them instantly the necessity of a new alignment of parties upon non-partisan lines. No greater opportunity for patriotic action was ever offered a party, and it has all been thrown away.

Past Issues Should Be Buried.

"If the republican party persists in its present policy of opposition to sound-money democrats, one thing will certainly happen—the sound-money democrats will nominate a third ticket and thus divide the sound money vote in the great battle-ground of the middle west to save the vote from drifting back to the Chicago ticket. The republicans will need in November all the aid they can obtain from sound-money democrats. If they think they can hold their natural strength through the middle west or even in some parts of the east by the single tendency to party allegiance, they are mistaken. A free silver enthusiasm has obtained a hold upon republicans throughout the west and farming communities of the east quite as strong as upon democrats, and they cannot be diverted from their purpose by either appeals to party loyalty or discussion of a dead issue. The issues of the past should be buried until the country has been rescued by patriotic action from its present peril.

Good Citizens Must Drop Partisanship.

"It ought to be plain to all thoughtful and patriotic republicans that the time has come when it is absolutely necessary fer all good citizens to drop, for the time being, partisanship and work together earnestly and intelligently for the common good. To trifle with a crisis so serious as this, or to attempt to ignore or belittle it, would be both a blunder and a crime. I think that at the present moment the multitudes of sound money democrats represented by the 254 delegates who refused to vote in the Chicago convention are fully awake to the danger which confronts the nation and are willing to co-operate heartily and honestly with equally patriotic members of other parties in any rational movement to stamp out this heresy."

Death of Dr. C. S. T. Fessenden.

Salem, Mass., July 24.—Dr. Charles S. T. Fessenden died at the home of his brother, Dr. J. P. Fessenden, yesterday of heart disease, at the age of 68. He was one of the famous family of Fessendens of Maine from which have come statesmen, lawyers, physicians and clergymen.

The air in the political camp is thickening.

An independent third ticket in the field, espousing the cause of gold, will withdraw a great deal of support that the Republicans have been counting on.

Talk about the Midsummer Night's Carnival to your neighbors. Talk is what makes such an event a success. Keep the interest up and you will enjoy yourself next Tuesday.

Capitalists in Plainfield are awake to the advantage of manufacturing industries and have incorporated a company to build and boom a near town a few miles from the city's limits. They realize the value of action and the worthlessness of talk.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Last summer one of our grandchildren was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints. Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

The newest thing in the commercial world that I have observed lately is the Keeley cure drummer. One of these gentlemen visited this city a few days ago and made a canvass for redrum victims to reform. He was an affable talker, a neat dresser, confiding in his manner, and, I should say, a success at his avocation. When he arrived in town he made guarded inquiries for subjects to deal with, and after securing their names, addresses and a little information as to relatives who would likely lend an ear to whatever he might have to say about saving them from the error of their way, he made it his business to call at their homes. His argument, so I am told, hardly reached the level of commercial traffic, but assumed more of a tone of philanthrophy in which he sought to create the effect that it was only because of his love for humanity and an interest in saving men from the Demon Alcohol, from whose clutches he himself had been rescued by the gold cure, that constrained him to interest himself in this particular case. He made a favorable impression on those whom he met. I am not aware that he secured any recruits from among the inebriates. He possessed tact enough to enter the enemies own camp without sacrificing his dignity, for he visited several liquor dealers from whom he solicited names of men likely to prove customers. They treated him courteously.

It looks as though the baseball cranks who rooted years ago are beginning to catch the fever again. The game which the old Crescents played on Decoration Day was the spark that started the fire in the breasts of the veterans, and now I hear they are fairly scorching with a desire to try conclusions with the youths again. George Cornwell, who is as frisky as any of the old-timers, is hustling around getting his forces in condition to cross bats with the Y. M. C. A. boys on Labor Day. He has given "Teekay" Keller carte blanche to hire a professional battery, and you know what his judgment is when it comes to selecting good baseball material.

The expected has happened. That egotistical and rancorous piece of humanity, Editor Runyon, paid his respects to me last night. Considering the source and the animus of his remarks, I shall restrain my flow of tears.

Fred C. Lounsbury, at present a member of the Board of Education, is mentioned as a possible candidate for the Republican Mayoralty nomination this fall. Mr. Lounsbury is at the head of the Hastings Card Company on Beekman street in New York, where he displays rare executive ability. He is of pleasing personality and would doubtless win hosts of friends if he entered the canvass.

Park avenue, below Ninth street, seems to be the Boulevard of Plainfield for the bicyclists. Every pleasant evening this thoroughfare is liberally dotted with riders who pedal along singly and in parties. The course of the rider bent on a spin for pleasure or moderate exercise generally ends at Holly's Corners or Pumptown.

* * * * * * *

Considerable merriment has been aroused in the neighborhood of Mercer avenue, between Duer and Grove streets, anent what some, with a touch of humor, dub "frog concerts." Every time there is a heavy rain large pools of murky surface water are formed on this block, which sometimes stand for several days, and into these, by some hook or crook, delve frogs with snorious voices. As soon as the sun has set in the west and the mantel of darkness set over the earth, these amphibians commence their resonant articulations and remind one of some swampy country. With the humorous view comes the thought that this is the highest elevation in the borough, and if this condition is forerunner of what we may expect in other sections, there will be no need to arrange band concerts across the raging brook, because the frogs will drown out any instrument which it is the privilege of mortal man to blow. But laying all jokes aside, this condition only emphasizes the fact that the borough is seriously in need of a sewer system. A little grading, however, at the present time by the borough officials would obviate the difficulty of which this block on Mercer avenue is a sample.

WILL STICK BY BRYAN.

JAMES E. MARTINE IS NOT NOW A FOLLOWER OF WHITNEY.

Declares That He Will Stand By the Regular Democratic Nominations—Believes They Were Honestly Awarded.

The "Farmer Orator," J. E. Martine, was asked today what he thought of the announcement that Mr. Whitney would urge a third ticket. Mr. Martine said:

"It surprises me that Mr. Whitney should take this step. He, as a Democrat, in common with all others, submitted the case to the Convention at Chicago, and was fairly outvoted. Mr. Bryan is in every way qualified for the high office for which he is nominated. The platform is utterly and intrinsically Democratic, however much Democrats may differ as to the expediency of its propositions. Such a course on the part of a few dissatisfied Democrats only demonstrates the selfishness and vain egotism of the movers of the project."

"Will you still advocate Bryan?"

He remarked: "I am a Democrat, as firm as the rocks of Gibraltar, and as such bow to the will of majorities honestly expressed. I shall voice and vote for William Jennings Bryan."

SICK-POISON.

What It is, and Where it Comes From.

Sick-poison is what makes you sick, irritates your nerves, disorders your functions, saps your strength, makes you miserable.

Different diseases have different poisons, some have several, indigestion more than any.

That is, the symptoms of indigestion are caused by the poisons which are created by undigested food.

When you are sick, try to get rid of your poison.

It is often easier than you think, for all nature is helping you. Only the poison is obstinate, but the first step is to go to the root of it.

The poisons of undigested food, which cause lethargy, headache, dizziness, weakness, bad taste, stomach-ache, fever, flatulence, nausea, constipation, loss of appetite, jaundice, anæmia, neuralgia, rheumatism, etc., these poisons can be swept away and annihilated by the use of Shaker Digestive Cordial.

Curing the stomach and helping it to digest food, when it is too weak to do so by itself, will purify your system of poison and renew your strength and health.

Shaker Digestive Cordial, a pure, vegetable digestive tonic, made by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, will cure all disorders caused by the poisons of undigested food when nothing else will give any relief.

Sold by all druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

Write for a book on food. Address The Shakers, 30 Reade Street, New York.

Mrs. Thomas Brown, of West Second street, left town today for a three weeks visit with her mother at Hackettstown. She took her wheel with her and will enjoy riding on the excellent roads in that vicinity.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

A JOKE BY RENEGADE APACHES.

Robbed the United States Troopers Who Were Pursuing Them.

Apache Indians have been playing a practical joke on the United States army, which leaves no doubt that the Indian does possess a sense of humor only a little less keen than his desire for things that don't belong to him. A troop of cavalry from Fort Grant has been scouring the country through southern New Mexico and Arizona for weeks in search of a band of San Carlos Apaches who have been committing their usual depredations through that region. The soldiers would not even get sight of renegades, and at last, worn out with their long marches, they went into camp the other day near Lordsburg, in southwestern New Mexico.

On the very first night in camp the Indians they had been searching for crept up and made a raid on the commissary department. They stole all the provisions they could get hold of, a couple of pack mules and two saddle horses, and then crept away so quietly that the troops did not know they had been there until morning. Then Uncle Sam's soldiers found themselves short on breakfast bacon, hard tack and coffee. The Indians had left barely enough for half raitons for breakfast. The Apaches did not need what they had stolen, for some of the provisions were found, but no longer fit for use, scattered along the trail the Indians had taken, while the two mules and one of the horses were found, hamstrung and dying, no more than five miles from the camp. The Indians meant it simply as a piece of daredevil defiance and a grim practical joke of the sort that most appeals to the Apache sense of humor.

The renegades were headed toward the north, and a telegram was sent to Fort Bayard to head them off. A troop of cavalry was sent out at once, but so far to date has neither headed nor tailed them.—N. Y. Sun.

City Dogs and Country Dogs.

There is a marked difference between city and country dogs. A city dog turned loose in a pasture lot mopes along, paying no attention to the birds and other animals around it, but a country dog turned free in a city street, after the temporary embarrassment which countrified folks always feel, observes the sparrows to be unusually tame and numerous. Then comes a round of sport that makes the country dog feel itself very much at home. The country dog delights in chasing small birds and the city dog doesn't, but after a few hours' racing the dog's feet would be as sore as any clodhopper's that walked the stones for any length of time, especially on a hot day. —N. U. S. GRANT CLUB ACTIVE

BOROUGH REPUBLICANS PREPARE FOR A VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN.

A Marching Contingent Formed and Several New Members Added to the Rolls—Resolution to Stop Immigration.

The U. S. Grant Club met last night in Spencer's hall, on Somerset street, for the purpose of hearing reports from the delegates who attended the last convention at Asbury Park, and of organizing a marching club for the coming campaign.

It was quite late before the club got down to business and the members spent the time cracking jokes and telling stories at the expense of each other.

When the meeting was called to order there were about thirty people present. H. N. Spencer took the floor and as a delegate to the last convention, told of the events of interest which took place there. He said the State Republican League now consists of 451 clubs and has 63,251 members.

W. C. Smith was the next delegate to take the floor, but he did not say much concerning the convention, but related, to the great edification of the audience, how H. N. Spencer got lost and how they hunted half a day before they found him. Andrew Lutkins next took the floor and got off a joke or two at the expense of W. C. Smith.

The work of enrolling new members was taken up and quite a number were secured. Someone saw Dr. Cooley at the door and shouted "The next Mayor." Tremendous applause followed and Dr. Cooley made his way to the front and responded to the ovation he had received.

H. N. Spencer, at the head of the music committee, called on W. C. Smith, Jr., for a piano solo, which was well rendered. Messrs. W. C. Smith, Sr., and W. C. Smith, Jr., then rendered one of the campaign songs that were sung at Asbury Park last Thursday.

A motion was made that a resolution be sent to the representatives of the third district in Congress to the effect that they use their influence in stopping emigration for a period of twenty five years. Some of the members really thought this was entirely too sweeping, and it was, therefore, laid on the table until the next meeting.

First Dose Helped.

North Plainfield, July 15th, 1896.—"Several years ago I took Hood's Sarsaparilla after having the grip, and my health was benefitted almost from the first dose."—B. D. F. Randolph, 132 Grove street. Hood's pills are easy to take.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and state of extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing buisness during the spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adopted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

[COPYRIGHTED, 1894.]

had much to relate to her, and much to tell Jean and Pierre. On one occasion M. Etienne had taken him, as if he were his assistant, to a grand house, where a famous surgeon had requested the monsieur's help, and where Beauxlieux had at first been dazzled by wealth and then dazed with wonder. They had gone afterward in haste across Austria, on another occasion for M. Etienne's services, to a half savage Roumanian prince, where, owing to his incognito, Beauxlieux saw much of the life beneath the barbaric splendor, the Parisian surgeon leaving the case with M. Etienne, so that for several weeks Beauxlieux, among conditions of life of which he had had no conception, found himself, unaware, in his leisure as M. Etienne's superfluous attendant, studying them, getting a close interest in the people of the forest, on the mountain, in the cabins clustered in the midst of the vast farms. "It is right," said M. Etienne, when he spoke to him of his observations and his wonder, "that your grace should know what goes on in the world, how the greater part of our fellow creatures live and suffer. For it may some day be the part of the Duke des Sarazines Beauxlieux to bring them relief."

When the patient in his care could be left, M. Etienne took Beauxlieux with him farther east, and he was approaching his twenty-first year when he returned, a traveled man, to the old chateau.

The days were long to the duchess while her son and the monsieur were away. She busied herself and Victorine at their embroidery, at their books. She walked beside the sea in the latter part of the day, a slight, swift figure wrapped in a long cloak, looking over the gray and melancholy waste, restless herself as those dreamy waters were—longing for her boy, distrusting and fearing the future, yet soothed when she thought of the strong arm of M. Etienne, on which, whether near or far, she leaned. In the evening Pierre tinkered at the barrel of the music box having a knack of tinkering, or perhaps Jean read to them by the firelight which illuminated the dark salon, he lying on the skin beside the hearth, whose logs he and Pierre had helped to bring in from the forest, or reading, not by any means the news of the day—madame would have none of that now—more frequently old romances of derring-doe.

When Beauxlieux came home with the story of his adventures it was Pierre's eyes that opened at the mention of palaces and great houses, and he demanded even more particulars than had struck Beauxlieux' sight. It was Jean who asked about the people upholding the structure of the great households on their shoulders. Jean himself had been away on foot, more than once now—no one knew where. But even the duchess had seen the light on his face sometimes when coming back.

"I shall have a dwelling such as one of those," said Pierre. "I shall house my wife in a palace. I go to Paris to make my fortune."

"You like then this rotten splendor," cried the deep voice of Beauxlieux, from the shadow where he sat by the duchess on the other side of the wide hearth. "Alas! It is only the scum on a sea of filth and iniquity. That laughter of the people who float over it—I hear through it only the groan of the people who produce it!"

"I shall not search too deeply," said Pierre. "One man cannot reform the world. Let me take the best of it while it is going—money, jewels, houses, horses—"

"And you call that the best? Money wrung out of sweat? Idle glitter of jewels while others have scarcely rags? Houses that are gilded seraglios, while there are men and women sleeping on wattles of straw—"

"It will not be my fault," said Pierre, "that they sleep on straw. Pshaw! When I am rich I shall not keep it all to myself. I shall take pleasure in giving—"

"He has read of Alnaschar," said Jean.

"In giving!" cried Beauxlieux. "There is no giving! It is theirs! It is their labor, their lives, their deprivation, their want, their suffering, that made all this money; no matter how you come by it. It is theirs! You can give them nothing. You can only restore in part."

"What puzzles me," said Jean, "is how these others can think that they love the good God, and, knowing that He loves all men, be willing to wrong any man. No, no, when I recollect the story of Jesus, that He died for men, I have felt myself unwilling to accept the sacrifice. I have felt that I, too, must surrender myself, if not to die, then to live for men. Never for myself, only for them."

"Oh, Jean!" cried Beauxlieux, clasping his hand. "And I shall live with you!"

"I suppose Jean is going to be a priest?" said the pretty Victorine, with a little insolent shrug.

"Not of any church, Victorine," said Jean. "I shall not need to be blessed of the apostolic succession in order to carry hope into dungeons."

"Oh, you make me cold at the heart of me!" cried Victorine.

Beauxlieux had now set himself seriously at work to learn the profession in which M. Etienne was so accomplished. He was not one under any circumstances to be idle. His mother had not wished this study, however; she would have him wait, even if it were in poverty, preserving his nobility, till the government should give him his own again. But the hated empire had fallen, and it had been replaced by the even more hated republic. That had not signified greatly to her; it was never "France" to her, it was always "My son." But now even Henry V. was dead. "There is no more hope," M. Etienne had declared. "Let his grace do as he will." And it was M. Etienne who found the means for Beauxlieux to go to Paris and finish his undertaking. His mother had some dim idea that all things were open to him as his father's son, as the last of his exalted name; she had no idea whatever that the name now was remembered only as a matter of history, nor that in Paris the young duke was known simply as Beauxlieux, a student of promise from a southwestern department.

It was on his twenty-first birthday that his mother formally made over to him his possessions. He was a little sad about it—not that the chateau was a ruin, the forest so thin, the fields so few and bare, but that his mother should break her heart over these affairs. For himself, he was full of strength and hope, and nothing mattered since he was well and was alive, since he had M. Etienne and Jean; since, above all, he had his mother.

His mother, not yet in her fortieth year, was still beautiful, her hair black as the raven's wing, her dark clear skin as smooth as a girl's, her eyes glowing as the midnight stars, her smile heartwarming. As she stood in the warm light, for Olympe had candles in every sconce, wearing that pale primrose satin of more than twenty years ago, covered now with black lace of a far greater age, almost wrapped in the glow of the Beauxlieux diamonds, as in a cloud of brightness, preserving all the sweet and stately grace of her first youth, she was still a sight to make a man's heart tremble. She seemed to beam and sparkle as she walked, her every movement shedding a stream of light; and Jean himself did not find it possible to envy her in his heart that night the possession of the diamonds, that they might be sold and their price given to the poor. As for her, it would as soon have occurred to her to sell herself as those stones, which were a part of the insignia of the family magnificence.

She put off the air of gentle melancholy which she usually wore, but which was a remnant of old manner rather than an indication of present feeling, and made them gay with her gayety. She talked with Jean of Beauxlieux, her son, and his future, with M. Etienne of his great cases, with Pierre of his hopes—Pierre had had a year in Paris now. She danced with Beauxlieux to tunes of the music box. She even danced down the long room with M. Etienne, once, but no more, a sort of shiver making her fall on the cushions of the bench in the big window there, and she closed the evening by singing at the piano, which Jean kept in tune, a little chanson, that was as proper to her voice as fragrance is to the rose. When she embraced her son, and bade them all good-night, and swept through the door that M. Etienne held open for her, they felt as if after all in her grace and majesty there were the traits of a divine right to power, that something like a superior being had been with them.

And later, as she sat under Olympe's hands, the pretty Victorine taking the jewels as they were unclasped, the duchess thought, with a sort of sacred joy, of the time when she should give these jewels to Beauxlieux' wife—an Orleans

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

SILVER CONVENTION

Little or Nothing Accomplished at the Second Day's Session.

WERE WAITING FOR THE POPULISTS

Speechmaking Indulged in To Entertain the Delegates — Bryan's Name Is Cheered — Cleveland Denounced by One of the Orators.

St. Louis, July 24.—When the delegates to the national silver party convention assembled for the second day's session it was the general belief that the work would be completed before evening, but it soon became apparent that if they were to make a deal with the populists they would have to continue over another day, as the people's party convention was having a great struggle perfecting a permanent organization. The silverites assembled again without prayer, the clergyman who had been expected to be present having been called from the city. Chairman St. John, in calling the convention to order, said: "I trust we are all in a spirit of prayer." Vice-chairman C. A. Towne addressed the convention, saying among other things: "Laws cease to be the fiat of the people and are becoming the declaration of a class. Glory has been narrowed to success and money has become a god, but the day of regeneration is at hand." Towns got a lot of cheers when he mentioned Teller, saying: "One of the most patriotic moves in history was the secession of the Grand Old Man of Colorado from party trammels for conscience sake." The mention of Bryan's name caused prolonged cheers, the delegates rising in a body. "Bryan represents the cause of humanity against injustice," was the way Towne introduced the Chicago candidate. Towne concluded amid much applause at 11:14 o'clock. The chairman invited Gov. Stone of Missouri to the stand, but the governor was not to found. So ex-Gov. St. John of Kansas was called upon. Mr. St. John addressed the convention, beginning: "Somebody has fired on Fort Sumpter, but the north and south are united in the present fight." He took occasion to refer to President Cleveland as follows, "Grover Cleveland is even deader than the McKinley bill." Wild laughter greeted this sally. When Mr. St. John concluded, Mrs. Helen Gougar of Indiada made a speech half an hour long. Judge Sheldon of Connecticut spoke for fifteen minutes and the convention adjourned until 2:30 o'clock.

Afternoon Session.

When Chairman St. John called the convention to order at 2:57 o'clock there were more ladies present than at any previous session, but fewer delegates. The chairman stated that the committee appointed to confer with the populists had as yet not been called upon to exercise its offices owing to the delay of permanent organization of the populist convention. C. G. Bradshaw of Montana presented a resolution of thanks to Dr. J. J. Mott, chairman of the bimetallic league, in appreciation of his services in arranging for the convention. The resolution was passed by a unanimous rising vote. Dr. Mott was then called and made a short speech. W. H. (Coin) Harvey was called for, but on motion of a delegate from California, C. D. Lane, a gold miner and delegate from that state, was invited to address the convention for five minutes. This he did. A delegate from Missouri moved that Harvey be invited to address the convention, but Mr. Shinn of Kansas moved that the committee on resolutions be requested to make its report. The convention overwhelmingly decided to hear Harvey, but that gentleman, however, simply returned thanks for the honor implied, and excused himself on the ground of physical weakness.

St. John's Motion Prevailed.

Mr. Doud of Missouri hoped that the convention, having appoined a committee on conference, would not stultify itself by adjourning until the populist convention had an opportunity to perfect arrangements for the conference asked for. Several of the speakers said they were willing to remain here until the 1st of November if necessary to accomplish their purpose; those who are not willing to remain, said a delegate from California, like the Irishman, should have gone back before they started. Mr. Little of Kansas said that the populist delegation from his state advised him that if the silver convention wanted to help the Bryan movement in that convention, it would nominate him and Sewall and he thought that should be done to-day. (Applause). Mr. St. John urged the passage of his motion. This convention had appointed a committee on conference and he hoped that now it would not insult the populist convention by declaring itself upon the matter in conference. They were treating with men, he hoped with gentlemen; put yourself, he said, in their places. After further discussion the amendment to meet at 8 p. m. was lost—146 to 151. A vote by states was denied and the motion of Mr. St. John was declared to have been carried, amid applause.

Previous Political Affiliation.

An effort was made to have a call of the states made, by the terms of the motion of Mr. Strong of Illinois, agreed to at the morning session, to show the previous political affiliations of the delegates. The motion prevailed, and the roll-call was ordered. While the roll was being called a chalk artist named Bryan entertained the convention. The poll showed: 521 republicans; 135 democrats; 9 prohibitionists; 47 populists; 12 independents; 1 nationalist, and one greenbacker. Mr. Hawthorne of Minnesota offered the following resolution, which, after reading, was referred to the committee on resolutions: Resolved, that the national committees of the silver, democratic and people's parties be requested to refer to and designate the Bryant and Sewall silver ticket, whenever practicable, as the "American Union Ticket."

Counting Noses of Old Veterans.

Mr. Strong of Illinois offered the following resolution and it was adopted: "Whereas, the false accusation is so frequently made that those who demand the restoration of the silver dollar to its place as equal to the gold dollar as a debt payer, under our flag, are not patriotic in the defense of our national honor. Resolved, that all those who were formerly true to the old flag and who risked their lives at sea or on land, who are present at delegates to this national silver convention be required to stand on their feet until their number is counted." While the old veterans were on their feet, a confederate veteran, Gen. McIver, occasioned much enthusiasm by grasping the hand of L. F. Dow, a union soldier and proclaiming that the former enemies were reunited, "and may they ever remain so against the gold forces of the country," he added. Only a few old soldiers rising, there being but comparatively few delegates present, suggestions were made that the count be postponed until to-day. No action was taken, and at 5:15 o'clock the convention ajourned until to-day at 10 o'clock.

SILVER PARTY'S PLATFORM.

Declaration for the White Metal and the Democratic Nominees.

St. Louis, July 24.—The following are the main points of the platform of the silverite convention: It denounces the single gold standard and demands an "immediate return to the constitutional standard of gold and silver, by the restoration by this government, independently of any foreign power, of the unrestricted coinage of both gold and silver into standard money at the ratio of 16 to 1, and upon terms of exact equality as they existed prior to 1873, the silver coin to be a full legal tender, equally with gold, for all our debts and dues, public and private, and we favor such legislation as will prevent for the future the demonetization of any kind of legal-tender money by private contract." It is demanded that all money shall be issued by the government alone. The issue of bonds in time of peace is denounced. The nomination of the democratic candidates for president and vice-president, William J. Bryan and Arthur Sewall, is recommended.

OWES DEPOSITORS $100,000.

Failure of a Bank in Which One Man Held All the Offices.

Jersey City, July 24.—Gitana D. Eliza & Co., bankers, with offices at 102 Brunswick street, this city, and 33 Main street, Brooklyn, failed yesterday. Both offices were closed this morning. Gitana D. Eliza was locked up in Jersey City on a charge of embezzlement, and detectives are looking for the other member of the firm. It appears Eliza was cashier, president, treasurer and the board of directors of the institution. The branch of the bank in this city is run in connection with Eliza's saloon. Recently Eliza refused to pay some of the depositors, putting them off on one pretext or another. The result of this was that a crowd of angry depositors assembled at the bank here yesterday and demanded their money. On being refused they became furious and threatened Eliza's life. The police were notified and took Eliza into custody. On being arraigned in court he was charged by some of the angry depositors with conspiracy to defraud. He refused to say anything and was held for a further hearing. It is said the defalcation of the firm amounts to $100,000.

Colombian Rebels Triumph.

Colon, Colombia, July 24.—Advices received here from Ecuador are to the effect that the rebels have triumphed over the government forces at Cuenca and other points, and that they are about to form an administration. It is estimated that the rebel troops number 2,000 and the government troops 2,600.

FRIDAY, July 24. Sun rises 4:38 a. m., sets 7:32 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:32 p. m. and 3:38 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

James Bailey, of East Second street, now rides a new Spalding wheel.

A party of six young women from Westfield rode their wheels to this city yesterday.

Wheelmen should avoid all sweetened drinks when on a tour. They only serve to increase the thirst. The most benificial drink is ginger ale. The imported article is the best, and if served in a large glass with a fresh egg broken in it and thoroughly mixed, the portion is delicious and exceedingly refreshing.

Fifty-six members of the Crescent Wheelmen rode to a place near Roselle last night and enjoyed a clambake. They returned about 1 o'clock this morning. No amount of cross-examining would make any of the members divulge the details of the affair. One of the number was arrested on his return for riding without a light.

Frelinghuysen avenue, between Newark and Elizabeth, is used by a a number of wheelmen as a race-course for the purpose of trying speed with the trolley cars. The practice is a dangerous one and it is surprising that no accidents have resulted. The authorities will make an effort to stop such misuse of the boulevard.

Jepp Sorenson, of Webster place, received severe injuries last night while riding his wheel through Putnam avenue. His handle bars came loose, and before he could catch himself he was thrown to the ground. As a result his body received several bruises, as did also his hand, and his clothes did not escape a tearing. He reached home quickly where he had his injuries treated. Today he feels rather sore.

Collisions are sometimes unavoidable, no matter how careful a rider may be. Of course, it is always best to avoid a smashup, if such a thing is possible. There are cases, and it happens to nearly every cyclist, when a collision cannot be avoided. Then the old saw: "Self-preservation is the first law of nature," comes in. Put on a little extra steam and strike your adversary's wheel head on. Don't allow him to hit you broadside or your wheel won't be worth much. Above all always keep cool and observe the rules of the road. If you do this it will be the other fellow's fault if there is any trouble.

A wheelman who was touring over one of the popular roads in this section of the State was recently set upon by a dog, which tore his stocking badly and left the impression of his teeth upon the calf of his leg. He chased the dog off and went to the house of the farmer who owned the dog. The farmer, being a shrewd man and fearing a suit for damages, asked the young man to take a seat and retired to the house. Presently his daughter came out—a handsome girl, carrying a needle and thread in her hand, and said she would be pleased to sew up the tear if she was permitted to do so. It is needless to say that there was no suit for dam ages.

The clubs of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League enjoyed a run to Rahway last evening and Plainfield had the distinction of having the largest delegation, twenty-four cyclers attending from this city. First Lieutenant Elward Laing was in command of the local riders. A meeting of the executive committee was held during the evening and the date for the run to New Brunswick was changed from August 6th to July 30th, at the request of the New Brunswick delegates. The Summit club invited the other clubs to come to that city on August 13th, and then consider the question of continuing the league runs this fall. Passaic invited the league clubs to come to that city on August 30th.

Ross Arrested for Being Disorderly.

Wm. Ross was brought before City Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of being disorderly in front of his store and restaurant on Park avenue. His trial will come up tomorrow.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Marshall, of North avenue, leave town tomorrow morning for a fishing trip.

Walter Bennett, of Somerset place, who has been on a fishing cruise for a week past with a party of Rahway friends, is expected home tonight.

The members of the Game and Fish Protective Society of this city are doing their utmost to protect the game and fish in the streams and on the reserves in this locality. New and attractive signs will be put up this coming week, and besides the heavy penalty imposed under the State laws, the local society will offer as an extra inducement a small purse for the apprehension and conviction of the evil doers in the game and fish line. The members of the society say that the game and fish shall be protected at all hazards. Of course in the "open season" all men are equal so far as catching fish is concerned, but the society claims that no partiality will be shown to anyone, be he a member or otherwise, who is caught hunting or fishing out of season.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Y. M. C. A. ball team will play the Flemington team Saturday at the latter place.

In their game with the Somerset A. C., of Somerville, tomorrow the Plainfield A. C. will line up as follows: Muir, l. f.; Lederer, 2b.; Firstbrook, 3b.; Swalm, r. f.; M. Sutphen, c. f.; Booth, s. s.; Winn, p.; C. Sutphen, c.; Munford, 1b.

GOLF.

An important club meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be held in the clubhouse on Watchung avenue this evening. Plans for the new clubhouse on the golf course will be selected. A new constitution and bylaws will be adopted and the final steps towards incorporation will be taken.

Rothenhausen Released.

Through the magnamity of Justice Justice Crosley, and the intercession of John H. Tier, Sr., Charles Rothenhausen, of the borough, was released by Judge Bartine from the Somerville jail yesterday after serving twelve days and paying a fine of ten dollars. Mr. Tier employed the latter as a candy maker and needed his services, and through the above procedure the man was released. Some knowing one circulated a report that Rothenhausen intended bringing suit for false imprisonment, but this is false.

Excursion Rates Secured.

Those in charge of the Knights Templar "Field Day," to be held in this city, Thursday, October 1st, have succeeded in securing from the railroads a rate of one fare for a round trip. The roads that have granted this request are: West Shore, New York, Ontario & Western, New York, Lake Erie & Western, Lehigh Valley, Central Railroad, Philadelphia & Reading, Pennsylvania, and Baltimore & Ohio. All of the above lines run through New Jersey.

Among the Police.

Roundsman Frederickson began his vacation last night. Patrolman Flanagan is quite ill at his home. Patrolman McCue is recuperating in New York State.

Miss Aimee Emmons, of Prospect place, has returned from an outing at Avon by-the Sea.

Charles Noble, of Mendham, spent last night with his brother, Franklin P. Noble, of East Fifth street.

Miss Priscilla B. Emmons, of Prospect place, leaves next week for a several weeks stay at Avon-by-the-Sea.

PUSHING THE TROLLEY.

SCOTCH PLAINS LIKELY TO BE TAPPED BY THE TIME SNOW FLIES.

Enough Permits Secured Along Second Street and Netherwood Avenue—May Result in the Opening of a New Street.

From present prospects it looks as though the trolley road will surely be pushed through to Scotch Plains before snow flies. Charles L. Moffett, the lawyer, who is representing the company in the matter of securing permits from property owners along the proposed route, has met with such success that already he has enough signitures to a limit of the extension up East Second street and over Netherwood avenue to Front street. As soon as Mr. Moffett gains the consent of an interested party, he immediately forms a complete chain from which there is no reversal by getting an affidavit to the effect that the party is willing for the road to pass his or her property.

The plan for the extension to Scotch Plains is that the road shall start at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, in front of the City Hotel, the permits along this new territory having already been secured with the rest. This, it is thought, will be the most convenient place for the traffic of Scotch Plains to center.

The only fear of the project being blocked is from the residents along Front street above Netherwood avenue, where the railroad would tap the former street.

If there is too much objection here, and it cannot be overcome, it is planned to open an entire new thoroughfare from Second street through to the Plains, being a continuation of Second street. It is understood that owners of the land along this route are anxious to have this plan consummated as it would open up their property for residential purposes and the trolley would greatly enhance its desirability. Then it is calculated that inasmuch as the citizens of Scotch Plains are so anxious to have the road run to their town, the township would improve the street from the city limits, and in this way it would be a good thing for all concerned.

There is but little doubt but what the road will be pushed to completion in that direction.

RIDING ON THE SIDEWALK.

Leander Brown Arrested and Fined for Doing So.

The first victim of the clause in the new cicycle ordinance, relating to riding on the sidewalk, was brought up before City Judge DeMeza at his office this morning. The offender was a colored man by the name of Leander Brown. Brown is a mason when he has nothing else to do, but this morning he was speeding down West Front street near Grant avenue on his solid tire bicycle. Captain Grant happened to be in that neighborhood and found Brown riding on the sidewalk.

He arrested the progress of the colored man and then arrested him and brought him before the Judge. Brown admitted that he had been on the sidewalk, but claimed extenuating circumstances. His ingenious story of the reasons for his being on the sidewalk was that he was riding down the road when he struck a large stone with his front wheel and it threw him over on the sidewalk. The Judge didn't deem that a good and sufficient reason and fined Brown $1.

Last Sermon Before Vacation.

Tomorrow will be the Rev. Cornelius Schenck's last Sunday in Trinity Reformed church, previous to his vacation of one month, which he and his family will spend at Spruceton, in the Catskill Mountains, N. Y., leaving Plainfield on Wednesday morning of next week. His morning subject will be "The sure method of finding relief." In the evening the theme will be "Salvation," a gospel service at which gospel hymns will be used.

A Shattered Glass.

Last evening about 11 o'clock the crashing of glass attracted Sergeant Kiely and a number of people to the City Hotel, where it was learned that some one had pushed their hand through a glass in a door. There were several persons present when the thing happened, but not one would tell how it occurred.

Salvationists Still Active.

TALK FROM A DELEGATE

E. F. ANTHONY TELLS MORE OF THE ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

In All the Services the New Jersey Representatives Took Active Part and Were Spiritually Benefitted Thereby.

Despite the inclement weather last evening a fair sized audience gathered at the Park Avenue Baptist church and listened with a great deal of interest to the report given by E.E. Anthony, of the recent Washington Christian Endeavor convention.

A short song service, led by H. J. Martin and a quartette, consisting of Miss Fish, Miss Brokaw, Miss Delia Runyon and Miss Adelaide Runyon, opened the service, following which a prayer service was held. Mr. Anthony then read the Scriptures and took his text from a portion of the sixth verse of the fourth chapter of Isaiah: "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord." This text, the speaker said, was the motto of the great convention, which was different from other conventions, from the fact that it was very spiritual. There were 1,083 delegates present from New Jersey, who all felt the power of consecration. The singing at the convention was a revelation, with a choir of 1,000 voices, led by the Prince of Singers, Percy Foster. A feature of the gathering, the speaker said, was the stress laid upon the fact that the young people must be educated to know something of public affairs.

Mr. Anthony gave a striking account of a vesper service held at the Capitol, where it was estimated that 72,000 delegates were assembled. He spoke of the choir of 4,000 voices assisted by the Marine Band, and how prominent the Jersey delegates were with their colors of orange and black, and how impressive the service was as it opened with the singing of "Holy! Holy! Holy! Lord, God, Almighty!" The speaker closed his remarks by impressing upon each one the necessity of more faithfulness, devotion and spirituality.

While the hymn "I Live for Him, Who Died for Me" was being sung nearly all present arose and consecrated themselves to God's service. Several gave earnest testimonies at this time.

Mr. Anthony's report in the main was the same given at Trinity Reformed church last Sunday evening, and the above was selected as being something which was not given at that time.

The decorations consisting of American flags formed a pleasing picture and added greatly to the service, which was brought to a close with the Mizpah benediction.

Anniversary Number.

The Scientific American, of New York, has signalized its fifteth anniversary by the publication of a very handsome 72-page special number, which consists of a review of the development of science and the industrial arts in the United States during the past fifty years. It was an ambitious undertaking, and the work has been well done. The many articles are thoroughly technical, and they are written in a racy and popular style, which makes the whole volume—it is nothing less, being equal to a book of 442 ordinary pages—thoroughly readable. It is inclosed for preservation in a handsome cover, and is sold at the price of ten cents.

A Birthday Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, of Somerset street, who are stopping at their summer residence at Coöntown, arranged a very complete birthday surprise last evening in honor of Mrs. Voehl's brother, Andrew Mantz, who lives in that vicinity. There were about twenty-five persons present, including John H. Carney, of this city, who with Rev. Geo. Bowers, furnished the evening's entertainment with comical sketches, autoharp and vocal solos and recitations. Mr. Mantz was wholly surprised and it was sometime before he regained his composure.

Summit Nurseries Attached.

A writ of attachment was issued in the Union County Court yesterday against Rebecca De Forest Lyon, carrying on business in Summit as the Kent Place Nurseries. The writ was obtained by Stephen R. Mullen and George E. Lum, formerly the firm of Mullen & Lum, of Summit, who want to collect from the defendant a claim of $1,500. The writ is made returnable August 3d.

Debt Paying Day.

Tomorrow will be debt paying day in the Methodist Episcopal church. The missionary treasury is in debt $200,000, caused by endeavoring to meet the demands of constantly increasing missionary fields. No subscriptions will be asked for, but friends are invited to bring their offerings.

ROSS WAS TOO TALKATIVE

THE RESTAURANT KEEPER STARTS A TIRADE AGAINST THE POLICE.

Thinks He is Being Persecuted by the Police and Proposes to Exercise Hi Right of Speech in Reference Thereto

Although Wm. Ross, proprietor of the Delmonico oyster and chop house, was not tried this morning on the charge of using disorderly language, yet his very appearance in the court room was the occasion of considerable excitement. The sensation of being arrested did not evidently agree with him, and he appeared in a somewhat excitable humor.

When the case was called Ross's counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, asked that the case be dismissed, as the complaint did not specify what disorderly language was used. The Judge refused, and Lawyer Hetfield asked for an adjournment of the case. The Judge adjourned the case until Monday, August 3d.

Ross evidently came prepared to talk, for when the case was adjourned he began to make sundry remarks on the way that he had been abused by the police and city. He declared that he was innocent and that many good citizens had told him that they would stick to him through thick and thin. His voice rose as his excitement increased until the Judge had to call him to order.

"I'm going to exercise my rights as an American citizen to talk," exclaimed the restaurant keeper, and talk he did despite his lawyer's warnings to behave himself. Then Captain Grant took a hand and told Ross that scraps were constantly going on at his place, disturbing the neighborhood, besides attracting crowds, and that it must be stopped. But Ross didn't stop talking. He started such a tirade against everybody that the Judge had to threaten to have him locked up. After remarking "You'll get it all in the papers and don't you forget it," Ross subsided and the court continued its work.

Ross's partner in the scrape, Kate Staats, his colored assistant, otherwise known as "Black Kittie," was arrested this morning and brought before City Judge DeMeza at his office. She was held in $50 bail to appear for trial Monday morning, Aug. 3d, when Ross comes up for trial. The charge against her is disorderly conduct and using profane and indecent language.

She told the Judge that Ross called her all sorts of impolite and disagreeable names, and then she gave the Judge a few samples of them, and that she only returned the compliment by calling him the same names.

Her trial is likely to be a lively one as she is not bashful about talking, and combined with Ross, will keep the court hustling.

THE MUD INTERFERED.

And Evans Gave Up His Attempt at the 24-Hour Record.

The attempt of A. W. W. Evans, of New Brunswick, to demolish the 24-hour record yesterday was not successful, but his failure was the fault of the stormy weather for the roads soon became veritable seas of mud through which Evans slipped and slid until it was plain that he could not lower the record. His course was over the county roads between New Brunswick and Elizabeth. He started at 5 o'clock and passed through Plainfield for the last time at 8:29 on his way to Elizabeth. He had two punctures and rode on his rim for nearly twenty miles. He was paced by three tandems alternately. The tandem teams were C. H. Appley and H. F. Loehrs, of Elizabeth; Dr. Rice and Charles Foreman, and E. C. and George Voorhees, of New Brunswick. Evans stopped at Elizabeth after having ridden seventy five miles. William J. Kiely, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, had charge of the timing and checking of Evans in this city.

WATSON PLEADS GUILTY

THERE WILL BE NO REPETITION OF LEGAL COMPLICATIONS.

Says He Won't Make a Fight Because the Incident on Which the Charge is Based Has Escaped His Memory.

There will be no repetition of the famous Watson illegal liquor selling case and, and there will be no exciting trial. Michael Watson, who keeps a grocery on Grant avenue, and who was charged with selling liquor without a license and on Sunday, appeared at the office of City Judge DeMeza yesterday afternoon and asked the Judge's permission to retract his plea of not guilty. The Judge granted the permission and Watson entered the plea of guilty. He did not want, he said, to bother the court, neither did he wish to bother the police. The incident happened so long ago that he did not remember it. The trial therefore will not be held, and the Judge announced that he would pronounce sentence on Watson Monday morning at the city jail.

The extreme penalty is a fine of $100 and sixty days in jail, and as Watson has already been convicted of illegal liquor selling his punishment is likely to be severe. Judge DeMeza has declared that he will do all in his power to break up the illegal liquor selling in the West End, and considerable interest is taken in the sentence.

An Appeal for Help.

The Normal and Industrial School, located at Waycross, Ga., was organized July, 1894. It is the only school of its kind accessible to 60,000 colored people, whose educational interests have been seriously neglected. By their economy, effort and sacrifice they have purchased land, but have no buildings. The rented building, which they occupied, cannot be had longer.

$2,000 is needed to erect a building by the 15th of September. If we fail our whole school (300 pupils) will be without shelter. Is there a heart to sympathize, and a hand to help? Rev. A. A. J. Egerton, the financial agent, is here and states that the work is doing well so far as teaching is concerned and every sign of progress is manifested on the part of the children, who are gathered from their dilapidated homes. If you are interested please communicate. A. A. J. Egerton, 115 Madison avenue.

On His Way to Prison.

Gilbert Thompson, better known as "Tip, the bootblack," who was sentenced this week to three years in State Prison for shooting his wife with intent to kill, passed through Plainfield this morning on his way to Trenton, to serve out his time. While the train stood at the North avenue station, several of his colored friends gathered to speak to him. Tip seemed to be in good spirits and was not apparently affected by his new experience of going to prison.

A Missionary to Talk.

At the morning session of the M. E. Sunday-school in Vincent chapel, tomorrow, Miss Agnes McAllister, of Garraway Mission, West Africa, will give an address upon her work in the native tribe in which she has been laboring as missionary, teacher and army surgeon. She lived alone for seven years amid heathenish surroundings and her story is remarkably interesting. A general invitation is extended to the public to be present.

An Expensive Shot.

Robert Davis, of East Fifth street, appeared before City Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of shooting firearms in the city limits. He said that a stray dog had been wandering about the neighborhood, and chasing the pug dog belonging to his sister. He found the dog sitting on the back steps last Monday morning and shot him. Davis was fined $2, which he paid.

On the Wrong Side of the Road.

Objection is made against teamsters using the left hand side of the road by stone carters on Somerset street. Yesterday one of George Conover's teams ran into a carriage driven by Mr. Texier, who was homeward bound and on the right hand side of the road. A broken wheel and a snaft resulted. Mr. Conover paid the damage.

Funeral of Harry Scully.

The funeral of Harry Scully, whose death occurred at the Muhlenberg hospital yesterday morning from injuries received in Scott's Press works, will be held from his late home in Millstone on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The remains were taken to that place yesterday.

It would be hard to convince a man suffering from bilious colic that his agony is due to a microbe with an unpronouncable name. But one dose of DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure will convince him of its power to afford instant relief. It kills pain. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THAT FAMOUS PIG CASE.

ALL WARRENVILLE TURNED OUT TO HEAR THE TRIAL.

But When the Justice Adjourned It Three Weeks to Consider a Point of Law There Was a General Disappointment.

All Warrenville turned out last evening to hear the famous pig and oat case of John Stine against Charles Baldwin, the details of which were exclusively told in The Daily Press last Tuesday. The case was to be tried before Justice Austin, or "Squire" Austin, as he is called there and his office was tightly packed despite the heavy rain that was falling. The suit was to recover the value of the oats from Baldwin, whom Stine claimed had got them on false pretenses. Everybody was expecting something exciting, when City Judge DeMeza, of this city, who represented Baldwin, called the Justice's attention to a certain point of law. The Justice was not quite sure, so he adjourned the case for three weeks to look up the point

There was lots of fun while the audience was waiting, for John C. Cooper was present, and had many witty suggestions to offer. When he saw the crowd he wanted to build a city hall right away, and thought that while the crowd was there they had better incorporate the village.

The crowd, however, trramped home in the rain, disgusted with the turn affairs had taken. Stine is going to keep it up, however, if it takes ten years to recover the value of the oats, now that the court won't let him keep the pig which he confiscated in their place.

Residential Changes.

Mrs. John Gifford has leased her house on Central avenue from September 1st to W. C. Delaney and family, of New York. Mrs. E. P. Coard has rented her house, 127 East Ninth street, to W. F. Butler and family, who have been occupying Isaac L. Miller's house on Watchung avenue. They will take possession September 1st. W. F. Hamilton and family, of New York, have taken A. D. Thompson's house on Verdon street, and will move in Monday. Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Linderman, of West Front street, have leased B. R. Cain's house, 413 East Second street, and will move in next Tuesday. All of the above business has been transacted through the Mulford Real Estate Agency, of North avenue.

Petty Burglaries.

During the past two weeks there has been a series of petty burglaries going on in Westfield. Last night an Italian shoemaker's shop was broken into, and besides tumbling things about and taking away a couple of pairs of shoes, the thieves threw away his tools and nails. On Wednesday night Snyder's butcher shop was broken into and a small amount of money taken from the cash drawer. After eating a watermelon the thieves scattered about and destroyed a lot of vegetables. It looks like boys' work.

More Trouble Among the Hackman.

The jealousy between the different hackman still continues and another case in the city court is the result. John Goodman is the complainant and he charges Michael Kennedy with leaving his horse's head and going to the sidewalk to solicit customers, thus violating the hack ordinance. The case was adjourned unti Monday, August 3d. Charles Van Winkle appearing for the defendant.

A Summer Event.

A delightful bicycle party was enjoyed Thursday evening by a number of the friends of Miss Lulu Clawson, of West Sixth street. The party gathered at the home of Miss Clawson early in the evening and took a spin to Metuchen. On the return they stopped at Miss Clawson's home and enjoyed a little social chat.

Broke a Rib.

While attempting to pull down a window shade yesterday morning, Mrs. Wm. Shotwell, of Fairview avenue, was perched on the edge of a chair, when it tipped and she fell to the floor with a great deal of force. The fall resulted in the fracture of a rib. Dr. Jenkins attended her.

Entertainments Planned.

The Plainfield Camera Club will hold its regular meeting on Monday evening. This will be the first meeting since the change of the night from the first and third Tuesdays to the second and fourth Mondays. A report may be expected from the entertainment committee. The club is planning to give a series of entertainments in the fall, and the committee is securing the entertainers.

Persons who have a coughing spell every night, on account of a tickling sensation in the throat, may overcome it at once by a dose of One Minute Cough Cure. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A CLUBHOUSE ASSURED.

HILLSIDE CLUB WILL BUILD ON THEIR GOLF COURSE.

Power to Issue Bonds For the Purpose of Raising Money to Build the Structure With Was Granted to the Governors.

The new clubhouse for the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on their golf course is an assured thing and all that now remains is to select a design and the contractor to build it.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club held a club meeting last evening at which a new constitution and bylaws, substantially the same as the old, were adopted. Formal powers to issue bonds for the building of the new clubhouse were granted to the Board of Governors, and a committee composed of Howard W. Beebe, chairman, George A. Chapman. T. Frank Sykes, James S. Anthony and Evarts Tracy, was selected to have charge of the bond subscriptions.

After the club meeting, the Board of Governors held a special meeting to consider plans for the new clubhouse. After routine business was transacted the designs were brought up. There were three, all submitted by members of the club, A. L. C. Marsh, A. D. Shepard, Jr., and J. Evarts Tracy.

The plans were examined and it was decided to hold another meeting on Wednesday night at which time the selection will be made. A building committee was appointed as follows: George A. Chapman, Dexter O. Tiffany, Josiah Browne and the architect, who ever is chosen.

WILL BRYAN TAKE IT?

If Sewall is Not Accepted by the Populists He May Not Stand.

St. Louis, Julp 25th.—All is chaos this morning. There is no programme and no man knows what will be done by the convention today. Some of the leader insist that Bryan should be nominated in spite of his refusal to stand without Sewall.

The convention was called to order at 9:37 o'clock.

The Chair announced that the selection of members of the National Committee was in order.

J. K. Burnett, of California, protested that the order of business called for the selection of committee for President next. He was overruled by the Chair.

The selection of members of the committees to notify candidates for President and Vice-President was declared next in order.

Senator Pefier was early on the floor of the convention urging that Bryan's name should be put at the head of the ticket with or without his consent. He argued that in the way Senator Jones put the question to the Nebraska man in his telegram there was nothing for Bryan to do but reply as he did.

A DANGEROUS PLACE.

The Children Presist in Getting in The Way of the Trolley.

One of the worst places for the motorman of the local trolley lines is on West Fourth street between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue. The street just swarms with little childaen who think it great fun to see how long they can stand on the track without being run over. In some cases, the motorman has been forced to stop his car and chase the children from the track.

The parents of these children apparently make no effort to keep them out of the way but consider it a joke on the street railway employes. It is a wonder that no one has been hurt as yet but, unless the parents assist the company and the police in keeping the children from the path of the trolley cars, some of the little tots will be injured, perhaps severely.

Thought to be Insane.

James Harrigan, who was evicted from a house on Spring street, Westfield, last week, was arrested last night. He would not remove his goods from the street and was acting in a disorderly manner all day. He was held pending an inquiry into his mental condition.

Installation at Rahway.

Roberts' wagonette took District Deputy Grand Master Pocock and staff to Rahway last evening to install the officers in Essex County Lodge, I. O. O. F. The drive over and back was a very pleasant one despite the rain that fell during part of the evening.

A Flag Hoisted.

Dr. Simpson went to the sick babies camp on Johnston's Drive, Thursday afternoon, and hoisted the flag on the building. It is a white flag with a red cross in the centre.

BRYAN AND SEWALL

Nominated for President and Vice-President by Silverites.

THEIR SELECTION WAS UNANIMOUS

Great Demonstration at the White Metal Men's Convention at St. Louis When the Nominations Were Made—Adjourned Sine Die Last Evening.

St. Louis, July 25.—The national silver party convention, after a session of three days, last evening nominated Bryan and Sewall, the democratic nominees, for president and vice-president respectively, amid the wildest enthusiasm, and at 6:30 p. m. adjourned sine die. The silverites could easily have accomplished the work transacted in one day instead of three, but for the decision not to act on nominations until the populists were consulted. The platform, a straight-out declaration for free silver at 16 to 1, without awaiting international agreement, had no opposition from the start, and the speechmaking, which filled in the balance of the time until the conference committee reported that an agreement had been reached with the populists for each convention to act independently of each other as regards the nominations, was the principal diversion during the long wait.

Everybody Seemed Tired.

When the convention was called to order at 10:40 for the third day's session there were but few visitors present and everybody seemed tired and anxious to leave for home. For an hour previous the band had been entertaining the audience with vigorous renditions of "Maryland, My Maryland," "Marching Through Georgia," and "Dixie," but the delegates had even enough of that. After the convention had come to order it was announced that the conference committee of populists would meet with the silver committee at 1 o'clock and after addresses by Senator Stewart of Nevada and Judge Scott of Omaha, a recess until 3 o'clock was taken.

Final Session.

The last session of the national silver convention attracted the largest attendance of spectators that has honored the convention. A large proportion of the visitors were ladies. At 3:35 o'clock Chairman St. John called the convention to order and introduced Rev. Mr. Haggerty, who invoked the divine blessing upon the convention, its proceedings and the country. Mr. Baker of California, chairman of the silver convention committee of conference, reported in connection with the conferees from the populist convention. He said the delegates of that body were fully in accord with the sentiments entertained by the convention. They earnestly desired to bring about the reforms which are so necessary to the people of the United States. The time at their disposal, Baker said, was so brief that the committee had to content themselves with a general statement of the sentiment animating them all. The reading of the resolution was received with applause. The report was adopted without debate.

Platform Adopted.

The next business being the report of the committee on resolutions, Senator Jones came forward and was given a most flattering reception, many of the delegates rising and cheering. He read the platform and address to the people of the United States. (The platform was printed in these dispatches yesterday). The several declarations in favor of free coinage and denouncing bond issues were attentively listened to and provoked much applause. The recommendation that Bryan and Sewall be nominated brought the whole convention to their feet with cheers and many demonstrations of delight. Francis C. Larno of Oregon moved that the resolutions be adopted as read. Mr. Hess of Illinois rising, as he said, for information, asked whether or not the recommendation of the committee report meant another nomination of Bryan and Sewall. He was informed that the chair being in doubt would withhold the recommendation and rule that the convention would vote upon the resolutions as one. Mr. Hess then said he would speak to the resolutions as a platform. The chairman—It is to be hoped that the gentleman will be brief. After recovering from this shot Hess proceeded with his argument, when he was taken off the floor by a point of order made by Mr. Cole of Wisconsin and sustained by the chair. But before yielding the floor Hess moved to amend the motion to adopt the resolutions by substituting the financial plank of the democratic platform. No second was heard and the motion was not entertained. The platform was then adopted by a rising vote.

Nominations Ordered.

Mr. Pace of Nebraska moved that the convention proceed to the nomination of a candidate for president and vice-president. A number of suggestions and subordinate motions followed without action. Gen. Warner explained why the committee on resolutions had recommended nomination instead of endorsement—which was to meet the exigencies of the situation in several states where nomination was necessary to enable the silver electors to be voted for. Mr. Pace's motion was adopted, and E. C. Little of Abilene, Kan., placed Mr. Bryan's name before the convention in a graceful, and at times forceful speech. L. C. Pace of Nebraska seconded the nomination. Senator Maginley of Michigan, whose name was received with applause and laughter, because of its resemblance to that of the republican candidate, was recognized and also made a happy seconding speech.

The next speech was by Mrs. Stansberry of Colorado, whose statement that the "protected" women of this country received seven cents for making a shirt that a Chinaman was paid ten cents for ironing and that the women of Colorado would vote for the silver dollar, letting those who would vote for the gold dollar, rice and rats, evoked the wildest applause of the convention. Mr. Bashor of Waterloo, Iowa, said it took the Mark Hanna syndicate two years at an expense of $750,000 to nominate McKinley for the presidency at St. Louis, while a twenty minute American speech nominated W. J. Bryan for the same high office at Chicago. Other speeches seconding the nomination were made, and Mr. Doud of Missouri moved that the roll of states be called and the vote recorded. Another delegate moved that the nomination be made by acclamation. This seemed to strike the convention favorably, and it was carried unanimously by a rising vote.

Wild Demonstration.

The announcement by the chair was followed by a great wave of enthusiasm, rolling over the convention hall, carrying the delegates into chairs with umbrellas, hats and handkerchiefs in the air. Miss Lilly Pierce, the elocutionist, who recited the Declaration of Independence on the opening day, seized the large yellow banner of the California Bimetallic league and marched around the hall followed by the delegates in single file. And all the while the band played "Hail Columbia" and "Yankee Doodle." Finally, Miss Pierce took the stage and a striking tableau was formed, she making the central figure, Bryan's picture for a background and flags and banners at the side, holding aloft in her fingers a silver dollar.

Sewall Also Chosen by Acclamation.

When the delegates began to quiet down after a ten-minute demonstration it was renewed by the familiar cry, "What's the matter with Bryan?" and the response, "He's all right." Order being restored, Mr. Baker of California moved to proceed to the nomination of a candidate for vice-president and another delegate moved that it be done by acclamation. This seemed likely to be done without the formality of a nomination, but sufficient quiet was finally secured to enable Alex. Troupe of Connecticut, a personal friend of Mr. Sewall, to put him formally before the convention. The nomination was seconded by Mr. Niles of Ohio. The nomination of Mr. Sewall was made by acclamation and in a diminished measure of spirit and time the demonstration following Bryan's nomination was repeated, with variations. The band played "America" and a verse of that grand old hymy was sung by the delegates and spectators.

No Complimentary Resolutions.

A committee of one from each delegation was then named to notifty the candidates of the nomination. Propositions to extend votes of thanks to W. H. (Coin) Harvey and to Gen. A. J. Warner for their services in the silver cause, were on motion of Gen. Warner, laid on the table. "We are not here," the general said, "to pass complimentary resolutions." Mr. Pace of Nebraska moved as the sense of the convention that inasmuch as Bryan and Sewall will be notified of their nomination by the democratic notification committee in the east, that Mr. Sewall come west with Mr. Bryan and receive the notification of the nomination by this convention at the latter's home in Lincoln, Neb. Carried. Mr. Doud of Missouri moved that Mr. Lane of California, the gold miner who addressed the convention, be elected chairman of the national committee. Laid on the table. And then at 6:30 the convention adjourned sine die.

Canadian Ministry of the Interior.

Montreal, July 25.—It is stated upon excellent authority that Sir Donald A. Smith will enter the new Laurier cabinet as minister of the interior. The place has been kept open, it is said, to give Sir Donald time to return home and consider the matter. Though Sir Donald is a conservative, it is said he has virtually agreed to accept the portfolio, claiming that he can do the northwest much good in such a position, and that he should take hold of the opportunity irrespective of party feelings.

SELF-BETRAYAL.

The Clever Ruse of a Japanese Solomon.

There was in Yeddo a poor man who had worked hard and long, and had saved a small sum of money. He had no strong box to keep it in; and it occurred to him that if he dropped it inside an empty bean-sauce cask, no one would ever think of ever looking there for it. Now this bean sauce is much used by poor people; but the smell is very strong and somewhat offensive to persons of delicate taste. Some ingenious thief, after all, did discover the hiding place, for one day the poor man found his money missing. He went immediately to Oka, and told him of his loss, adding that he thought it must be laid to the charge of some one of the neighbors. So Oka summoned all the poor man's neighbors for the next day, and when they had appeared in court, Oka announced: "In my opinion it is one of you that has stolen this money from the bean-sauce cask, and, if that is so, I shall be able to tell by the smell of the thief's fingers. So let each one come up here and present his hands in turn." Just as he had said this, he noticed one of the men in the back part of the courtroom suddenly put his hand to his nose and smell it. "That man over there is the thief!" immediately exclaimed the judge, pointing to the man.

Oka knew, you see, that if the thief was really among the crowd, his guilty conscience would probably suggest to him the thought: "Will my hands really betray me?"—Harper's Young People

How They Grew a Bell.

At the beginning of the last century the only church bell at Grosslaswitz, Germany, was so small that its tones were not sufficient to penetrate to the ends of the village. A second bell was badly wanted, but the village was poor and where was the money to come from? One Sunday when the schoolmaster, Gottfried Hayn, was going to church, he noticed growing out of the churchyard wall a flourishing stock of green corn, the seed of which must have been dropped by a passing bird. The idea suddenly struck him that perhaps this one stalk of corn could be made the means of procuring the second bell they wanted so much. He waited until the corn was ripe and then he plucked the six years on it and sowed them in his own garden. Next year he gathered the little crop thus produced and sowed it again, until at last he had not room enough in his garden for the crop, and so he divided it among a certain number of farmers, who went on sowing the ears until, in the eighth year, the crop was so large that when it was put together and sold they found that they had money enough to buy a beautiful bell.—Harper's Young People.

"If all drugs were thrown into the sea it would be better for men and worse for the fishes."

Yet for the only drug which is at once a medicine and a food we are indebted to one of those same fishes. Dr. Holmes was hasty. "No known drug," says a high English authority (Dr. A. E. Bridger), "except cod-liver oil, has power to generate any force within the human body. The stimulants and tonics waste force and create weakness." Thus we see why of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites has, for twenty years, been the chief dependence of physicians in all bronchial and lung diseases. Scott's Emulsion acts strictly on the lines of modern medical practice. It does not stimulate, like alcohol and quinine, or stupefy, like opium and the bromides. It nourishes, strengthens and upbuilds the system. Being a true food (digested and absorbed in cases wherein other food only clogs the digestive organs, ferments, and poisons the blood), Scott's Emulsion arrests wasting, forms new flesh and tissue, revives the natural appetite and cures disease, conferring more life. For consumption, bronchitis, depleted blood, scrofula, etc., it excels all other remedies or forms of treatment.

LONG NIGHT SESSION

Populists' Hard Struggle Over a Vice-Presidential Nominee.

TOM WATSON OF GEORGIA CHOSEN

Sewall Opposed by His Own State—Senator Stewart and a New Jersey Orator Howled Down—Bryan's Dispatch Caused a Sensation.

St. Louis, July 25.—When Senator Allen, the permanent chairman, called the people's party convention to order for the third day's session at 10 a. m. there were about 500 persons in the galleries and the delegates were nearly all present. On the platform were ex-Gov. Waite, Senator Peffer and Mrs. Helen Gougar. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. G. Williams of the Union Methodist church. Mrs. Marion Todd of Michigan announced the death of Mrs. E. M. Pennington, who was a worker in the silver cause, and the convention passed resolutions of regret at her death. A. A. Noe of Ohio presented to Chairman Allen a gavel containing sixteen ounces of silver and one of gold. John S. Dore of California created something of a sensation by declaring that the rules of the Omaha convention, prohibiting federal officeholders from taking part in deliberations of the populist convention, should be enforced. His protest was evidently aimed at Senators Butler and Allen, the temporary and permanent chairmen. He was applauded by some of the "middle-of-the-road" men, but no action was taken.

Conference Committee Appointed.

The committee to confer with a similar committee from the silver convention was then appointed, one member from each state except Texas, which refused to be represented. The committee immediately retired to meet the silverites. The regular order was then called for. This was the reading of the minority report of the committee on rules, recommending a change in the order of nominations so as to name the candidate for vice-president before a presidential candidate was nominated, a move of the "middle-of-the-road" men. A motion was made to lay the report on the table. Elweed Pomeroy of New Jersey took the platform and explained the differences between the two factions of the committee on rules. Ignatius Donnelly of Minnesota protested against the proposition to allow the candidate to select the national chairman and was cheered by the "straightouts." E. G. Brown of Massachusetts defended the minority.

Roll of States Called.

The roll of states, after much wangling, was then ordered called on the proposition to substitute the minority for the majority report. A scene of great confusion ensued, which delayed the proceedings some time. The official vote was for the minority, 785; for the majority, 615, and the report was declared adopted. Gen. Weaver of Iowa then read the platform. There was very little applause. Jacob S. Coxey followed with the reading of a minority report on the platform. Mr. Keaby of Texas presented another minority report, which Chairman Allen read. A third minority report was presented by B. Vallette of Rhode Island, but it was so evidently a paraphrase of the Declaration of Independence that the delegates howled in derision. Mr. Vallette became so angry and excited that the chairman ordered him to leave the platform. He refused; his removed by force was ordered. Three policemen dragged him from the platform. Delegates and the sergeants-at-arms interfered, and he was rescued from the police and escorted to his seat. Thus comparative quiet was once more restored. The majority platform was then adopted. All amendments were laid on the table. Several motions to take a recess were voted down.

Recess Taken.

A motion to call the states for nominations for vice-president was carried amid applause at 4:20 p. m., but the motion was reconsidered, and at 4:33 adjournment was taken till 6 p. m.

THE NIGHT SESSION.

Tom Watson of Georgia Nominated for Vice-President After a Spirited Contest.

When the convention reassembled at 6:35 p. m., it was noticed that many of the delegates had their gripsacks with them, indicating that they had given up their rooms in hotels and lodging houses, believing that the night would see the convention closed. There was a large attendance of visitors when the convention was called to order by Chairman Allen. The report of the conference committee containing the platform and proceedings of the silver convention was read. There were several attempts to head it off by calling for the regular order and when the conclusion was reached to the effect that Bryan had been nominated by the silverites, there was terrific applause. The report was referred to committee on rules.

Nominations for Vice-President.

Amid the greatest tumult and disorder the chair finally succeeded in announcing that the order was the placing before the convention names of the candidates for the vice-presidential nomination. Col. Baum of Alabama named Harry Skinner of North Carolina. Congressman Howard of Alabama placed congressman Tom Watson's name in nomination. Great cheering greeted the presentation of Watson's name. Lafe Pence, formerly of Colorado, but representing New York, then mounted the platform and named Arthur Sewall of Maine for the vice-presidential nomination. His speech was greeted with cheers and applause throughout, and at its close there was a big demonstration by the Bryan contingent. J. R. Sovereign of the K. of L., a delegate from Arkansas, seconded the nomination of Congressman Watson. The nomination was also seconded by Asbury Johnson of California and J. E. Murphy of Georgia. Murphy declared that Watson was a greater orator than Bryan. L. H. Weller, known as "Calamity" Weller of Iowa, presented the name of Frank Burkett of Mississippi. Mr. Calhoun of Iowa stated that Mr. Weller represented only a small minority in his state and that the majority had no candidate. W. A. Harris of Kansas seconded the nomination of Sewall. He said the election of Bryan and Sewall, if endorsed here, would mean a victory for the populist party. Frank Doster of Kansas seconded Watson's nomination and said that his selection by this convention would be followed by the withdrawal of Sewall from the democratic ticket. Capt. Burham of Tennessee nominated A. L. Mimms of Tennessee.

Maine Opposes Sewall.

When Maine was called Prof. Alfred A. Bateman, populist candidate for governor of that state, took the platform and protested in the name of his state against the nomination of Sewall. He declared that Sewall never was a greenbacker and that he has not one particle of sympathy with the people's party except in one item of silver. He declared that Sewall cut down the wages of the workingmen on the Maine Central railroad 10 per cent. while he was president of that coporation. "Any man who couples the name of Arthur Sewall with that of Peter Cooper," he said, "puts infamy on the immortal dead." He said the populists of Maine will support any one but Arthur Sewall. He then placed in nomination Mann Page of Virginia.

Michigan Delegate Hissed.

S. D. Walton, of Georgia, a colored delegate, took the platform amid great cheering. He attacked the Bourbon democracy. He made one of the best speeches of the evening, and seconded the nomination of congressman Tom Watson. Frank M. Fogg of Michigan took the platform and said he and four others from Michigan were for Bryan, and the rest of the Michigan delegates seem to be principally for McKinley. He was loudly hissed. He supported Sewall for vice-president. When Nebraska was called George Abbott took the platform, and after stating that he did represent the entire delegation said he would keep faith with the south, and seconded the nomination of Tom Watson. The chairman of the Nebraska delegation stated that Nebraska had no candidate of her own to present, and no choice among those who had been named.

New Jersey Orator Shouted Down.

The chairman of the New Jersey delegation said that with one exception the delegation was unanimous in deciding that no one should speak for New Jersey at this time. Mr. Crandall, the exception, was given 2 1-2 minutes by the chair. Mr. Crandall was received with jeers and hisses. Amid much disorder he got as far as the planet Mars when the crowd drowned him out. He continued to speak on the floor and kept the convention in an uproar for some time. Roll call of states, about midway, was reached after four hours had been consumed.

Senator Stewart Howled Down.

New York yielded her time to Colorado, and Mr. Patterson began to speak in favor of Mr. Sewall. Eleven delegates from New York objected and demanded half the time. Patterson was hissed when he named Sewall. Said he yielded part of his time to Senator Stewart of Nevada. Stewart asked if the convention would hear him a minute. There were shouts of "No!" When order was restored the senator talked silver. He urged the nomination of Sewall as well as Bryan. Stewart was howled down, and the chair suggested better order if adjournment was desired before Monday or Tuesday next. Ohio seconded the nomination of Watson. Pennsylvania declined to take up the time of the convention.

Bryan's Dispatch Caused a Sensation.

The nominations were closed amid scenes of great excitement and a ballot ordered on vice-president. A dispatch received by Senator Jones from Mr. Bryan directing the latter to withdraw his (Bryan's) name if Sewall was not nominated, became public property among the delegates and created a mild sensation although such action on the part of the democratic presidential nominee was hinted at. Gen. Weaver proposed that one ballot be taken and that the convention adjourn until daylight. There were shouts of "no," "finish the work." There was so much disorder that the chairman threatened to declare adjournment unless order was restored. Finally things quieted down somewhat and the roll call proceeded.

Watson Nominated.

When Maine was reached 3 votes were cast for Watson, 2 for Page, 2 for Burkett, 1 for Skinner and 1 for Mimms. Maryland—Watson, 4 1-2; Sewall, 4 1-2. Massachusetts—Watson, 10 1-2; Skinner, 5 1-4; Sewall, 2 5-8; Mimms, 1 5-16; Page, 1 5-16. New Hampshire—Watson, 4. New Jersey—Watson, 11; Sewall, 1. New York, passed. Pennsylvania, passed. As the vote proceeded Mimms and Burkett were recognized and withdrew. Several states changed to Watson and the nomination was made unanimous. Just at this point the lights went out, leaving the hall in complete darkness. Pandemonium reigned. The band played "Dixie" and the crowd yelled and cheered in the darkness. The convention was beyond the control of the chair and the sergeant-at-arms. The hall being in darkness no order could be obtained. Amid this turmoil the convention, at 12:50, Chicago time, adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Fair Tonight; Sunday Fair With Slowly Rising Temperature; Probably Fair Monday.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 81 Degrees.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees denies that he ever said that Bryan would undoubtedly be elected.

The Union County Republican Committee held a meeting yesterday at Elizabeth and heard encouraging reports from the various leaders in the county. It was decided to commence the campaign at an early date in the county and to that end committees on the various phases of vote-getting were appointed. The permanent headquarters will be in the Dix building in Elizabeth.

Here is something that will be interesting to both city and borough since so much trouble has been caused by the pollution of Green brook:

Within a year past the Pennsylvania Board of Health has received thirty-nine complaints of the pollution of municipal water supplies, but it is powerless to act in the matter through the refusal of the Legislature to enact needed legislation. There is little expectation of legislative action, and it might not be effective, inasmuch as many of the rivers used for municipal water supplies have their water-sheds in other States. This, in the opinion of the secretary of the Board of Health, makes the question an interstate one, and therefore one for the consideration of Congress, but there is little hope of relief in that direction.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

William Perrine, of Orange, was the guest of Plainfield relatives yesterday.

Mrs. Brown, of Dunellen, has returned from an outing at Manasquan.

Miss Virginia VanWinkle, of Madison avenue, is visiting relatives at Passaic.

Mis Louise Wilbur, of East Third street, is the guest of relatives at Albany, N. Y.

Mrs. Lincoln and daughter, Miss A. E. Lincoln, of Park ave nue, are stopping at Long Branch.

The Misses Laning, of East Front street, who have been seriously ill, are slowly improving in health.

Dr. Hallock, of Park avenue, has returned from Stony Point, N. Y., where he was treating a patient.

William Ross, of the fire department, will leave town Monday for Newark and Brooklyn, where he will visit relatives.

Miss Maude VanDyke, of East Front street, left town yesterday to spend an indefinite time with relatives at Bernardsville.

Mrs. Charles P. Gano, of Plainfield, has returned home from a week's visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Henry.—High Bridge Gazette.

E. P. Clark and his daughter, Miss Helen Clark, of Crescent avenue, who have been travelling through the British Isles, are planning to sail for America August first.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

—Somerset street is being rolled down today by the borough horse roller.

—The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will hold a business meeting next Tuesday evening.

—Miantónomoh Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., met last evening and transacted routine business.

—Patrolman Cooney is doing night duty in town now while Roundsman Frederickson is on his vacation.

—A new wooden platform is being placed over the scales in front of Simonson & Co.'s feed store on Somerset street.

—When completed, West Eighth street, between Grant and Plainfield avenues, will be one of the finest streets in town.

—Rev. Robert Lowry will speak and Whitney Frazee will play his cornet at the special service to be held in the Scotch Plains Baptist church tomorrow evening.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

"Wake up, Jacob, day is breaking!" so said De Witt's Little Early Risers to the man who had taken them to arouse his sluggish liver. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Cora Gardner, cashier for R. M. Dawson, superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company, has been granted a two weeks vacation. She will spend a portion of the time at Millstone, Somerset county.

John Harkins, the once famous pitcher for the West End baseball team of Somerville, was in town last evening and met a number of his old friends. John looks as young and as game as when he used to be the terror of the local baseball cranks.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler and his son, Charles N. Fowler, Jr., left last Saturday for Arizonia. On their homeward journey they will stop in Milwaukee, Wis., where Mr. Fowler is to speak on the currency question at the great meeting to be held there August 5th.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

"Farmer" James E. Martine was walking along one of the business streets yesterday with the agility which usually marks his pedestrian action when he was hailed by a well-known New York business man who exclaimed:

"Well, Mr Martine, I see you have joined the Anarchists and will vote for Bryan."

"Yes," said Mr. Martine with the usual emphasis that marks his conversation when he talks matters political, "I shall vote for Bryan. To one who has been called a copperhead for the past twenty years, the term Anarchist has no terrors."

"But don't you think it will hurt you politically in this locality?" continued the business man."

Mr. Martine grew a little hot under the collar, to use the vernacular of the street, at this sally, and this reply was not a mince of words:

"To that I will say that blackguardism, vilification, nor epithet, can never frighten me. My convictions and party principles are not for sale. I will not sacrifice my principles and bow my neck for political thrift."

They parted without further exchange of ideas.

In conversation with Councilman Frost, who has fathered the present sewerage system of this city, this morning, I was impressed with the idea that whatever other people may fear in the way of the sewage beds becoming a nuisance, none such are entertained by the Councilman. He is an all around optimist when it comes to considering the working of the system.

Jacob Field, who is employed in Henry Clew's big banking house in New York, showed me one of the new silver certificates just issued by Uncle Sam. A package of $8,000 was sent to the sub-treasury yesterday and they were gobbled up with great promptness by those who knew of the time of their issue. They are certainly fine examples of the engraver's skill and are the most handsome paper money I have ever seen in circulation. The obverse side presents a clear birds-eye view of the city of Washington, with the Washington Monument boldly reliefed in white, while around the border are miniature photographs of men prominent in all departments of human activity in the United States since the Declaration of Independence. The reverse side is similar to the silver certificates now in circulation.

There is one thing that I have noticed here in Plainfield and that is a total absence from the telephone poles which support the wires in the public thoroughfares of a mixed assortment of signs exploiting the merits of this or that patent medicine or patent something. There are plenty of towns where the poles are literally covered from the ground up to ten or twelve feet with placards, printed in varied hues, and staring every pedestrian in the face with advice for his perpetual health, wealth and happiness.

How much longer are the city authorities going to permit bicycle scorching on North avenue? The intersection of Park and North avenues is a dangerous place for the hump-backed embryo racer to go speeding around at a momentum that would mean serious injury to anything that he might come in contact with.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—C. M. Raybert, of North avenue, is having his business wagon repainted.

—The work on the City National Bank is getting along satisfactorily to all concerned.

—The City National Bank have declared their semi-annual four per cent. dividend. It is a prosperous institution.

—Front street is gradually but surely being treated with crushed stone. Some day that street will be a fine thoroughfare.

—The case of Horatio Johnston for building a shed without a permit, was adjourned indefinitely in the city court this morning.

—Justice Nash issued summons yesterday in the case of Force against Dejurson, demand for premises, returnable on the 29th.

—The Christian Endeavor '96 committee will meet this evening in the Y. M. C. A. building and further their plans for the coming State Convention.

—Teacher—"Where do the trade winds blow?" Johnny—"Er—er—I guess they blow around the store of Peck's; he advertises in The Daily Press."

—Pretty wall papers cost no more than ugly ones at Love's. Indeed you can get them cheaper, for the ugly ones are so rare that they bring a better price.

—The excursionists last Thursday to Asbury Park numbered nearly 700, of whom 377 were members of the different Sunday-schools that gave the excursion.

—Horace Doty, aged 11 years, who disappeared sometime ago, and was reported as dead, has returned to Plainfield, and is now in the Children's Home.

—Mrs. Henry Widemeyer, of Somerset street, has a curiosity in the shape of a double bedonia plant, which has upwards of one hundred beautiful blossoms on it.

—Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., met last evening and listened to a report of the by-law committee. A further report will be given next week. One application for membership was received.

—Next Friday evening at the Park Avenue Baptist church the Christian Endeavor Society will hold a "Memory" meeting. The exercises of the entire meeting will be conducted from memory.

—An effort was made by parties interested to have the Westfield Township Committee, at its meeting last evening, accept as a public highway the road laid out last year between Elm and Prospect streets.

—Dr. O. L. Jenkins, of East Front street, has purchased the property on Watching avenue adjoining Rev. S. P. Simpson's residence on the west. Mr. Jenkins will remodle and otherwise improve the property.

—William V. Mundy, agent of the Travelers' Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., received two checks yesterday to satisfy the claims of Theo. Gray of $40 for an injured hand, and G. Smalley of $32 for an injured knee.

—You can't spend your money for a much better purpose than to buy a ticket for the First Baptist church and Sunday-school excursion to Asbury Park, next Thursday, July 30th. A good time is promised everyone who goes.

—There is a spot on Somerset street, near Wetumpka falls, which needs repair. The town committee would do well to place that part of the thoroughfare in perfect order. Then there will be no chance of a case of damages against the township.

—The preliminary meeting for the purpose of the electing officers and choosing a suitable name for the new Council of the Daughters of America to be instituted in this city on Tuesday evening, August 4th, will be held in the offices of Mrs. Ira F. Riker, of 132 Central avenue, next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, to which all who have signed the charter and those who so desire are requested to be present.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

MERCHANTS TO DECORATE

BUSINESS MEN TO ASSIST THE MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S CARNIVAL.

With Bunting and Flags the City Will Present a Gay Appearance Tuesday Evening Next for Parade and Concert.

The business men of this city have realized that the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" is to be of benefit to them, and so they are preparing to aid in making the affair a success. Almost all the merchants on North and Park avenues and Front street, by whose stores the parade passes, have declared their intention of decorating, not only with flags, bunting and lanterns, but many of them with colored fire. The residences along the line of march will all appear in a holiday garb on Tuesday evening, and everything points to a grand affair.

The business men intend to be represented in the parade and a number are preparing an advertisement that may go "on wheels."

While everybody was not satisfied by the route published in last evening's Daily Press, yet the general sentiment was that it was an excellent one. It must be remembered that the condition of some of the roads badly handicapped the committee and that the line of march had to be kept in a reasonable length.

The division for unattached wheelmen promises to be a large one, larger than was expected at first, for many of the surrounding towns have promised to send their delegations of cyclists to unite with Plainfield in her celebration.

The moon was at full last evening and will be just right for the latter part of the parade, as it rises Tuesday evening at 9 o'clock. If the weather only remains fine, then Plainfield will enjoy something that she will not soon forget.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

First Dose Helped.

North Plainfield, July 15th, 1896.—"Several years ago I took Hood's Sarsaparilla after having the grip, and my health was benefitted almost from the first dose."—B. D. F. Randolph, 132 Grove street. Hood's pills are easy to take.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and state of extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing buisness during the spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adopted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

[COPYRIGHTED, 1894.]

princess, it might be; who knew? That family had the wealth required, but the Sarazines Beauxlieux name and blood was the older and the nobler. And she smiled unconsciously and sweetly on the girl whose forwardness had of late needed repression, and had made the duchess doubt her wisdom in taking the three low-born children into her life through pity for Beauxlieux' solitude at a time when the safety of what was left to them lay in being forgotten. And taking from her jewel box a thread of gold holding a heart of pearls, she hung it on the girl's neck, so that no one might fail of happiness on the day that Beauxlieux, even though it were but fanciful vision, with no tangible reality, came to his rights as the first peer of France.

CHAPTER IV.

Beauxlieux was walking late that night on the stone terrace flooded with moonlight. On one side the sea, not far away, swelled like the curve of some silver shield and cast its own luster back upon the sky and filled the night with the soft music of its murmur. On the other side he saw the old chateau, covered with vines, full of deep-set shadows.

"Voyez vous, sondre au flanc de la colline Ces murs, ces jours, cette vaste ruine?"

he repeated as he walked.

"Aux temps jadis ces une bruyante cour
Retentissait de noce ce muet sejour,
Il fut peuplé de heroes et de belles,
Il entendit aux nobles demoiselles
Les chevaliers chanter des lois d'amour."

And just then he saw two shadows hurrying down the arcade of the long disused chapel cloister, disused, since, when she had reorganized her household on the basis of comparative poverty, the duchess had suffered the abbe to go accepting in his stead the offices of the village priest. "Ah, well," Beauxlieux said, a gentle smile following the shadows, "the love of the noble demoiselle and the chevalier is no better worth than the love of Pierre and Victorine. And this may help to strike the balance with all that other, the loves, the luxury of that bruyante cour. Can it take less than the life time of centuries of Beauxlieux to restore to the people all of which that bruyante cour, and such as that, has robbed them?"

For he had already another point of view than that of his mother, who, believing it the duty of nobles to hold their people in charge and provide for their happiness, was confident that the Beauxlieux could never have done otherwise. And he went back to his thoughts, which were now full of somber feeling and now of joyous hope.

While at his studies in Paris Beauxlieux had penetrated the hidden side of life; he had seen sights that made him shudder again as he spoke of them to Jean. And in recalling these journeys with M. Etienne as far as the Caucasus, he forgot the palaces, the galeries, the lovely women, the stupendous fortifications, the grim soldiery, all he had seen, except the squalor, the crime, the poverty. He was going back to Paris now to finish his medical studies; he would write every day to Jean, he would see Pierre frequently enough—but Pierre's outlook on life was already totally at variance with his and Jean's. Moreover, Pierre meant to be a money maker; and their contention was to destroy money. "It is the first evil," he said, as he walked looking across the lawn, that long age had been filled in where once the moat gathered its waters, and, into the edge of the overgrown park where a hare bounded across the open space. And suddenly something smote his vision like a blaze of glory, and was gone again, shining, shapeless, a moonbeam cleaving the foam wreath of a cascade, an apparition of glittering mist, a white ghost of the old magnificences come back to look upon the scene with him. For a moment the thought flashed on him that it was some masquerading play of Victorine's, and then it had vanished so instantly, that it knew it for an illusion of his eyes, of his brain, tired with thinking and caring and sorrowing for sorrows he could not heal. And so he left the night and moonlight, and the cold unquiet sea, and went to his slumbers.

"AND IT WAS WE WHO MADE THEM SO."

There had been a brief season of gayety in the first year after Beauxlieux' majority, when Pierre, who reported himself as doing finely, came home to marry Victorine, whose hand he had asked of the duchess, a wedding which took a great load off the mind of Olympe, since she knew the wiles of Victorine, and the charm of being Duchess des Sarazines Beauxlieux, even in a republic, where it might be little more than being a duchess of rag fair. She had not chanced to hear Pierre say to Victorine that night in the wood: "I will make you Duchess des Beaulieux yet!"

More than once in the two years' time, Beauxlieux had run down to the chateau for a sight of his mother, for a fresh trip with Jean, no one knew where, but from which he came back with an air, one could not declare were it more of sadness or of proud determination. "I have been eating black bread," he would say in answer to his mother's inquiry. "I have been among my brothers. There is so much to do. They have not only to be helped, they have first to be taught that they need the help. They are in the dark; they do not even grope; they do not know that there is any light. They suffer so. They are so patient. Some of them, my mother, seem like beasts of the field. And it is we who have made them so'" he cried, springing to his feet. "It is the weight of our splendor that has crushed them into earth."

"Our splendor!" said his mother, bitterly.

"The splendor," with a wild gesture, "that, thank God, is ours no more!"

"My child! Beauxlieux!"

"Sometimes," he said, "when I am with them, my heart swells as if it would burst. I feel the very singing of the poor blood in their veins. It would not be so poor had mine not been too rich! We have trodden them down so long, they have been so headed, so outraged, so cowed, so starved, their souls impoverished as their bodies—my God! We have lived on their labor, our wealth is their sweat, our thrones are planted on their slaughter! Often when I have seen the great carriages driven along the Bois, the high stepping horses in their golden harnesses, the women, rosy, round, their silks overflowing like petals of great flowers, the sight of them has made me tremble, I have felt the wheels of those carriages rolling through blood!"

She listened; but she hardly understood him. She feared; but he half imbued her with his feeling. She doubted if he were not possessed of a sacred fury. And while she was sure that her son—Beauxlieux—could not be otherwise than right, yet a great melancholy oppressed her, as if for the first time she saw thrones shake and the old order of things go by. "Oh, what shall we do with him, M. Etienne?" she cried when he had gone.

"Nothing," said M. Etienne, "the good God has him in hand."

Sometimes when Beauxlieux came home, he had strange tales of his experience in the prisons, where he had gained permission to practice and to study. Sometimes he had nothing at all to say, as if words fell short of power. Once, in contrast to all this, he brought his mother the most charming Parisian costume, the daintiest hat and mantle. It made her feel herself a woman of the world again when she put them on. "You look like all the rest of them!" said Beauxlieux, "only a thousand times lovelier than any of them! You shall go up with me and see the new Paris. You get into a rut living in solitude, like the rest of the underground people. You shall go to the opera again; you shall go to the Bon Marche."

"The extravagance, Beauxlieux! No, no, I do not wish to go."

"Reason the more that you should go. And as for the expense, if money does not grow on bushes now, yet I have all we need. And, my first duty being to you, my mother, there will still be that which will suffice for the new Crusade, in saving those who are in this day the sepulchre of Christ, in carrying succor to how many of the sad and sorry!"

It had plainly become a passion with him, this care for the spirits in prison not only behind iron grates, but in the bonds of rude flesh. His mother could not explain why the whole thing gave her such vague uneasiness. She turned for comfort, as usual, to M. Etienne. "It is time that he ranged himself, that I found for him some young girl with a sufficient dot," her thoughts summoning up an array of possible and impossible young princesses.

"But my people, my friends, are gone. The Chevalier St. Malo died last year, Mortignat is imbecile. I doubt if there is one left in the world who knows that the Duchess des Sarazines Beauxlieux lives! And he begins to have money. The bourgeois spirit of the time will seize him if we do not beware. Is it that it is the habit of all young men, playing, as he does, at a profession, so soon to arrive at wealth?"

"I—I do not know," stammered M. Etienne. "We—may be sure—"

The duchess looked at him in surprise. Sure of what? Was M. Etienne disturbed that Beauxlieux found money easily? Of course whatever a Sarazines Beauxlieux attempted, he would do as well as the best. Had not even poor little Pierre made money?

"What is it, monsieur? You, also, you a physician, you should know."

"I have always had sufficient, madame," said M. Etienne, with an air of cold restraint quite foreign to him, and leaving her with an abrupt bow, as if he heard some one speaking without.

He paused in the great hall to wipe his forehead. What he did know very well was that no young physician could bring home to his mother, from time to time, Worth costumes, hothouse luxuries, costly wines, or a pony carriage to take the air, even though he denied himself everything as Beauxlieux did, and gave them to her because, sensible that they were as much to her after long

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

Convention To Be Held Not Later Than Sept. 2.

THE GO-SLOW POLICY ADOPTED

National Committee To Meet at Indianapolis on August 7 To Decide on the Place for the Convention—Outcome of Chicago Conference.

Chicago, July 25.—The sound money democratic conference finished its work providing for the selection of a national committee of one from each state in sympathy with the movement to meet August 7 at Indianapolis to issue a formal call for a national convention not later than September 2 and entrusted an executive committee with the work of organizing state meetings. The committee of one from each of the states represented at the conference met to agree on a report as to details and remained in session at the Auditorium hotel three hours. The following report of the committee was presented and adopted without any dissenting voice: "Resolved, that in view of the revolutionary actions of the recent Chicago convention, its repudiation of all democratic platform and principles and its condemnation of the national democratic administration. "Resolved, that it is the sense of this conference, composed of democrats from the states of Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Missouri, Michigan, Texas, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska, that a thoroughly sound and patriotic declaration of democratic principles are enunciated, and that candidates for president and vice-president in accord therewith be nominated. Resolved, that the democrats in the several states who are in sympathy with this recommendation and unalterably opposed to the declaration and tendencies of the Chicago platform, be requested to arrange for the selection of a member of a national democratic committee. Resolved, that the national committee thus selected meet at Indianapolis on Friday, Aug. 7, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of issuing a formal call for a national democratic convention to be held not later than Sept. 2, at such a place and to be constituted and convened in such manner as said national committee may determine." In so far as the conference decided not to issue and sign the convention call at once and to test the strength of the movement by holding state mass meetings the go-slow policy advocated by Senator Vilas was sustained. The object of the committee and the postponement of the call until August 7 is to give the convention representative authority and to hear from more states in the meantime, so that everything could be done with party regularity and avoid the accusation of silver democrats that the unathorized members of the conference were "running things."

Seaman Brown Probably Insane.

Halifax, N. S., July 25.—The testimony elicited at the magistrate's inquiry into the triple murders on board the barkentine Herbert Fuller seems to indicate that the seaman, Brown, who is suspected of the crimes, is mentally deranged. Some four years ago he shot a man through the ear in Rotterdam, Holland, while laboring under the hallucination that he was an enemy who desired to take his life and was discharged on the ground that he was insane.

Trolley Company Enjoined.

Hartford, July 25.—The board of street commissioners yesterday sued out an injunction against the Hartford street railway company, restraining it from digging up New Park avenue to lay a new track that is to form the connecting link with the trolley road from New Britain into this city, now under injunction. The injunction was granted by Recorder McManus of the city court, under penalty of $15,000.

Transfers of Connecticut Priests.

Hartford, July 25.—Bishop Tierney has made the following transfers of priests: Rev. W. Barry from Wallingford to Norwalk, and Rev. E. L. Sullivan from Norwalk to Wallingford. Bishop Tierney warns people against a man posing as a priest and calling himself Harrington, who is collecting funds for an institution in Ireland. This, the bishop says, is without authority.

Pardon of Irish Convicts.

London, July 25.—A. J. Balfour, government leader in the house of commons, replying to a question in the house, said that the time had not yet arrived to consider the matter of advising the queen to pardon the Irish prisoners convicted of treason. The suggestion was made that her majesty grant a pardon to such convicts upon the sixtieth anniversary of her accession to the throne.

No More Racing at Narragansett Park.

Providence, July 25.—The announcement is made that there will be no more running races at Narragansett park. J. M. Crosby of Boston had a lease of the track and held several meetings. The decision was reached because of the refusal of the New York Jockey club to grant a license.

Ancients Leave Queenstown.

Queenstown, July 25.—The steamship Servia, with the members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company of Boston, proceeded from this port yesterday for Boston. The artillerymen repeated their expressions of pleasure at the warmth of their reception in England.

ADVANCE IN PRICES

Values Have Materially Recovered Since the 1893 Panic.

INDUSTRIAL SITUATION DEPRESSED

State of Trade for the Time Being Is Unsatisfactory—Bank Clearings the Largest Since 1892—Shoe Factories Busy—Iron and Steel.

New York, July 25.—Bradstreet's review of the state of trade for the week just closing to-day says: Telegraphic and mail advices from commercial and industrial centres indicate a somewhat unsatisfactory state of trade for the time being. Jobbers and retail houses show still further caution in the matter of securing supplies, buying for actual needs to a degree not heretofore reported. The general money market is dull, due not only to caution on the part of banks in discounting, but to a falling off in demand. The favorable feature in Chicago's trade situation is moderately increased orders for dry goods and hardware; almost every other line is quiet. Omaha's clothing trade is brisk. Favorable advices come from Baltimore, where orders in general lines are fairly satisfactory and the volume of business is larger than in the like portion of 1895, and from Galveston, where business generally promises improvement.

Comparison of Prices.

The regular quarterly comparison of prices of 108 staple products, produce, etc., for five years, makes it plain that values have materially recovered from the depression reached since the panic of 1893. Compared with July 1, 1894, when trade was generally depressed, there are forty increases in quotations on July 1 this year, about one-quarter being agricultural products, notably wheat, cotton and sugar. Other advances are for iron, steel, coal, hides, brick, glass, drugs and chemicals. Contrasted with July 1, 1895, at which time there was a general advance in demand and quotations, prices on July 1 this year show 32 increases; contrasted with July 1, 1893, 18 out of 108 items for which prics are given show advances to-day, notably drugs, chemicals, hides, copper, petroleum, hay, flour and rice. Compared with July 1, 1892, when general trade was prosperous, 23 quotations appear higher, including most of those last named.

The Industrial Situation.

The industrial situation is somewhat depressed, particularly in iron and steel, prices for most varieties of which, notably southern pig iron, are shaded. The encouraging feature in iron and steel is the extent to which stacks have blown out. There is an increase in the number of striking employes in several lines, but the new scale of wages asked by the iron and steel workers has been largely acceded to. Production is materially curtailed among manufacturers of woolens and cotton, as heretofore, and in locomotives, hardware, silver, jewelry and lumber industries. Shoe factories are busy, mostly on old orders. Eastern wool dealers report no demand, and some leading houses refuse to increase stocks either by purchase or consignment. The principal activity in the dry goods trade appears to consist of preparations to show fall goods.

Bank Clearings.

Bank clearings throughout the United States aggregate $989,000,000 this week, about 5 per cent. more than last week, and 7 per cent. more than in the corresponding week one year ago. The contrast with the like week in July in 1894, when business was extremely depressed, is more marked, showing an increase of 28 per cent., and as compared with the like week in 1893, this week's total shows an increase of 11 per cent. Contrasted with the corresponding total in 1892, bank clearings for the past six business days are smaller by only a fraction of 1 per cent. The noteworthy advances in quotations this week are for wheat, flour, oats, cotton and petroleum, while decreases are shown in Indian corn, pork, lard, coffee, sugar and print cloths. Business failures for the week number 280 throughout the United States, against 255 last week, 239 in the week a year ago and 237 in the week two years ago.

French Steamers to Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 25.—The French Compagnie General Transatlantique, which owns the line of steamers between New York and Havre, has arranged to establish a regular line between this port and Marseilles. The new line will compete for all the central Mediterranean trade, and also the African ports of Algiers, Tunis and Alexandria.

Yacht Alcedo at Montreal.

Montreal, July 25.—The yacht Alcedo, the property of George W. Childs Drexel, the proprietor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, has arrived in this port. Mr. and Mrs. Drexel will spend the summer cruising in the gulf of St. Lawrence and along the Maine coast. The Misses Biddles are on board as guests.

Missionary Baird Goes to Bitlis.

Constantinople, July 25.—The Rev. Mr. Baird has been furnished with a passport to Bitlis, whither he goes as successor to the American missionary, the Rev. George P. Knapp, who was expelled, having been accused by the porte of encouraging seditious movements among the Armenians.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Charles H. Angleman, of West Front street, returned today after a bicycle trip to Bedminster.

Mrs. Whitney Frazee, of West Fifth street, is riding a new Rugby purchased from W. H. Rogers.

R. H. McCullough and John P. Emmons have purchased Richmond wheels from H. E. Rider, the North avenue bicycle dealer.

E. Maxwell Honeyman, of Duer street, and his cousin, Fred Zandt, of Jamesburg, who is visiting him, started on a cycling trip to Jamesburg this morning.

A ten-mile match road race will take place this afternoon on Park avenue, between the Park Avenue Baptist church and Pumptown, starting at 5:30 o'clock. The three riders in the race are John Scott, Charles Shelton and Seinous Springs, all colored men.

A shooting match at live birds is being arranged between Frank Class, the crack wing shot of Morristown, who claims the championship of New Jersey, and Capt. John L. Brewer. They met last year, Class winning with his handicap of three. The provisions of the match are that it shall be at 100 live birds for $200 a side to take place at Morristown within two weeks of signing articles.

"That time-honored yarn," says a weary rider, "about building a board track between the rails of a railroad and riding a mile in one minute, paced by a locomotive, has again appeared. A St. Louis rider of the name of E. E. Anderson is the present aspirant for the honor. The same story has now done duty for three years, and has given many riders and manufacturers considerable notoriety, notwithstanding the fact that railroad officers ridicule the idea of permitting any such attempt."

The Pennsylvania railroad folk have been investigating the problem of bicycle transportation, and drawings have been made on the basis of a device originated by Sterling Elliott, President of the L. A. W. This device consists of two stout iron hooks covered with rubber tubing which are placed in the roof of the car. The machines are hung from the rims of the wheels, and a clamping arrangement prevents the machine from becoming detached. Fourteen sets of these hooks can be placed in the ordinary baggage car, and the company, as an experiment, is to equip several cars with them. When shipping their bicycles in that way riders will have to remove the lamps from the wheels.

AROUND THE BASES.

There will be an exciting baseball game at Flemington this afternoon when the Y. M. C. A. nine of this city will attempt to out bat, out field and out general the crack team of that place. The Y. M. C. A. boys defeated the Flemington's in this city, and hope to continue the same story at Flemington.

Tom Kellar, of the U. S. C. Co., was at one time a baseball player, "and a good one, too." Tom recently played first base for the "Old Crescents," and he appeared on the diamond in a uniform of that club, which had done service several years ago, and on his left hand was a mitt that caught the liners 15 years ago. The local paper stated that Tom acted like a real small boy, and his coaching was worth going miles to hear. Yes, we will wager that the price of admission was nothing when one got a couple of hours of Tee Kay's coaching a baseball team of old timers. Half the time he would be calling out: "Lost bird," "Next man get your gun," when a batter struck out. The score showed that Tom did not steal a base during the game (too honest); but he was at bat three times, hit the ball once, never made a score, but had seven put outs and one assist, and only one error was charged up to him.—Sporting life.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary S ibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

W. E. Brock's pacer will attempt to lower twenty-six this afternoon at the Driving Park.

Bradley Smalley, of Netherwood, is one of the judges at the Driving Park, and a first-class, impartial one he is. too.

Charles C. Brower, of Park avenue, shipped the great trotter "Sergeant," 2:20½, to Orange county, N. Y., today, to follow the circuit.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

James Stryker and Arthur Stryker, of the West End, are spending the day fishing at Boynton Beach.

GOLF.

The team of six golf players from the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club went to New Brunswick this afternoon to play a match with a team from the New Brunswick Golf Club.

Frightened By the Trolley.

A horse attached to a farm wagon from over the mountain became frightened at a trolley car on East Front street yesterday afternoon. In its fright the animal turned too short a curve and broke a shaft and one of the front wheels.

Wyatt Barnes, of Norwood avenue, is home after a short stay at Jersey City.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Brown, of Dunellen, were the guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Brown, of East Fourth street.

Harry Wharton and family, of this city, left town this morning for New York State, where they will spend their vacation.

—Crane & Clark, hatters and furnishers, 120 West Front street, have reduced prices on all summer goods about one-third.

Peculiar Election Custom.

There is a strange custom attendant upon local elections, which has existed in Brown township, Delaware county, O., for the last 30 years. It is that of eating 40 dozen hard-boiled eggs on election night at the expense of the successful candidates. Neither the bill of fare nor the number of eggs is ever varied. When the count is finished, a committee having been selected to secure the eggs and boil them, they are passed around and everybody eats in the utmost good fellowship. Only one man ever dared to brave popular sentiment and refused to pay his share of the expense. He had been elected by a large majority, but was defeated at the next election for no other reason than his want of respect for the custom. No one knows how the custom originated.

A Dog with a Wooden Leg

Did you ever hear of a dog having a wooden leg? asks a writer in the New Unity. I know a man near where I live who had a small dog, one of whose front legs was crushed by a wagon wheel. Being somewhat of a surgeon his master carefully amputated the crushed leg, and when the wound had healed provided the dog with a light and strong wooden leg. In the course of time the little dog, which is a very intelligent animal, became aware that he could rest his weight upon the wooden leg and use it for all ordinary purposes. In walking or trotting the dog always uses his artificial limb, but if he has occasion to do any fast running or leaping he will gracefully hold up the wooden leg and depend solely upon the other three for the service required.

Has a Shark for a Pet.

G. W. Fife, of Tacoma, Wash., has a curious pet tied up to his boat house by a chain cable. The collar is not passed around the pet's neck, as might be supposed, but is about its tail. Mr. Fife was on the bay off Tacoma in a boat when he saw a shark, and he harpooned it and towed it to the pier. The shark was not seriously injured, so he passed the collar around its tail, fastening the chain to the pier. The creature is now feeding heartily, according to the Sportsmen's Review, and seems accustomed to its stern fastening.

THE NERVES IN SUMMER.

Tired Men and Women are Made Well Again by Paine's Celery Compound.

Everything out of doors, from grass to sky, urges tired men and women to think of health.

The listless, worked-out system naturally looks to days like these to undo the mischief done to the nerves and brain by the long grind of the year past. Thousands of tired eyes brighten at the thought of rest and recuperation.

But any thinking person must feel how powerless a few days' outing or a paltry, short vacation is against the steady drain on strength and vitality that has been going on so long.

Only a positive, downright invigorator and purifier can arouse the body out of its bad habit of poor health.

Paine's celery compound will do what a vacation is powerless to do.

It will build up the exhausted, nervous organization, give tone to the entire digestive system, and assist it to fill the body with fresh life-blood, abundant and rich.

Paine's celery compound confidently cures nervous diseases by overcoming the faulty nutrition of these overexerted parts. It attacks rheumatism, neuralgia, and blood impurities in the same profound manner; rouses the excretory organs to sweep out the annoying bad humors, and thoroughly rids the body of the last trace of impurity.

This extraordinary remedy is the one means accounted sufficiently effective by physicians of wide practice to be relied on in cases of debility arising from whatever cause. It is the only remedy prepared under the eyes of the medical profession and in strict accordance with the directions of a physician of acknowledged ability.

Paine's celery compound was first used and prescribed by no less eminent a man than America's greatest physician, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of the Dartmouth Medical School.

No ordinary help, no well-meaning but unprofessional concoction, sarsaparilla or blood purifier could do what Paine's celery compound is able to accomplish; cure men and women of such serious diseases as kidney troubles, liver complaint, dyspepsia, or permanently drive away — and there's the point that no sufferer should lose sight of — permanently drive out of the system, rheumatism, neuralgia, and all skin affections.

Nerves and brain can be worked out. This is the condition of thousands of exhausted nervous systems that have been almost worked to death in schools, counting rooms, factories and stores. Shaky nerves, flabby muscles, muddy complexions, and the general appearance of weariness and pain tell the story of exhaustion. Persistent headaches go with nervous debility. The terrible throbbing of the heart comes from a wretched condition of the nervous system. Muscular rheumatism those dizzy spells, and that sense of weight on top of the head mean failing vigor.

The sure way to get back to perfect health of body and brain is to regulate and nourish the nerves by means of Paine's celery compound. It is a searching cure for all diseases that indicate vitiated blood. It builds up the stength; replaces used-up parts by new, vigorous tissues; regulates the hearts action, and finally arouses the excretory organs—the kidneys, especially, upon whose vigilant activity depends the health and purity of the system.

Nothing so quickly builds up the tired system as this great invigorator and nerve regulator. Public opinion in the large cities throughout the country shows the reliance that thoughtful men and women have come to place upon Paine's celery compound when the body needs building up and strength recruiting. Men in official positions in nearly every department of the public service have gone out of their way to send letters of thanks and allowed their names and letters to vouch for this great remedy.

Paine's celery compound accomplishes remarkable results because it works intelligently with a definite aim always in sight of purifying the blood, getting the wasted system again nourished and the vital organs working with ease and regularity.

No "Flim Flam" Game

To Be Worked on Early Purchasers of

The Spalding Bicycle

After the adoption of our 1896 model and a careful estimate of the cost of manufacture, we placed the price on the Spalding Bicycle at $100. The price is now $100 and will continue at $100 throughout the season, no matter what other manufacturers may do.

We don't believe it is fair, honest or good business policy to sell a standard article like the Spalding Bicycle at one price in May and reduce its value in June by a material reduction in price. As a matter of common fairness to early purchasers of Spalding Bicycles and as an evidence of good faith on our part we will, in case of reduction in price during the season, send a rebate check to every purchaser of a Spalding Bicycle of the amount of any such reduction that may be made by us during the season This is our meaning of a

BEATEN AT FLEMINGTON

BY THE AID OF THE UMPIRE THE Y. M. C. A. BOYS DEFEATED.

The Flemingtons Were Favored All the Way Through, and the Plainfielders Had a Hard Row to Hoe.

The nine stalwart young men composing the Y. M. C. A. ball team who journeyed to Flemington on Saturday to play a return game with the team at that place, had an experience which they will not forget in a long time. When the writer says that the umpire helped materially to win the game for the home team, everybody will say "It's the same old story." But it's a fact, nevertheless, and the Y. M. C. A. team did not have a ghost of a show. All decisions were given against them, thus robbing the game of a great deal of pleasure. A sure double play made by the visitors, and one which even a majority of those present conceded, was not given to the Plainfield boys. This incensed them so that they threatened to leave the field. John McLaughlin pitched for the visitors, and after the first inning he put the ball right over the plate, but the umpire would give him no credit for it, and ball after ball was called. Under ordinary circumstances the visitors would have given the Hunterdon boys a lively chase, and in fact the latter had no walkover. Warren McLaughlin, a brother of John McLaughlin, was in the box for the Flemingtons and he pitched good ball. The home team imported Rothfuss, the Newark professional, for the occasion, and he secured four of the eight hits. There is no doubt but that Flemington idolizes her ball team, but they do so at a great sacrifice to the national game. Some day they will learn this to their sorrow, for they do not give visiting teams an impartial show. It is true that the defeat they received at Plainfield was humiliating, and they were determined to win Saturday's game at any rate.

The Plainfield boys put up a good game and played the best they could under the circumstances. Burt went in the box in the eighth inning and the home team could do nothing with him. It appears now that it would have been better if he had pitched the entire game.

The day was perfect and the fair sex turned out in large numbers, in fact there was a big crowd present, who in the main felt as though the visitors were being unfairly treated. Townley and Symons in the field had seven chances between them and they accepted them in good shape.

The rest of the team played steady ball and should have won the game. The third game between these teams will be played later on, and if the Hunterdon county aggregation is not beaten there will be a good reason for it. One of those who accompanied the team Saturday was Freeman Pangborn, the ball crank. During the latter part of the game he was missed, but he showed up at the depot with a large handsome bouquet, which was presented to him by his lady friends. Below will be found the score in full:

WATSON CHANGES AGAIN

NOW HE WANTS TO RETRACT HIS PLEA OF GUILTY.

He Now Wishes to Plead Not Guilty, But Judge DeMeza Will Consider the Matter—Watson Gives No Reason for Changing.

There was an unexpected development in the Michael Watson illegal liquor selling case this morning that quite astonished the court and the police. Of course, everybody was surprised last week when he retracted his plea of not guilty and decided to plead guilty.

It was evidently too much for him and he came in the city court this morning and calmly remarked that he wanted to change his plea again. City Judge DeMeza looked at him in an incredulous way as if he did not believe his senses while Sergeant Kiely nearly fell off his chair with surprise. Watson was told to appear at the Judge's office at the close of court. He was waiting when the Judge appeared at his office. "Do you want to change your plea of guilty to not guilty?" asked the Judge.

Watson hesitated and then said "yes." He had nothing more to say, however, and gave no reasons for his sudden change. After considering the question Judge DeMeza decided to leave the matter in abeyance until August 10th, when he would give his decision as to whether this change would be allowed. If it is allowed the trial will probably be held over until after the return of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh.

Horse Died on the Road.

Mr. and Mrs. James Whalen, of Brook avenue, took a party of friends to Boynton Beach yesterday, and spent the day. Everything passed off pleasantly until the party were coming through Westfield on their way home when the driver noticed that one of the horses was sick. The animal grew rapidly worse and one of the party was sent for a veterinary surgeon. After a vain search, a man of the party mounted a horse and went to Elizabeth for a surgeon. He succeeded in finding one but by the time they reached the scene, the horse was dead. The party then proceeded home with three horses. The dead animal belonged to Street Commissioner William Emmons, of the borough.

Practicing on the Golf Grounds.

A select few of the Plainfield Golf Club amused themselves by playing on their grounds, near F. A. Barnaby's residence on Plainfield avenue, Saturday afternoon. Among those who took part in the sport were: George H. Chapman, Harry Mason, O. T. Waring, Jr., Edward Van Buren, William Kaufman, ex Mayor William L. Saunders, W. H. Smith, W. D. Miller, Harry Stockton and Messrs. Reinhart and Talmadge Edward Barry, who has charge of the grounds, has been untiring in his efforts to improve them, so that today they rank among the best kept grounds in the State.

Quarterly Meeting Held.

A quarterly meeting of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church was held yesterday. In the afternoon the sermon was preached by Rev. F. Sturges, and in the evening Mrs. Mary Holt, an evangelist from Bound Brook, addressed an audience that filled the edifice to the doors. The Lord's Supper was celebrated at the evening service.

A Snake Story.

Wm. Claassen and Ed Galbraith, of the West End, were blackberrying Saturday morning near Percy Ohl's property at the end of Central avenue, when they discovered a four-foot snake in close proximity to them, and they soon killed the reptile. They have had the skin stuffed as a memento of the occasion.

At the Westfield Fresh Air Camp.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church, of this city, will have charge of the meeting at the Fresh Air Camp at Westfield this evening. John V. Beekman, Jr., will act as leader, and quite a number expect to attend. Some will go by train and some on their wheels.

To Attend Divine Services.

Stone Square Lodge, F. and A. M., will attend divine services at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, Wednesday evening, at which time Rev. P. S. Gibson, the pastor, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion.

Looking to the Equines' Welfare.

Ex-Borough Chief Marshal Pangborn went to Stelton Saturday on an order from the S. P. C. A. to ascertain the condition of teams hauling stone there from quarries in North Plainfield and Dunellen.

New Freighthouse Not Opened.

The new freighthouse was not open for business this morning. The delay was caused by Supt. Peddle, of the Central, ordering that some alterations be made. The freighthouse will probably be opened next Monday.

BABIES CAMP OPENED.

A PLACE FOR THE RECUPERATION OF PRATTLING YOUNGSTERS.

The Camp is Not an Elaborate Affair But Will Serve For All Practical Purposes—Those at the Opening Tea.

Far above Plainfield on the summit of the first mountain of the Watchung Mountains, Saturday afternoon, waved a white flag on which was the familiar cross of the King's Daughters in red. The flag was hoisted to the top of a long bark-covered flagpole, which stood close by the well-known Johnston drive that runs the entire length of the First Mountain. Back of the clearing where the flagpole stood, and across the road, there was a little house half-hidden by the trees that surrounded it on all sides. It was a small wooden structure of simple design with a shingled roof and seemed almost lost in the wilderness in which it was placed.

It was a lively place last Saturday afternoon, despite its isolated location, for it is the camp for sick babies, gotten up by the local union of King's Daughter's, and on Saturday afternoon the opening reception was held. Friday was the day set for the opening, but the heavy rain storm necessitated its postponement.

On Saturday there was a misunderstanding about the stages, (not, however, on the part of the ladies,) so some of the would-be visitors were kept away, but those that did come in the stages that did run, in carrriages and on bicyeles, and there were quite a number that did, found the camp a most delightful place located on one of the choicest parts of the mountain with a magnificent view equal to that from any part of the Watchung Mountains.

Here, Miss Caroline Rendall, the city nurse supported by the King's Daughters of this city, will bring the sick babies of this city early every morning, look after them during the day and take them home at nightfall greatly refreshed by a day of mountain air. The children will be taken at the request of the local physicians and the King's Daughters will furnish the transportation.

The house, which is to be the headquarters of this camp, is the gratuitous work of Plainfield men, who gave up their Saturday afternoons to erect this substantial little structure, the material for which was also donated. It is about thirty feet long by twenty feet broad and includes only one room. The walls are the plain boards and the bare rafters over head give it a rustic appearance that is carried out on the little veranda which is surrounded by a regular rustic railing. At one end of the room is a great wide rustic fireplace, the gift of Charles W. McCutchen, built out of rough stone in a most artistic manner.

In the house, Miss Rendall will prepare the lunch for her little charges and cots will also be provided here for those who are to ill to run around. In another year, it is hoped to enlarge the camp and keep children there for several weeks.

Some one, evidently one of the more witty of the builders, has arranged a curiousity that was exhibited to the visitors Saturday. In was in an old cage hung close by the chimney and the inscription beneath it read. "A very rare specimen of Bat (Pholum Withit) found in this chimney. Please approach it carefully in order not to frighten it." And as the visitor carefully peeped in he or she discovered a brick laying on the bottom of the cage.

This was not the only attraction Saturday, for the visitors were treated to delicious lemonade and wafers. Mrs. W. L. C. Glenny, president of the local union of King's Daughters, was present and had a general supervision over the affair. She was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Frank S. Martin, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, Mrs. Isaac N. Field Mrs. Francis C. Harder, Miss Lillian A. Force and Miss Mabel A. Woodruff.

The pretty flag that was visible from as far off as upper Park avenue, was the gift of Mrs. M. S. Simpson, wife of City Physician Simpson.

$25 was turned over to the King's Daughters Saturday afternoon, $22 of which was made at a fair given at the residence of William Barlow, on Prospect place, last week. There is now $127 in the Local Union treasury with all expenses paid but unless more funds are received that will soon disappear in paying running expenses of the camp.

FIRE IN A MASS OF RAGS

A LIVELY BLAZE FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT SATURDAY NIGHT.

Supposed to Have Started by Spontaneous Combustion—The Storehouse Burned to the Ground—The Loss Amounts to $1,000

The full moon was just rising over the hills of Staten Island Saturday evening when another light appeared to the northeast of the city. It came up quickly and in another moment the far-reaching notes of the fire gong sounded an alarm from box 28. Box 28 is located at Woodland and South avenues, but the fire was on Johnston avenue, near North avenue. It was the barn and house of Frank Haulenbeck and was blazing brightly when the first hose cart arrived. The fire started in the barn, which was all ablaze and had set fire to the house which joins the barn. Two streams were turned on the house and speedily extinguished the flames there, but the barn was not as easy.

Hollenbeck is a junk and rag dealer, who is in the business on an extensive scale, and he had twenty tons of rags in the barn. In these rags the fire is supposed to have started from a spontaneous combustion. The barn was a total wreck, but rags smouldered for sometime, and it was found necessary to thoroughly extinguish them.

The loss was about $1,000, none of which was covered by insurance. It was said that Hollenbeck had a box of money distroyed by the flames, but rumor was incorrect. He did miss a check for $150, however, but afterwards found it.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Hollenbeck, who rushed out of the house to give the alarm. She then remembered that her little child was in the blazing house. An unknown man, on hearing her screams, rushed into the house and brought out the child, unharmed by the flames.

A NEW BICYCLE THOROUGHFARE.

West Seventh Street Will Soon Be a Paradise for Cyclists.

While the residents of the East End have seen nothing of the steam roller for several weeks it has been hard at work nevertheless, and in a week Plainfield will have a thoroughfare that will even excel Park avenue. It is West Seventh street, and it has been put in an excellent condition from Park avenue nearly to Monroe avenue. After the top dressing of fine stone wears even, which it will do in about a week, the street will be as smooth as any floor. It is already a perfect paradise for bicyclists between Park and Plainfield avenues, and many cyclists take advantage of it.

ON TO PLAINFIELD.

Trolley Service to be Better in Elizabeth-Extension of One Line.

E. J. Field & Co., of New York, have purchased a large block of the Elizabeth Street Railway Company's shares, and will at once commence efforts to extend its line up Morris avenue, and will ask for a franchise to lay rails through Orchard street to Westfield avenue, and thence to Plainfield, passing through ElMora, Roselle, Cranford, Westfield, etc. The company is re capitalized, and will make many excellent improvements.—Contractor.

Prepairing For The Convention.

The Christian Endeaver '96 committee met at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Saturday evening and decided to call a meeting for Thursday evening at which time the president of the local union societies, and all committees in convention with the '96 convention, will meet the '96 committee and arrange plans for commencing aggressive work for the convention. The meeting will be held in Trinity Reformed Church.

Donations to the Fresh Air Fund.

Donations have been received for the Fresh Air Fund from Miss Lucy Budlong, Mrs. Pierret Mali, Townsend Rushmore, Mrs. Joseph Gavett, Miss Osborn, Theo. O. Gavett, Joseph Gavett, Jr., Harold Underhill, Mrs. Havens, Donalson Ryder, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Sr., Mrs. Geo. Staats, Mrs. H. Lawson. A large donation, the proceeds of a sale held by the Misses Osgood and Miss Barlow. Nimrod Horton and Charles Burns have rendered valuable service in painting the building.

A Male Choir.

As an experiment, the choir at the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening was composed only of young men. The plan will not be continued, however.

FRANK IS IN CHICAGO.

THE MISSING MAN'S WIFE HEARS FROM HIM BY LETTER.

He is Very Anxious to Return Home, and Writes to His Wife as Though His Mind Might be Somewhat Effected.

The whereabouts of John Frank, the carpenter, whose mysterious disappearance was recorded exclusively in The Daily Press recently, has been discovered, and it is believed that he will be back very soon.

Saturday evening Mrs. Frank rereceived a letter from her husband in which he states that he is located in West Chicago. He does not mention the circumstances which led him to leave his home, nor does he tell how he reached his destination.

A Daily Press representative called on Mrs. Frank this morning to ascertain whether she had received any tidings regarding her husband, and learned the above. Mrs. Frank has been under a terrible strain since her husband went away, and up till Saturday she believed that he was dead. She says that eight years ago he received a sunstroke and ever since he has had trouble with his head.

In speaking of the letter received on Saturday she said that he wrote as though his mind was not right. He stated that he wanted to come home, but was not sure as to whether his family wanted to see him. Mrs. Frank answered her husband's letter as soon as she received it, and urged him to come home. She thinks he will receive her letter today and will at once start for home. Mrs. Frank says this is the first time her husband has acted so strangely, and she cannot account for it except that his mind has been severely affected as stated above.

WAR FOR THE SOAP FAT MEN.

They Must Conform With the Ordinance or Else Look Out for the Police.

The soap fat men of Plainfield are soon to become the victims of the combined efforts of the police and the Board of Health officials unless they conform more closely to the city ordinances. One of their number, Theo. Glaser, has already been arrested and will be tried in a short time.

The trouble with Glaser was that he was careless and, according to Health Inspector Peter Weaver, dropped stray bones and fat about the street. Another reason for complaint is that he collects his materials in an open wagon instead of a closed one. The other dealers will be notified to use a top cavered wagon at once. Glaser's trial will come up in a few days.

Upset the Carriage.

Miss Cliff and Harry Wood, of Stanhope, this State, were the guests over Sunday of the Misses Smith, of West Front street. They drove to Plainfield with a horse and buggy. This morning they started for home, intending to reach their destination this evening. While driving on Front street the horse became frightened at a trolley car and upset the bugg. Miss Cliff was thrown out, but sustained no injury whatever. Mr Wood was also thrown out and received a few slight bruises. The horse ran a short distance and was caught by two men. The buggy was damaged considerable. The two have decided that they will remain in town until after the Midsummer Night's Festival. In the meantime the wagon will be repaired.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The cases of Sergeant against Hand; Rosenfield et als against Benner; and Linke against Evans have been adjourned for one week in Justice Newcorn's court, and a summons has been issued in the case of Burke against McIntyre, returnable August 3d.

No Light on a Bicycle.

Frank Smith was riding down Watchung avenue Saturday evening and didn't know his light was out, at least so he says, but Patrolman Myers noticed the fact and arrested him. This morning City Judge DeMeza stated that he would announce his decision next Saturday.

Liquor Case Adjourned.

The cases of Samuel Kline and Nathan Richmond, for illegal liquor selling, were adjourned to September 3, in the city court this morning to await the return of corporation Counsel Marsh. Lawyer Walter L. Hetfield represented both the defendents.

—The sale of the property at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Second street, was adjourned Saturday till Saturday, Sept. 5th. In the meantime if anyone wishes to purchase the property at private sale they can do so by seeing Charles H. Hand.

ROMANCE OF WESTFIELD

TWO BOYS INSPIRED BY YELLOW COVERED NOVELS STEAL A WHEEL.

Deputy Sheriff Russell Was the Victim of the Theft While Eating Peanuts and Watermelon—A Clever Capture Resulted

While the owner of the wheel was enjoying watermelon and peanuts two boys who had left Brooklyn to hunt Indians, captured the wheel and spirited it away to their camp in the woods at the western end of Eighth street.

The owner of the wheel was Deputy Sheriff Wallace Russell, of Westfield, and last Saturday night he rode over to the office of Justice E. R. Collins, far-famed in the bicycle lore of Westfield, on Prospect street, Westfield, and went in to see the Justice. He left his "White Flier" outside while he assisted the Justice and Constable John M. C. Marsh to make havoc on a watermelon and a bag of peanuts. But when the good things had disappeared Russell found that his wheel had disappeared also. The Justice did not know whether to call it a foul hit or a home run, but he decided to balk the thieves and the three officers of the law investigated. Somebody had seen two boys going down the street on a "White Flier," one on the seat and the other on the step, going towards Plainfield.

Then Sheriff Kyte's assistant hustled over to the telephone office, bemoaning the fact that he had to walk, and called up the police of Plainfield to whom he told his little tale. A particular point by which the wheel might be recognized was an electric light. Sergeant Kiely was in charge of the night squad when the message arrived and he proceeded to look out for the bicycle thieves. The Sergeant knew that two boys were camping in the woods out West Eighth street, and he visited their tent but found them absent. He placed a special officer from that neighborhood to watch the camp and returned later in the evening to find the two lads and a bicycle at the camp.

The wheel was stolen at about 10:30 o'clock and it was about 11:30 when the police visited the camp. The boys, Roland Lewis, and William Hanold, both sixteen years old and from Brooklyn, left their homes in search of adventure, expecting to kill a few Indians with their small calibre revolvers, and came here Saturday morning.

They established their camp and set up a little tent in which to sleep. They were not satisfied evidently with progress by the ordinary methods of the "knight of the road," but wanted something faster. The bicycle they selected was not exactly "built for two," but still they both could manage to ride it and it was far more comfartable than walking.

They made no resistance to the officer of the law, but gave up their guns and started for the lockup. Visions of long strings of convicts in striped suits, such as they had read of in their yellow-covered literature as "The Poisoned Gum Drop" or "The Candy Woman's Revenge" and similar tales, and of life imprisonment with hard labor, flashed through their minds and, as they marched along in the darkness, they wiped away the signs of weakness on their sleeves.

They were locked up and remained there until Justice Collins and his court arrived this morning. After a little delay the Justice decided it was time to call the game and asked City Judge DeMeza to share the grandstand with him while he umpired the game. The two lads were arraigned before Justice Collins and through Judge DeMeza waived examination and were held for the grand jury. The father of one of the boys was present, but decided not to furnish the required $300 bail at once, but to give the boys a lesson by allowing them to go to jail for a time.

King Bolt Broke.

While one of French's water wagons was passing through Elm place this morning the king bolt dropped out of position, allowing the front portion of the wagon to drop in the street. The horses are tame and no damage resulted. The wagon held a quantity of water and it was hard to raise. It was lifted, however, with the aid of heavy beams and a jack, and the trouble was soon remedied.

POPULISTS' MISTAKE

Bryan's Supporters Not Pleased with Their Work.

TEXAS MEN WILL NOT BOLT

National Committee Finishes Its Work—Mr. Bryan Deluged with Correspondence—Senator Jones in Conference at Lincoln.

St. Louis, July 27.—The nomination of Bryan late Saturday afternoon by the people's party after another day of turmoil has demonstrated what has been known here from the start, and that was that there were forces enough at work to insure Bryan's nomination at any time. Senator Jones, Gov. Stone, and Senator Stewart of Nevada are displeased over the turn that affairs have taken. They labored for a nomination or endorsement of the Chicago ticket. Senator Jones, as chairman of the democratic national committee, feels very much cut up over the situation, and Senator Stewart and other warm friends of Bryan declare with more than ordinary positiveness that the populists have mangled the Chicago ticket. There was just a show of a bolt a moment after Chairman Allen announced the vote which nominated Bryan. The Texas members were seen to pick up their hats with the intention of leaving the hall. Instantly they were surrounded by delegates from other states, and in two or three minutes they put down their hats again, and everything seemed harmonious. Ex-Gov. Gibbs was asked whether the Texas men would bolt the nomination, and he said: "No, there won't be any bolt, but Bryan has got to stand on our platform. If he does not stand on our platform, then Texas will have a separate set of electors who will vote for a candidate for president.""

National Committee.

St. Louis, July 27.—The populist national committee finished its work at an early hour Sunday morning. J. A. Edgerton of Nebraska was elected secretary and M. C. Rankin of Indiana treasurer. J. A. Sovereign of Arkansas, C. F. Taylor of Pennsylvania, H. W. Reed of Georgia, Frank Burkitt of Mississippi, G. F. Washburn of Massachusetts and J. W. Breidenthal of Kansas were selected for members of the executive committee. Mr. Burkitt resigned, and on his motion J. S. Dore of California was placed on the ticket in his place. Mr. Burkitt did this to give the Pacific coast representation on the executive committee. The committee adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

JONES AT LINCOLN.

The Arkansas Senator in Earnest Conference with Mr. Bryan.

Lincoln, Neb., July 27.—Senator Jones of Arkansas arrived in Lincoln last evening and was immediately driven to the residence of Mr. Bryan, where an earnest conference was held on subjects of much importance to the democratic and populistic parties. In spite of its importance as a political centre, having two candidates for the presidency—Mr. Bryan and Mr. Bentley, the prohibition-silver nominee—as citizens, Lincoln is a very quiet place these days. Mr. Bryan has been seen little by Lincoln people since he reached here Friday week. He spends most of his time in his library going over the mass of mail matter and the packages of telegrams delivered to his residence every day and dictating replies to his clerical assistants. Of these he has three, one a lady, and they each have their hands full in keeping up with the nominee's correspondence. So great has been the avalanche of written matter addressed to Mr. Bryan that he is practically swamped and many of the letters and telegrams that were sent immediately after his nomination have not yet been answered. The Bryan and Sewall headquarters at the Lincoln hotel are intended principally for the use of Mr. Bryan in receiving delegations and conferring with democratic managers. Mr. Bryan has used them two or three times only, but with the national silver and populist conventions added it is expected that he will be obliged to go there more frequently. A meeting of state central committee of the democratic party of Nebraska will be held in the Lincoln hotel in this city on July 30. Mr. Bryan has promised to be present.

Will Leave It to the People.

Senator Jones left Lincoln on a late train over the Missouri Pacific last night for his summer home. He wired Gov. Stone of Missouri to meet him at Jefferson City to-day. Just before leaving Senator Jones said he would leave it to the common sense of the people to right the nomination of Watson. No definite action, he said, would be taken at this time with regard to the acceptance or declination of the populist nomination by Mr. Byran. Senator Jones added that he thought the notification meeting in New York would take place August 10.

Quiet Sunday at Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 17.—As is his usual custom, the president remained at home all day. There were no callers. He did not attend the memorial exercises of the late W. E. Russell at Sandwich, as expected. It has been reported by several seamen that the yacht Albatross, with Senator Hill on board has been seen cruising off the coast of Marion. The senator has not landed at that place, however, nor has he visited President Cleveland.

Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Boston, July 27.—At a meeting of the democratic state central committee it was decided to hold the state convention on Sept. 24 in Music hall, this city.

JOSE MACEO IS DEAD.

Killed on the Field While Fighting for Cuban Freedom.

New York, July 27.—Gen. Calixto Garcia, commander of the patriot forces in eastern Cuba, writes to the Cuban delegate in this city under date of July 13 that Gen. Jose Maceo of the First army corps was killed on July 5 in the engagement at Lama del Gato. This engagement was a bloody one. The patriots occupied a very strong position on the Gato hill, and were attacked by the Spaniards under Cols. Alberti and Luis Varo del Rey. After an engagement of more than eight hours the Spaniards were compelled to retreat. They had 150 wounded to attend to, besides a considerable number of dead. The patriots lost Gen. Jose Maceo, Col. Cartagena, Dr. Pedro Echevarria, and seven others, and had forty-one wounded. "Jose Maceo," Gen. Garcia writes, "met with a glorious death. Regrettable as this is, our enthusiasm will not for a moment abate, nor will the power of the revolution diminish. Our friend will be remembered by his comrades with grief; by his soldiers with love and respect, and our country, once freed, will attach due honor to his name."

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

It Is Likely to Heal the Schisms and Revive Home Rule.

London, July 27.—The Irish national convention, which opens in Dublin on Sept. 1, is shaping toward a great historical gathering. Throughout Ireland and the populous centers of England and Scotland the nationalist societies are appointing delegates and discussing the probable platform of the convention with the heartiest enthusiasm. Advices from South Africa and Australia are like those from the United States and Canada. From every quarter of the globe where a nucleus of Irishmen can be found sufficient to form an association, delegates are coming. The convention will not only represent the mass of the Irish race, but will also have besides a working leverage of money towards the organization of a great United party. That the convention will heal existing schisms and regenerate home rule seems assured. Mr. Healy and his followers will be present at the convention as friends to its aims. Outside of the English press no one yet credits Mr. Redmond and his section with any desire or design to thwart this great national movement.

CHICAGO'S "HOLD-UPS."

One Attempt Unsuccessful — Another Yields $15 and a Gold Watch.

Chicago, July 27—Shortly after 8 o'clock Saturday night store hold-up No. 21 took place, when two young men entered the jewelry store of C. M. Robertson on North Clark street and asked to be shown several pieces of jewelry, which they endeavored to pocket. Mr. Robertson got the drop on his visitors and, locking the door to prevent their escape, held them at bay with a revolver until the police came to his assistance. At the police station the police claimed to recognize one of them as a tough character. Store hold-up No. 22 was successfully carried out an hour or so later when the "Long" and the "Short" combination entered the grocery store of James O'Reilly on Morgan street, and, while one man held a revolver to O'Reilly's head and robbed him of his gold watch, the other took $15 out of the money drawer, and then both men escaped in the darkness.

CATHOLIC SUMMER SCHOOL.

Programme for the Third Week of the Fifth Annual Session.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., July 27.—The third week of the fifth annual session of the Catholic summer school of America opened yesterday with pontifical high mass, Right Rev. John M. Farler, D. D., of New York, being the celebrant. The sermon was by Very Rev. William Byrne of Boston; subject, "God as Creator." The lectures for the coming week will be "History of English Literature from Chaucer to Spenceer," by Rev. Hugh T. Henry of Overbrook seminary; "Beginnings of Metaphysics," Rev. J. A. Doonans, S. J., Boston college, and the "Beginnings of Christian Art," by Prof. T. J. Shahan, D. D., of the Catholic university of Washington. The attendance is now greater than ever before, a large party arriving from New York Saturday evening.

THE SITUATION SERIOUS.

Views of a London Banker on Our Presidential Election.

London, July 27.—The Daily News to-day publishes a report of an interview with J. H. Tritton, a prominent London banker, regarding the chances of the election of the presidential candidates in the United States, in which Mr. Tritton says he considers it improbable that Bryan will be elected, but that the situation is one of the most serious character. Confidence, Mr. Tritton believes, will not be restored here until the United States congress shall have passed a resolution declaring that it is firmly determined to maintain a gold standard. Certainly, says Mr. Tritton, the national finances of America need to be overhauled. The country is suffering from a plethora of paper money.

TUP-HARRY'S STRATEGY.

How His Sheep Grew Fat at a Perplexed Neighbor's Expense.

In the west of England a hedge top is usually finished off with slates that project, and this is to prevent rabbits, even sheep, from overleaping them. In Cornwall, on the hedge top is a footpath beside a large deep cleft in the land, that converts itself into a torrent in wet weather. It is a common sight to see women, and children on their way to school, penciled against the sky walking on the hedge tops. So when certain hedges have thus been converted into footways, then a rail is often put across them to prevent horsemen from using them in like manner.

Anent sheep jumping hedges, a writer in Chambers' Journal tells a tale of a certain old rogue who went by the name of Tup-Harry. This is how he got his nickname. Harry was a small farmer, and he had a neighbor with better means and a better farm than his own. One very dry season Harry had come to the end of his grass for a flock of sheep he possessed. His neighbor had, however, got a fine field of mangel-wurzel. Harry looked over the hedge—a hedge furnished with outstanding slates—and greatly longed for these mangels for his sheep; but he did not relish running the risk of being caught taking them. So he went in the evening into his field, that was bare of grass, put his head against the hedge, bent his back and called: "Tup! Tup! Tup!" whereupon up ran his old ram, jumped on his back, went on to the hedge and over into the mangel field, and all the flock in Indian file scampered after him over the back of Harry. Very early in the morning the rogue went into the devastated mangel field, put his head against the hedge, bent his back, called "Tup! Tup! Tup!" and up came the ram, ran over his back on to the hedge and returned to the barren quarter again, followed in Indian file by all the flock. That was done several times and no signs appeared anywhere of the hedge being broken through, or of a padlocked gate having been opened. At last the farmer who was robbed hid himself one night, and saw the whole proceeding. Tup-Harry did not try that trick on again.

Finger-Nail Statistics.

The statistical man, who will tell you how many pounds of leather you will wear from your shoes in a lifetime, and how many tons of food you will eat, provided that you live to the Biblical limit of "threescore and ten," has just finished some odd statistics on finger-nail growth. He finds that the average human being cuts away about the one-thirty-second part of an inch of nail each week, or a little more than an inch and a half each year. He also finds that the average length of life the world over is 40 years, and that there are 1,300,000,000 miles of finger [illegible] in each generation.

Baby's Second Summer

is the time that tries all the care of the mother and all the skill of maternal management. Baby comfort comes from fat; fat babies have nothing to do but to sleep and grow.

If your baby does not seem to prosper, if he does not gain in weight, you must get more fat there. A few drops of each day will put on plumpness; fat outside, life inside, baby and mother both happy.

SCOTT'S Emulsion

Your baby can take and relish Scott's Emulsion as much in summer as in any other season.

Merit

Made and Merit Maintains the confidence of the people in Hood's Sarsaparilla. If a medicine cures you when you are sick; if it cures your neighbors and your friends when they are ailing; if it makes wonderful cures of many diseases everywhere, then beyond any question that medicine possesses merit. That is just the truth about Hood's Sarsaparilla. Prepared by a combination, proportion and process unknown to other medicines, it has curative powers peculiar to itself. We know it possesses great merit because it has Cures, not once or twice or a hundred times, but in thousands and thousands of cases. We know it cures, absolutely, permanently cures, when all others fail to do any good whatever.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is known to possess merit or the power to cure disease; it is known to be the best building-up medicine on earth; it is known to be honestly advertised, and for these reasons the people buy and take Hood's Sarsaparilla almost to the exclusion of other preparations. In fact, Merit Made and Merit Maintains the confidence of the people in

ARMES DIVORCE CASE.

Cause of the Sequestration of the Bellicose Washington Major's Property.

Washington, July 27.—Maj. George A. Armes, whose property was sequestrated Saturday by order of Judge Hagner because of his failure to comply with the order of the court directing him to pay alimony to his wife, who is suing him for divorce on the ground of cruelty, has been in trouble with the war department several times. He was court-martialed for insulting Gen. Hastings of Pennsylvania at President Harrison's inauguration. On the day of Gen. Schofield's retirement Armes was arrested, taken from his home and confined in the barracks for disrespect to Gen. Schofield, then acting secretary of war. Armes is now somewhere on the St. Lawrence, avoiding an order of commitment, and has written a violent letter to his son vilifying the attorneys in the divorce case. Upon this showing by counsel for Mrs. Armes and because of the inability of the court to enforce its order in any other way, Judge Hagner issued the order of sequestration and appointed Peyton Gordon as sequestrator, with power to take charge of Armes' property, valued at $250,000, collect and disburse rents, make sales, and pay the alimony awarded by the court. There have been but few cases of this sort in the United States. Meantime the suit for divorce is proceeding. Maj. Armes says he will not return to the jurisdiction of the court while the order of commitment for contempt of court stands against him.

THOS. A. JEROME DEAD.

Member of That Well Known Family Expires at Brighton, S. I.

Quarantine, S. I., July 27.—Thomas Atwater Jerome died at New Brighton, S. I., yesterday of acute gastritis in his 87th year. He belonged to the well known Jerome family was next to the oldest of a family of nine children. His brothers were the late Lawrence, Leonard and Addison C. Jerome, all well known club-men and men about town. Mr. Jerome had been in poor health for a year past, and was spending the summer with his family at New Brighton when he was stricken down with gastritis. He married Miss Emma Vanderbilt, and they celebrated their golden wedding eight years ago. A widow and six children survive him. Mr. Jerome held a position in the custom house for many years past. He was a man of charming personality and was noted for his liberal nature and genial disposition.

DR. JAMESON'S RAID.

The Cape Parliament Says That Cecil Rhodes Knew It Was Coming.

Cape Town, July 27.—The Cape parliament has unanimously adopted the majority report of the committee which was appointed to investigate the circumstances of the invasion of the Transvaal by Dr. Jameson and his followers last winter. The report declares that Cecil Rhodes, who was at the time prime minister of Cape Colony, was aware of the intentions of Dr. Jameson, but that the London directors of the British South Africa company were not, though they ought to have had their suspicions aroused, seeing that the company was being drawn upon for large sums of money, ostensibly for purposes of flotation, but really to defray the expenses of preparing for and conducting a revolution.

WRECKED ON SABLE ISLAND.

Twelve Men Rescued from a Bark That Grounded on the Sand Bars.

Halifax, N. S., July 27.—The Dominion government steamer Newfield has arrived here with the crew of a vessel that had been lost on Sable island since the Newfield's previous visit to "the graveyard of the Atlantic," as Sable island is called. The crew consists of twelve men of the Italian bark Raphael D., which grounded on the sand bars off the island during a gale, and was totally wrecked. The crew reached the island in the ship's boats after a thrilling experience, narrowly escaping drowning several times. The Raphael D. was on a voyage from Genoa for Bathurst, N. B., in ballast to load with lumber.

NIHILISM THE SPECTRE.

Proposed Visit of the Czar to European Capitals Becoming Very Uncertain.

St. Petersburg, July 27.—The dates of the czar's proposed visits to the principal continental capitals, if, indeed, they have been fixed, are being kept very dark. Announcements have been made that his intended trip is becoming more uncertain daily and Nihilism seems to be the spectre which is standing in his majesty's way. All that is known of his intentions is that it is his purpose to visit Vienna and Berlin, and probably Paris, but when the visits will take place it is impossible to say.

Denounced Populists as Anarchists.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 25.—At the natinal service in the Asbury Park auditorium yesterday afternoon Bishop John P. Newman created a sensation by declaring that populists were no better than anarchists and were not good American citizens. Instantly a man in the rear of the hall jumped up and shouted, "Bryan is a good American." He tried to propose three cheers for the democratic-populist candidate for president, but was drowned by the music of the choir.

China's Compliment to the Powers.

Berlin, July 27.—Since the visit of Li Hung Chang to Berlin it has become known that it is the intention of the government at Pekin to reorganize the various Chinese legations and raise the rank of the Chinese representatives at Berlin, Vienna and Rome to that of special envoy.

MACEDONIAN REVOLT

Greece Permits Armed Rebels To Cross the Frontier.

TURKISH TROOPS CUT TO PIECES

The Sultan's Soldiers Threaten To Revolt Because of Poor Rations and No Pay—Numerous Atrocities at Monaster.

Berlin, July 27.—Count Goluchowski, Austrian minister of foreign affairs, returned to Ischel for the purpose of holding an interview with Emperor Francis Joseph after having had a conference with Prince Hohenlohe, the German chancellor, at the latter's chateau at Alt-Aussee, and reached Vienna on Thursday. On the day of his return to Vienna Count Goluchowski had an interview with Count Nigra, the Italian ambassador to Austria, and since then Count Nigra has been summoned to Rome by the Marquis Visconti-Venosta, the Italian minister of foreign affairs. These comings and goings of diplomatic chiefs cannot be attributed to any other cause than the gravity of the situation in the east. A concert of the powers has failed to effect any good results as has already been stated, and the events which are now taking place completely overwhelm diplomacy. According to telegraphic advices received here the rising of the insurgents in Macedonia has become extremely formidable. Greece, while pretending to take stringent measures against any persons engaging in a raid upon the Macedonia frontier, has allowed upwards of 600 men, all of them armed with Lebel rifles, to enter Macedonia from Greek territory. These men after surprising and cutting to pieces the Turkish troops at Moussa, succeeded in repulsing a strong force of Turkish soldiers which had been sent from Salonica to reinforce the Moussa troops.

Hard Fighting in Macedonia.

A dispatch from Constantinople says that the Turkish reserves who have been called out by the sultan are showing a disposition to revolt in consequence of the fact that their pay is very much in arrears and the rations which are being issued to them are poor in quality and small in quantity. A special dispatch from Salonica says that the statements made by the Turkish officials concerning the situation are all calculated to conceal the desperate condition of affairs in Macedonia. Hard fighting is going on almost every day at Drumnitza, Serres and all points in the Perim mountains. The Turkish reserves at Prizrend, Preshtima and elsewhere in that section are being equipped and sent to the front as rapidly as possible, and it is estimated that the total number of Turkish troops concentrated on the Macedonian and Bulgarian frontiers exceeds 7,000 men. Even this force, however, has not been found sufficient to make any headway against the insurrection, which, under the influence of the successes already achieved by the insurgents in the field, is becoming stronger every day. Stimulated by these and similar reports, semi-official newspaper organs like the North German Gazette and the Cologne Gazette are taking a more definite tone in their articles commenting upon the situation. The North German Gazette reproduces an article from the Cologne Gazette which declares that, unless the powers interfere in an energetic way instead of submitting proposals to the porte, the troubles in Macedonia and Crete will never end.

Appeals for Interference.

The Reichsbote (conservative) publishes a letter written by a German lady living at Monaster, wherein the writer narrates atrocities which are practiced there every day without the slightest attempt at interference on the part of the authorities. This letter has stirred up a strong feeling of public indignation here, more, in fact, than the remoter massacres and outrages in Armenia. The Reichsbote in an article accompanying the letter appeals to the powers to cease their jealousies and interfere in behalf of the Macedonians and Cretans in the interests of humanity. The Bismarckian organs, on the other hand, are strongly opposed to any policy of interference on the part of Germany. The Neueste Nachrichten declares in their agreement to maintain Turkish rule in Crete and Macedonia which the insurgents are trying to shake off. If they continue their efforts to throw off the Turkish yoke, the paper adds, they must suffer the consequences. Europe cannot stake the peace of the world upon their account.

Trouble in a Foresters' Lodge.

Waterbury, Conn., July 27.—Twenty-one members of court Abraham Lincoln, Ancient Order of Foresters, have placed a $5,000 attachment on the property of officers of the court and have also attached $1,000 funds of the court in the bank. It is alleged that the officers have mismanaged the affairs of the court and have refused to make a statement of the finances. The row is the outcome of a split in the court over the question whether or not beer should be served in the lodge room at meetings.

Appointed by Commissioner Lyman.

Albany, July 27.—L. E. Chittenden of New York city, who held the office register of the treasury under Lincoln's administration, has been appointed by State Excise Commissioner Lyman as assistant cashier in the New York city branch office of the state excise department.

British Bark Ashore.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Partly Cloudy With Light Showers Tonight and Tuesday; Slightly Warmer Tuesday Morning.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 81 Degrees.

Street Commissioner Meeker spent Sunday at Ocean Grove.

Congressman Mahlon Pitney is desirous of a re-election in the Fourth Congressional District.

Ex-Senator Henry D. Winton, editor of the Hackensack Democrat, who was off on a fishing expedition at the time the Democratic convention was held, has returned home and announced that he will not support the nominees of that convention.

State Senator William D. Daly, of Hoboken, made public yesterday his reply to a letter received by him from E. J. Grace, of Harrison, in which he was asked to become the Democratic candidate for Congress this fall. The Senator once admitted that he was a gold-standard Democrat, but he has changed his mind, and is now a full-fledged silverite. In the letter Mr. Daly said that he could not accept the nomination and undertake to make a canvass in the county, owing to comparatively poor health.

Now we have an evidence of the workings of trust right near Plainfield. Owing to the condition of trade, the magnates of the United States Rubber Shoe Company have decided that the factories which they control shall cease operation, and so the superintendent of the factory in New Brunswick, which is one of the pool, has received an order from the managers of the trust to shut down until they order otherwise. No matter what the managers of the New Brunswick concern think of the order, whether or no they could find a market for their product if left to the natural channel of trade and competition, they must now throw 2,000 persons out of employment for a period of several weeks.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. Sidgraves, of Easton, Pa., is the guest of Plainfield friends.

Mr. Polhemus, of Somerville, was the guest of Plainfield relatives yesterday.

Stephen Blazier, of Millington, was a guest in town over Sunday with relatives.

Last summer one of our grandchildren was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

Thomas Seabrooke, the comic opera star, is sojourning at Asbury Park, partially for his health, but principally because the New York authorities desire to confiscate his body for failure to pay his divorced wife the alimony which a court deemed was her due. Now Thomas is to portray the role of Touchstone in the open-air performance of "As You Like It," along with a lot of other satelites in the histrionic world, but I should say that it is a case of Touch Thomas that is the "motif" of his lingering by the sea waves rather than Touchstone.

From over the sea comes the intelligence that an inventive Frenchman has an automatic device to be attached to telephones which will relegate the merry hello girl to oblivion. For the sake of the romantic and picturesque I am hoping that it is not a success. Without the mellifluous telephonic salutation, "Number?" which hails the ear from over a long stretch of wire after we have whir-r-r-ed the bell; without the unruffled temper after a dyspeptic subscriber has vented his spite in a string of snarls at his failure to get what he wants over the wire; without the demure and reserved rejoinders to the interrogations and "jollying" of the gay office boy; without the all-around tact and urbanity of the telephone girl, why this world would be a hollow mockery to those who have occasion to utilize the modern appliance of conveying your articulation to distant points. Keep the telephone girl intact—she is the one oasis of the business man's Sahara of irritableness.

It seems to me that in the last few weeks there has been less bicycle riders passing through this city than any time since the craze has swept over the metropolitan district.

* * * * * *

Campaign buttons are beginning to greet the eye on all sides. If you want to know a man's politics look at his coat lapel.

* * * * * *

Among the prominent Plainfielders who I have never seen on a bicycle are Counselor Charles A. Reed, Editor Frank W. Runyon, Judge George H. DeMeza, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Rev. D. J. Yerkes and James E. Martine. But they are few and far between.

A Word or Two

to those suffering from catarrh or the thousands subject to severe attacks of cold in the head, will not be amiss if a sure remedy can be offered. Ely's Cream Balm has become a favorite in all sections of the United States, because of its effectiveness. Your cold in the head will be quickly relieved by it, and the severest attack of catarrh will yield to, and be perfectly cured by a thorough treatment. Catarrh is not a blood disease, but imflammation of the passages of the nose and throat, due to climatic changes.

Feed the Nerves—upon pure, rich blood and you will not be nervous. Pure blood comes by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla which is thus the greatest and best nerve tonic.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

seclusion as unfair as to those others, the sufferers, as equal laws to the craftsmen, as liberty and life to the slave, as the bit of mother earth to all that tread upon it. "She is one of my people, too," he said to M. Etienne. "And to each according to his need!" And then, by an unavoidable accident, M. Etienne had seen a scrap of paper, on which was noted, apparently, a balance that had made him feel as if there were nothing real left in the world. He called to mind the gaming debts of the old duke, his grandfather, stories of wild play, in which whole provinces changed hands and lands and serfs were staked against the value of a fair pasdendue's affections. But anything like that, he knew as well as he knew that the sky was above him, was impossible to Beauxlieux. The worst he feared, he the royalist, was that place and power were throwing fortune into the young noble's hands, so peradventure to win him to themselves. How he had come by such a sum of money his friend and tutor could not say—it had a strange look—but under any and all circumstances Beauxlieux must be right. What was of more consequence to M. Etienne than all the rest was that the duchess was uneasy concerning it.

Beauxlieux's twenty-fourth birthday was now approaching. He was away with Jean—Jean in the priestly garb he always wore now—on one of their trips which he called journeys into the night. His mother knew that he carried alms to the perishing, that he went to give them the help of his profession, for which alone he had learned

CHAPTER V

They ran back to the hidden niche, they dragged out the iron box. Both of them were empty also. The two women confronted each other, white and shaking. They had been robbed! What misery! What cruelty! Who was it could misuse them so? Who knew of the hiding place? Who had taken them? "Do not speak," said the duchess. "Be quiet till I can think! Oh, say nothing, say nothing till I can think," she murmured over and over. "Say nothing, my Olympe! Say nothing!"

Without question there was not a stone or spark left of the Beauxlieux diamonds.

The duchess could have trusted Olympe with her life; she knew, of course, that nothing would be said about the loss of the diamonds till she spoke herself. And it seemed to her as if she had herself been stricken with dumbness. All her shadowy fears vanished like thin phantoms before this terrible reality of evil. Not that the diamonds were gone; not that anyone could reproach her for neglect, was she concerned. What had she ever cared for them, other than as they represented the long-descended luster of the family itself? And it was not she who had been robbed, any more than the long line of all that dead and long people. She paced the great hall and looked angrily at the dark portraits—were the eyes there stabbing her with reproach for what she had brought among them? She went out and essayed to busy herself among her late lingering flowers. It was no use; there was a worm at every root. When she walked along the shore, the restless wash and roar of the water was the only thing in tune with the tumult of her thoughts. When she came in she whirled, without reading it, a letter of Beauxlieux into the fire that always smoldered on the hearth, and sat there wrapped in a cloud of gloom. She did not eat in these days. She did not sleep. White and thin and with a little breathless air, the blackness of her gown was not so black as the shadow that surrounded her. "They were his!" she said over and over to herself, like the tolling of a bell. "They were his—de quelque maniere. He had only to speak. I would have put them into his hand. But to—oh, no, no, no, let me not say the word! It is impossible. Mother of God, and it is true! Oh! Oh! Oh! Beauxlieux! Beauxlieux, my son!" And her grief was more hopeless than that of another who buries her child.

Sometimes she would wonder if she were dreaming. Or even, with a throb of relief, if it could be that she were crazed. Suddenly she would deny it all, and accuse herself of an infamy. She to suspect the noblest, the truest, the loftiest of his line! She to believe evil of that upright, proud soul! And then the facts flashed before her again like a chain of lightning on the darkness—the ease that had insensibly come into the house, the accursed gowns from Worth, the frequency of the costly journeys, the repairs of the roofs of the chateau. Where had Beauxlieux obtained the money? "Oh, I can bear it no more," she cried once, starting back from the embrasure of the window as M. Etienne came in, and not knowing that she spoke aloud. "I can bear it no more."

"Pardon me," said the monsieur. "Pardon if I overhear. I have seen before that your grace is troubled. Have you lost all confidence in me, madame? At least, will you not remember that I am your physician?" He stood there as pale as she, his head bowed, his sad eyes at her feet.

She ran toward him, but stopped, tottering, so that she would have fallen but for his quick arm. "Oh, monsieur!" she cried. "You are all I have—for he has broken my heart!"

"You are wrong," he said to her, when some time afterward, with sobs and tears and wild cries and exclamations, she had unburdened her heart. "It is just as much out of the question as that the sky should fall. Doubt Beauxlieux? I would as soon—let me say it as I would say a prayer—doubt the Lord. It is simply impossible."

"Oh, so I said. I!"

"We will let it rest there then."

"Oh, Etienne; it is so long that you have been a comfort, a help, a shield to me."

"And will be forever!"

"Oh, but the money, Etienne!" she cried, with recurring memories coming like the waves of subsiding waters. "We who have been so long without money and valued it, to teach their rights as human beings to whole clusters of slaves. One day she found a letter open on Beauxlieux's desk, written, it said, from the blood of a pricked vein; and she felt a horrible foreboding that some day he, also, would be in the depths of some oubliette sending such a message to hearten those without. Oh, what had happened to the world, she cried, when a prince like Beauxlieux felt himself of no more worth than the tatterdemalion herding with his cows and sheep or crowding the cellars of filthy city courts!

"I CAN BEAR IT NO LONGER," SHE CRIED.

But now he was coming home! And when she saw him she forgot danger. He was there and the sun shone. With Beauxlieux at her feet, with M. Etienne at the other side of the fire, what more had she to ask? She had Olympe prepare a toilette for her to wear on this birthday that should make him remember to whom he belonged—his mother still the grande dame—and she went with Olympe to the secret place in the wall to bring out the old Beauxlieux diamonds, with half a pleasant anticipation of the flash of their awakening, of the sudden sheets of luster that, after their three years' imprisonment, should stream out as if they would illumine the very abyss into which the glory of the Sarazines Beauxlieux had fallen.

One by one Olympe took the cases and carried them to the dressing table. The duchess herself opened the large one, and instead of the burst of radiance—nothing. Only the loose, soft chamois lining of the thing gave out an empty gleam. There was some mistake. How was it? Could the jewels have been crowded into the other cases? Their fingers trembled, they knew not why, as they tried to open them. One and all they were empty. The seldom worn coronet, the lesser diadem, the rivieres, those superb and matchless stones of the fillets and of the collar and of the sunburst that had been theirs for more than a thousand years, had vanished as if they had been soap-bubbles.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result. It's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? OUTLINING THE WORK

Major McKinley Has an Extended Conference With Hanna.

MANY MATTERS DEMAND ATTENTION

Considering the Possibility of Another Democratic Ticket—Letter of Acceptance May Be Completed Within the Next Fortnight.

Cleveland, July 27.—Major McKinley and Mark Hanna, chairman of the republican national committee, were in conference most of yesterday and last evening at Mr. Hanna's beautiful suburban home on the lake side. Major McKinley returned from Canton Saturday evening and was at once driven to Mr. Hanna's home. Although Major McKinley had been in Cleveland most of the week and had been a guest all of that time at Mr. Hanna's house, the candidate and his manager have had no opportunity to discuss the forthcoming campaign. Major McKinley said this morning: "I came back to Cleveland because my engagements during the centennial exercises made it impossible for me to have a full and satisfactory talk with Mr. Hanna about the campaign and its management. Indeed, we have had but one extended talk since my nomination, and now I find there are scores of matters which demand attention and discussion with Mr. Hanna." The campaign has been outlined in a general way only by Mr. Hanna and his committee. They do not know what turn affairs may take in reference to another democratic ticket, and of of necessity their actions are somewhat limited in scope and significance by the imperfectly developed situation which confronts them.

Senator Sherman's Views.

Senator Sherman, who was here two or three days last week to participate in the centennial exercises, is somewhat alarmed at the manifestation of the silver sentiment in certain sections and communities. He told Major McKinley that his voluminous correspondence was laden with inquiries about the money question, and that he was of the opinion that most active measures to combat the silver sentiment should be taken at once. He urged both Mr. Hanna and Major McKinley to have the speaking campaign begin immediately, and said he was ready and willing to take the stump at a moment's notice. Other republicans, such as Senator Hawley and ex-Gov. Merriam of Minnesota, have expressed themselves in much the same manner to both Major McKinley and Mr. Hanna, and the two latter have reached the conclusion that the best results this year will be attained by holding a large, indeed an unusually large, number of political meetings. It is believed that it will be difficult to get people to read heavy congressional speeches on the money question or other long documents. On the other hand, there is abundant evidence of a lively demand for clear, crisp, simple talks on the money question and for short articles and leaflets bearing upon it.

McKinley's Letter of Acceptance.

In short, this year the committees of both parties will undoubtedly spend their money to keep hundreds of speakers in the field instead of sending out millions of documents, as has frequently been done. Major McKinley and Mr. Hanna are of one mind upon this point, and the necessary orders to the clerk in charge of this work will be given out at once. When Major McKinley settles down in Canton again this week he will begin to think seriously about his letter of acceptance. He expects to begin work on it within ten days and may have a draft of it completed within a fortnight. It is not his intention to make it public for a month or so, however.

An Important Utterance.

He wants to see what turn events will take and needs something to determine the ultimate cast which he shall give to the issues of the campaign. The letter of acceptence will be a sort of final supplementary, up-to-date platform, and the great work of the campaign will be done on the lines which it indicates. Major McKinley will prepare this document with great care and it will be one of the most important utterances of the campaign.

NO SUNDAY WORK.

Republican Headquarters To Be Closed on That Day During the Campaign.

Chicago, July 27.—Chairman Hanna of the republican national committee has given strict orders that no work shall be done, or even planned, on Sunday, and that the headquarters of the national committee shall be kept closed on that day during the campaign. The order went into effect yesterday. Several politicians who called to make engagements were surprised to hear Chairman Hanna's order and went away apparently disappointed, but Col. Heath, who is in charge of headquarters during the absence of the chairman, says the order will be strictly enforced.

To Be Retired To-day.

Washington, July 27. — Having reached the age limit Gen. Richard N. Batchelder, quartermaster general of the regular army, will be retired today. Among the more prominent officers who are spoken of as his successor are Col. G. H. Weeks, James M. Moore, Charles G. Sawtelle and Marshall T. Ludington.

APPEAL FOR MELTON

Olney Petitioned in the Correspondent's Behalf.

CONFINED IN A CUBAN DUNGEON

Alleged That a Leper Has Been Thrown into the Cell with the Unfortunate Competitor Captive—Horrors of His Position Set Forth.

Jacksonville, Fla., July 26.—A determined effort is being made to induce the United States to secure the release of Ora Melton, who was captured on the Competitor, and who is the young American now confined by the Spaniards in Fort Cabanas. The citizens of Key West and Florida generally are aroused and demand that this government shall do something to relieve him. The people of Key West have petitioned Secretary Olney to act, and they forwarded this petition to T. T. Stockton, general manager of the Times-Union, for transmission to Washington. With the petition Mr. Stockton includes a letter to the secretary of state, saying:

Appeal for Melton.

"I feel deep interest in Melton, as he went to Cuba as the correspondent of the Times-Union. He had no intention of serving in the army of the insurgents, but simply desired to get within their lines to furnish reliable news as to the situation in Cuba. I furnished the young man credentials as the representative of the Times-Union, and those credentials he should have had on his person when arrested by the Spaniards. Under these circumstances it seems to be very hard for Melton to be compelled first to undergo the mental torture caused by a death sentence and then, that sentence having been suspended, to endure for months the horrors of an overcrowded Spanish prison. I do not see that he was more culpable than Artist Dawley of Harper's Weekly or the correspondents of the New York papers, who fell under the displeasure of the Spaniards and were arrested. The correspondents were promptly released on protest by the government, but Melton is allowed to remain immured in a dungeon with criminals and lepers, and his release seems as far in the future as when he was first arrested."

Captured on the Competitor.

Mr. Stockton also says he has "reliable information from Havana that unless he is released or his condition ameliorated he cannot live. If Melton is to be allowed to die by inches in a foul cell it would have been merciful to have permitted the Spaniards to carry out the sentence of the court martial and shoot him to death after he was captured." The statement and petition recite to Secretary Olney, it will be remembered, that Ona Melton went to Cuba on the ill-fated schooner Competitor as a representative of the Times-Union, was arrested aboard that vessel when she was captured by a Spanish cruiser after having landed an expedition on the north coast under command of Col. Monzon. The crew of the schooner were also apprehended and taken to Havana, where they were subsequently tried by a drumhead court-martial and sentenced to be shot for piracy. An energetic protest made by the late Consul-General Williams, under instructions from Washington, secured a temporary reprieve for the prisoners and the case, which assumed the character of an international complication, threatening at the time to involve the United States in war with Spain, was referred to Madrid for revision.

Leper in the Cell with Him.

"The Spanish home government," continues the petition, "has since ordered a new trial for the prisoners by the civil courts, as provided by the terms of the protocol and treaty stipulations, but like all official matters on the island of Cuba, the trial may be put off indefinitely through red tapeism. Meanwhile Melton, with the other prisoners captured on the Competitor, is confined in the military fortress of Cabanas, at the entrance to Havana harbor, in a little dark cell, reeking with filth and vermin, and, as if to add to the horror of their situation, a drain runs through the room, breeding pestilence and death. Twenty other prisoners, of all colors and nationalities, and accused of every crime in the decalogue, are also huddled together within the narrow confines of the cell, and, if reports received here lately are correct, a leper has been thrown into the dungeon to increase the diseases of the other prisoners."

TRAIN STRIKES BUGGY.

A Young Woman Instantly Killed and Her Escort Fatally Injured.

Lancaster, Pa., July 27.—A train on the Pennsylvania railroad struck a buggy containing a young man and woman at the crossing at Bird-in-hand yesterday. Barbara Hershey of Blackhorse was instantly killed and Enos Barge of Refton, her escort, had an arm cut off and is probably fatally injured. The horse was instantly killed. The young couple with their friends were returning from a party and were chatting with friends in a rear vehicle when struck by the locomotive. They are the children of wealthy farmers.

People's Party Active.

Paris, Ill., July 27.—The people's party of Edgar county, after putting a county ticket in the field Saturday, appointed a committee of five to call on A. J. Hunter, the democratic candidate for congress to induce him to withdraw and allow the people's party to put a candidate in his place. They made an effort to fuse with the democrats in making up a county ticket, but could not agree and placed one of their own party in the field instead.

SPORTS

MONDAY, July 27. Sun rises 4:51 a. m., sets 7:21 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:21 p. m. and 3:51 a. m.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Michael Winn, of West Third street, took a spin to Coney Island yesterday on his wheel.

Ralph Tolles, of Orange street, rode his wheel to Boynton Beach Saturday and spent the day.

Eugene Laine and John Sands, of East Second street, rode to Newark yesterday on their wheels.

Next Saturday the Y. M. C. A. team will play the Riverside Athletic Club team, of New York, in this city.

Dr. Jenkins is among the latest to ride a bike. He is taking lessons at the Jersey Cycle Academy.

Bert Boe, Miss Lena Weber and Harry Dreier pedalled to Boynton Beach yesterday and spent the day.

John Conway, John Carty and George Apgar rode their wheels to Boyton Beach Saturday and spent the day.

Cyclists, ! Get your carnival decorations flags, lenterns and festooning, from R. C. Rand, 140 West Front street.

William Rensswig and Robert Brunt, of Somerville, rode their wheels to Plainfield yesterday and called on friends.

Edward Andruss, of Newark, took a spin to this city yesterday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. John B. Andruss, of West Fourth street.

The Y. M. C. A. cyclists meet at the Y. M. C. A. building tomorrow night at 7.30 o'clock to take part in the bicycle parade of the Midsummer Night's Carnival. Every member of the club is requested to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Maynard, of North avenue, rode their wheels to Westfield yesterday, and when nearing the latter place Mrs. Maynard fell off of her wheel and sustained a slight sprain of the ankle. She was able to continue on her journey, though the injury was very painful.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Browns, of Woodbridge, defeated the Metuchens, Saturday, 36 to 3.

The Richmonds, of this city, will cross bats with a Dunellen nine at that place Saturday morning.

The West End Field Club, of Elizabeth, were defeated by the Dunellens at Dunellen, Saturday, by the score of 5 to 2.

Larry Doyle, Captain of the Richmonds, says the team has a few open dates which he would like to fill in with any nine under 18. His address is 601 Richmond street.

The West Ends, of this city, were defeated in two games Saturday by the ex-Gormans on the Y. M. C. A. grounds. Manager Mundy, of the West Ends, has released J. Evans and B. Eddey, and signed D. Killbride and T. Muir.

The P. A. C.'s, of this city play ball with the West End Field Club of Elizabeth, on the E. A. C. grounds Saturday next. The same team will play at Sterling on August 8th, and on September 5th they will play off a tie with the Dunellen team. The local team has no home grounds to play on this season, but next year they hope to have enclosed grounds.

The Plainfield Athletic Club's baseball team went to Somerville Saturday afternoon and defeated the Somersets of that place by the score of 12 to 11. The game was one of the most exciting ones played this year, and by heavy batting the Plainfields won the game. There was a large crowd present rooting for Somerville, and in the last inning the excitement was at fever heat. The Somersets had two men on bases, but by good fielding were unable to get home. The following is the score:

READY FOR THE PARADE

IF THE WEATHER IS FAIR THERE WILL BE A GREAT CROWD.

The Press Prize Selected—Will be Sought After by Those Who Originate Unique Decorations—How the Divisions Form.

Of course you will turn out for the bicycle parade in the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" tomorrow evening; all your fellow wheelmen and wheelwomen are going and you should assist in making Plainfield's first Midsummer Night's Carnival a great success.

It will be a success, too, unless Farmer Dunn will be so unreasonable as to call a rain storm to this section of the country within the next twenty-four hours. New Brunswick is becoming quite enthusiastic over Councilman Frost's novel plan and promises a large delegation. Other neighboring towns will also be represented. The preparations for the decorations of the houses along the line of march are going forward with increased vigor, and there is a general rush for red fire, Chinese lanterns and bunting.

It is not necessary to have a decorated wheel to join in the parade, for there will be many without any extensive decorations, but it is hoped that as many as can will decorate.

The Daily Press prize for the most uniquely decorated lady's wheel has has been selected. It is a celluloid memorandum pad, decorated with solid silver, and on one side is a large Jersey mosquito of solid silver. It is a charming little souvenir, and will be prized by the winner, whose artistic taste wins her the prize.

The participants in the parade are requested to report to the marshals at 7:30 o'clock so as to be assigned positions in line. The First Division, composed of the Lady Cyclers and their gentlemen escorts will form on East Seventh street, and will be followed by the advertising devices. The Second Division will form on Crescent avenue and will include all the local and visiting clubs.

The Third Division, composed of the bicycle clubs and the colored unattached cyclists, will take position on Watchung avenue.

The Fourth Division, the unattached wheelmen, will form on LaGrande avenue. All the divisions will face the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church. The parade will move promptly at 8 o'clock. The judges will review the parade from the broad verandas of the Revere House.

The other prizes, besides the one given by The Daily Press, will be given by H. E. Rider and the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The committee meet this evening at 8:30 at Grand Marshal Martin's office to make the final arrangements.

Appointed Notary Public.

Frank J. Blatz, head clerk in the law offices of John H. VanWinkle, has been appointed a notary public by Gov. Griggs and goes to Elizabeth Monday to be sworn in.

—E. E. Anthony on Saturday secured the Jersey Cycle Academy, lighted and heated for one week in October, for the great State convention of the Christian Endeavor. It will seat 600 more than the opera house when the centre surface is filled with folding camp chairs, which have been rented from a New York dealer.

—Harper has red fire and lanterns for bicycle parade Tuesday night.

Franklin P. Noble, of East Fifth street, spent Saturday and Sunday in New York with friends.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

Simon Springs, of the Victor Wheelmen, rode from the Park Avenue Baptist church to Pumptown and return Saturday afternoon in 28 minutes. He was supposed to be paced by John Scott and Chas. Sheldon on a tandem but they started 100 yards ahead and never waited for him to catch up.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits; 75c. Sold by T.S. Armstrong, druggist, Park and North avenues. 2 12 y

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

The Art Of Buying Well

is the secret of success, domestic happiness and comfort, where your coal supply is concerned. No thoughtful man would buy coal just because it is cheap. A considerate man thinks of those who have to use it, and endeavors to save them trouble and annoyance by seeking quality. We have the combination of the best coal mined, and the very lowest prices.

No "Flim Flam" Game

To Be Worked on Early Purchasers of

The Spalding Bicycle

After the adoption of our 1896 model and a careful estimate of the cost of manufacture, we placed the price on the Spalding Bicycle at $100. The price is now $100 and will continue at $100 throughout the season, no matter what other manufacturers may do.

We don't believe it is fair, honest or good business policy to sell a standard article like the Spalding Bicycle at one price in May and reduce its value in June by a material reduction in price. As a matter of common fairness to early purchasers of Spalding Bicycles and as an evidence of good faith on our part we will, in case of reduction in price during the season, send a rebate check to every purchaser of a Spalding Bicycle of the amount of any such reduction that may be made by us during the season This is our meaning of a

TERRIFIC WIND AND RAIN

HEAVIEST STORM EXPERIENCED IN YEARS IN THIS SECTION.

The Rain Accompanied by an Electrical Storm That Wrought Havoc All Over This Section—No Fatalities Reported.

All yesterday afternoon nature seemed preparing for a grand outburst. It was sultry and warm, very warm in fact, and there was oppressing quietness that seemed to prelude some terrible exhibition of power. The blue sky that made the morning so delightful was obscured, as the afternoon passed by a murky haze that gradually thickened until it became heavy laden clouds. There was a feeling of an undefinable something in the air that made the perspiring pedestrians glance anxiously toward the northwest from which direction the wild tossing banks of clouds began to appear. The patient hack horses moved uneasily, while the stray dogs in the streets crouched in some corner and forgot to chase a poor disreputable cat that was hunting about for shelter. Then came the black sky with clouds rolling and whirling as they came, thus making the dark haze look almost bright in comparison.

Over the city went the advance guard of the storm, the trees stirred in a fretful breeze and pedestrians forgot their warmth and discomfort to scurry for a place of shelter. The trains full of commuters, tired after a day in hot New York, began to arrive and soon were hurrying homeward. At about 5:30 o'clock the first drops of rain began to fall. And with the rain came wind. But the most portentious of all the signs of the coming storm was a terrible funnel-shaped cloud that gathered over the mountain. It was not black, but had a yellowish unearthly tinge, that made the beholder involuntarily shudder at the sight. Along the line of the mountains it whirled and then followed a path to the northeast of Plainfield. Then the rain began to fall heavily, blown into spray by a gale from the northwest. Everybody ran for shelter, even the horses took refuge. The torrents of water that were falling began to flood the streets, especially under the railroad bridges.

At the residence of S. Sharkey, Second and Richmond streets, several large limbs were torn off a tree which stood in the yard. But for the fact that another tree stood between the damaged one and Mr. Sharkey's house, serious damage might have resulted. The limbs in their fall tore the shutters off the house next door, occupied by Joseph Unangst.

Armstrong, the plumber, of Watchung avenue, left the front door of his store open during the storm yesterday and the wind slammed it shut and a large plate glass in the doors was knocked out and scattered about the sidewalk.

Several bricks were blown off the chimney at the residence of Charles Duvier, of West Fifth street.

The house owned by Mrs. John Moore at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Fifth street, was struck by a bolt of lightning, but miraculously escaped destruction by fire. The bolt entered the roof near the chimney by knocking off some of the slate. Then it followed the chimney down to the lower floor, occupied by Peter Russ and family, although no one was home at the time. The stovepipe was knocked on the floor, and then the lightning jumped acress the room to a shelf, on which were stored a quantity of newspapers. These caught fire and were consumed, and it is impossible to explain why the woodwork did not catch fire. A strip of the wall was also knocked off, and then the lightning followed a water pipe to the ground.

The large electric crane at the Pond Machine Tool works also received some of the force of the lightning and and the fuses on them were burned out and several men who were working nearby received slight shocks.

At the home of Charles Foster, 1033 South Second street, the lighting entered the house and smashed a large mirror which hung against the wall, and tore a two by four foot hole in the wall. The family usually occupy the kitchen during a shower, but last night did not, for what reason they can't explain, but had they been there it is more than probable that some one would have been badly injured and perhaps killed as the glass from the mirror flew in all directions and showed by the marks on the opposite wall that had any one been in the room they would have been directly in the path of the glass as it flew across the room, and some of it even flew across two rooms it was found near the front door. There was little damage beside this spot in the kitchen and the

HOBART TO BE PRESENT.

WILL APPEAR IN PLAINFIELD ON THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR FIELD DAY.

He is a Member of Melita Commandery, of Paterson, and Will Parade With Them—Other Plans for the Day

The month of October promises to be an eventful one for Plainfield. On the first day of the month, the Knights Templar of the State will hold their annual field day, and a week later the Christian Endeavorers meet here for their annual convention.

The committee in charge of the first of these events, held a meeting last evening and planned out their work. The Knights will, of course, turn out for a grand parade. A dress parade will precede the regular parade, which will be held in front of the Revere House on Park avenue. Then the Knights will march down Park avenue to Front street. It is planned to erect a triumphal-arch over Park avenue near Front street, which, during the week after will be changed to suit the Christian Endeavorers.

The line of march will then be down West Front street, past the reviewing stand for the grand officers, which is to be erected on the vacant lot at the corner of Madison avenue. The complete route of the parade will be announced later.

A committee from Melita Commandery, of Paterson, came to this city Saturday evening and selected the Revere House as their headquarters for the field day. Garret A. Hobart, the Republican candidate for Vice-President, is a member of that commandery and will come to Plainfield and parade with them at that time.

SETTLED AFTER MANY YEARS.

A Sum of Money Found Years Ago Goes To the Finders.

Lawyer John D. Quincy, counsel for the Building Department of New York City, was in town yesterday and with a certified check drew from the First National Bank the portion of his client, Mr. Crawford, who as a boy several years ago found a large sum of money on the railroad track near Elizabeth. The money was taken by ex-Chief Keron and placed under the jurisdiction of the county court. The money was found in a stocking among a pile of old rags. No one ever made claim to the same and the boys, who since have married, brought suit for a division of the sum found and some time ago Judge McCormick decided that an equal portion should be distributed to the finders. Mr. Quincy yesterday drew the last portion that settles up a once famous case from the First National Bank of this city.

Whom Does it Represent.

While the employes at the old freight house were cleaning up preparatory to moving, they came across a plaster cast bust of a man. Since then everybody who has seen it has been trying to solve the problem as to whom the cast was made for. The bust represents a middle-aged man, with a pointed beard and bald head, and has a decided French air. The bust has been placed in a prominent place, and the freight house people are waiting for someone to come along and solve the problem.

Going Off to Camp.

The High School Cadets who are going with the organization to camp at Sewaren for a week, commencing August 4th, will meet at Captain Edwards' house, 17 Duer street, tomorrow evening, to make the necessary arrangements for the start. Any boys who are not members of the Cadets, but who desire to take the trip are also invited to be present. It is expected that while they are in camp Governor Griggs will inspect them.

Open and Closing Exercises.

The meeting of the Primary Teachers Union held yesterday afternoon was well attended. Miss Beeching taught the lesson and Miss Bainbridge led the devotional exercises. The subject of the lesson was "Opening and Closing Exercises." Those present learned many valuable points regarding the subject.

IS HE UNDER A SPELL?

A COLORED PREACHER SAID TO BE INFLUENCED BY A WOMAN.

The Dusky-Hued Damsel Said to Be in Louisiana, and He May Go There to Induce Her to Remove the Influence.

The New York Journal yesterday published the following:

Mrs. Rachel Graham is wanted in Westfield. On her return depends the happiness of Rev. William D. Johnson. It is fondly believed among the colored people that the clergyman is under the spell of Mrs. Graham, or has been "bad spelled," as the colored people say, and she is wanted to remove the spell before some terrible fate seizes him. He has already had his share of ill fortune, and his people are watching him intently to see what will happen next.

Rev. Mr. Johnson is a young colored man, who came to Westfield from Virginia about six years ago. Several years previous the African M. E. church of Rahway had established a mission at Westfield and Mrs. Graham was the bright particular star. Her brilliancy attracted the attention of the Methodists, and they encouraged her to go south as an evangelist. She did so and the flock all came into the Methodist church. There Brother Johnson found them when he arrived. He was bright, apt and a fluent speaker, and when he preached immersion with much unction, they all wanted the rite administered. The young man complied, and the Methodists found that their colored members had been transformed into Baptists. After that it did not take long to organize a church with the Virginian as pastor. A meeting house was built on New York avenue, and for two years Rev. Johnson was popular and successful.

Then Mrs. Graham returned from the South, and to her astonishment she found that the brethren and sisters had turned their backs on Methodism. She is said to have "glowered" on Johnson. The "glowering" process is believed to have been a reproof, a hoodoo and a curse, all in one. From that time the pastor began to lose popularity. A scandal that involved him and a young woman arose, and his resignation followed. He was of too active a disposition to remain quiet for any long time, and last year he obtained a call to the newly organized Fillmore Avenue Baptist church, in Plainfield. This church was formed of seceders from the colored churches of this city, who had objected to too close restraints. They wanted festivals and fairs, sociables and cake walks, and Johnson indulged them in their desires. As a consequence the church grew wonderfully.

Quite recently Johnson has become convinced that these proceedings are contrary to sound doctrine, and he has had them abandoned and admonished his flock. Such teaching has not proven agreeable, and one by one the members have begun to drop off, and the contributions have diminished in proportion. Last week the pastor took a firmer stand than ever.

The unfortunate man is at his home on Broad street, and is planning a Southern visit. Rachael Graham is said to be laboring in Louisiana, and Brother Johnson may find it worth going to seek her. He wants her very much, as he considers that he is called to preach, and does not relish the "spell." He is still the nominal pastor of the Plainfield church, but it is blanketed with debt, and the people have a burning desire for a midsummer leap-year cake walk.

Well Known in Plainfield.

The marriage of Miss Vinnie DeVine and Fred Lucas, both of Poughkeepsie, was celebrated at the home of the bride, Wednesday, July 15th. The wedding was one of the largest and most fashionable ever witnessed in Poughkeepsie. Mr. Lucas is engaged in newspaper work at the latter place. He was formerly a resident of Plainfield and was well known among a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The bride is a most estimable young woman and belongs to the first families in Poughkeepsie. Mr. and Mrs. Lucas passed their honeymoon at Old Point Comfort. They are now living at Poughkeepsie where Mr. Lucas is in business.

Two Country Justices Hurt.

Justice Mendell, of Cranford, is confined to his house as the result of an injury inflicted by his horse, which stepped on his foot and tore off a portion of a toe. Justice Winckler, while stepping over a board, struck a rusty nail, which pierced his shoe, inflicting an ugly wound on his foot.

Did you ever think how readily the blood is poisoned by constipation? Bad blood means bad health and premature old age. DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills, overcome obstinate constipation. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Fron Street.

SENT TO JAIL AGAIN.

WILLIAMS WAS REARRESTED AND NOW AWAITS THE GRAND JURY.

He Served Twenty Days for Carrying a Revolver and Was Arrested on Leving Jail by Chief Grant for Burglary.

There was an unpleasant surprise awaiting James Williams this morning when he was released from the Union County Jail at Elizabeth. The surprise came in the shape of Chief of Police Grant, of this city, and he quietly informed Williams that he was wanted on a charge of burglary. Williams is the individual that was arrested here on the night of July 3d for carrying concealed weapons and sent down the road for twenty days. By some clever detective work by Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely the man was discovered to be the same one that broke into Adam Dealaman's store at Dunellen on the night of July 3d.

The chief evidence against him is the peculiar mark made by the nails in his heel on a window blind that he forced open with his heel, which exactly corresponds with the nails in the heel of his shoe as was previously told in the Press.

Chief Grant took his prisoner to New Market where he was brougbt before Justice Storms. The evidence was too convincing and the Justice held Williams for the grand jury without bail. Constable Dougherty took him to the Middlesex county jail this afternoon, where he will remain until the grand jury meets in the fall.

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION.

The Decision Given in the Contract Case of Johnston Against Markham.

The decision in the important contract case of Horatio C. N. Johnston against Mrs. Harriet Markham, was given yesterday afternoon by Justice Nash in favor of the defendant, the judge stating that there was no cause for action. The case was tried a week ago, but the judge reserved his decision until yesterday.

The question was that of the implied contract, as was told at the time in The Daily Press. Johnston laid a flagstone sidewalk in front of Mrs. Markham's property on Church street without being ordered, but claimed that he agreed to it because she did not order him to stop.

Her side of the case was presented by Charles J. McNabb while Winfield S. Angleman was attorney for Johnston.

Johnston will now have to go to the exense of having the stone removed or else settle at Mrs. Markham's own terms.

WON BY 25 UP.

New Brunswick Golf Club Defeats the Plainfield Team.

The New Brunswick Golf Club had as a competitor on Saturday a team representing the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club of Plainfield on Saturday. The Plainfield golfers are new at the game as compared with the New Brunswick golfers and the result was a decisive victory for the latter by 25 up. The visitors were at an additional disadvantage, owing to the fact that they were entirely unfamiliar with the course. A return match will be played at Plainfield on August 10. The summary;

Got Frightened Too Quick.

A. J. Grollmisch and son, of East Front street, had a lively experience this morning while driving out of their yard into the street. Just as the horse struck the sidewalk he began to switch his tail and shake his head. This frightened the two occupants of the wagon who jumped out and allowed the horse to run away. The horse kicked hard enough to wreck the wagon and break the harness before he was caught and put under subjection.

IN A SUDDEN STUPOR.

AN UNKNOWN GERMAN FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN A CHAIR.

Roundsman Mattox Conveyed the Man to the Police Station and Administered Restoratives Without Great Success.

A mysterious case came under the observation of Roundsman Mattox this morning about 9.15. The officer was called to the restaurant conducted by Ross on Park Avenue, and asked to take charge of an unknown man who had entered the place for a meal.

The man was a German, about fourty years old and was well dressed. Early this morning the man was at the restaurant and had his breakfast. At that time he seemed to be all right, but when he came back the second time those in charge noticed he acted a little strange. However, he ordered what he wanted, but when it was brought to him, he was was unconscious, hence the call for the police. The smell of liquor was detected, but not to any great degree. It was reported that the man had $50 in his pockets, but the money was not found. Roundsman Mattox with the aid of Special Policeman Dagnall and a hack succeeded in getting the man to the police station, where he was laid in the hall.

His clothes were searched but only a small amount of money, a comb and a box of matches were found. The Roundsman did not think that the man was drunk, judging from his actions, and his opinion was that he had been drugged by someone. His breathing at times was hardly noticeable, and for the first time the dispensary was used. The Roundsman used amonia freely and this seemed to revive him for a few minutes, but he soon would drop off into unconsciousness. Dr. Simpson was telephoned for but was not at home, neither was Drs. Long or Fritts. Roundsman Mattox and Special Policeman Dagnall remained with the man until they were relieved. No one seemed to know the man's name, although his face was familiar. Mr. Ross says he comes to his place frequently but does not know his name. The man was unable to talk intelligently even when aroused from his stupor.

The man recovered consciousness about 1 o'clock this afternoon and he gave his name as Geo. Mattison and his residence Newark. He said that he had been living for the past two months with his brother, Charles Mattison, at 182 Duer street.

He also said that he had a wife living in Newark, but he did not live with her. He has a daughter in an asylum and this seemed to worry him a good deal. He was anxious to leave the stationhouse, but Captain Grant thought it best to have Dr. Simpson examine him first, which was done.

Mattison does not remember anything that happened this morning.

RECEIVER APPOINTED.

William Newcorn to Wind Up the Affairs of a Local Firm.

Ex-Judge Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, appeared before Vic-Chancellor Stevens in the Court of Chancery at Newark this morning and made application for the appointment of William Newcorn as receiver for the New York and Philadelphia Confectionery Company. The petition was granted.

Mr. Newcorn will wind up the affairs of the company immediately. This firm has been conducted by Frank Sackelos and George Polites, but recently they had a disagreement and Sackelos was compelled to retire. He retained Reed & Coddington and every legal procedure that they have instituted in his behalf has been successful.

At the Revere House.

The recent arrivals at the Revere House include: A. G. Vogt, M. D., S. N. Vliet, E. B. Drake, Newark; H. G. Tunison, F. K. Rupprecht, Rev. Uriah D. Gulick, New York; E. C. McGuage, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. THE CARNIVAL TONIGHT.

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE A GALA TIME THIS EVENING.

Hundreds of Wheelmen Will be in Line. The Band Will Play, The Trolley Cars Will Hum, and Everybody will be Happy.

Unless a thunder storm is arranged in short order the "Midsummer Night's Carnival," this evening, will be held according to the original plan of Councilman Frost, the originator of this novel affair.

The last meeting of the parade committee was held last evening, despite the rain, and the final details arranged. The prospects for a successful parade were excellent and everything pointed toward a big parade and many handsome decorations along the line of march.

The First Division, composed of the lady cyclists and their gentlemen escorts, will form on East Seventh street under the charge of Marshal's Aid Louis G. Timpson. The Second Division, composed of the clubs, will line up on Crescent avenue with Marshal's Aid Charles B. Morse in command. The Third Division, the colored clubs and riders, will form on Watchung avenue and will be commanded by Captain Israel Jones, of the Victor Wheelmen. The Fourth Division of unattached cyclists will be looked after by Marshal's Aids F. R. Stevens, N. R. Titsworth and M. F. Elderton. Grand Marshal F. L. C. Martin will command the parade and will give his orders assisted by a bugler.

The divisions, in forming, face the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church. The parade will start at eight o'clock exactly so as to conform with the trolley car schedule.

The car and cyclists will meet at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fifth street, and go through East Fifth street to Richmond street, to Putnam avenue, to Franklin place, (leaving the car which will stop at the Putnam avenue switch for a twelve-minute concert and then go to Netherwood, the band playing going and returning), to Watchung avenue, to Crescent avenue, to West Eighth street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Seventh street, to Park avenue, to the corner of Ninth street, and countermarching on Park avenue, to North avenue, to Watchung avenue, (meeting the car), to East Front street, to Grove street, (leaving the car while the band gives a twelve-minute concert), to Park place, to Jackson avenue, to Grand street, to Fairview avenue, to Linden avenue, to Grove street, to Rockview avenue, to Washington avenue, to West Front street, (meeting the car), to Grant avenue, (leaving the car), to West Seventh street, to Park avenue, to North avenue, disbanding in front of the North avenue station.

The car and band after separating from the parade at Grant avenue, will go to Dunellen, the band playing going and returning, and will reach the station in time for the band to give several selections there as the parade is disbanding. The car will then go over the West Fourth street and Somerset street branches, music being given at intervals while the cyclists that care to can follow.

The Y M. C. A Cyclists assemble at the Y. M. C. A building at 7:30 o'clock sharp and will take their position on Crescent avenue at the head of the Second Division. Captain Thomas A. Cuming will be in command and expects to head his club on one of the good old ordinaries, resurrected for the occasion. The club transparency will be carried on the Punnett Companion.

The Crescent Wheelmen Juniors expect to turn out in large numbers.

The Fourth Division will, of course, be the largest and will not only include Plainfield riders, but cyclists from far and near. The decorated wheels will not be placed by themselves, but will be found throughout the length of the parade.

The Scott Press Works Club will turn out and expect to have from sixty to seventy-five men in line.

Co-operation a Success.

The first quarterly meeting of the Co-operative Association will be held tomorrow evening at the residence of the president, David Bowden, of 225 Gaant avenue. The association now numbers nearly fifty members, and have leased the store at the corner of Second street and Central avenue, where they will commence business about September 1st.

—The First Baptist church excursion to Asbury Park on Thursday will be an enjoyable event. Don't fail to take the day off and have a pleasant time.

IRON MILLS RESUME

10,000 Idle Men Will Soon Be at Work Again.

SETTLEMENT OF THE WAGE SCALE

The Works Now Starting Are in Ohio, But Plants in Several Other States Will Begin Operations Under the Agreement.

Pittsburg, July 28.—The resumption of work at the iron mills which will soon put to work at least 10,000 idle men was started this week. It is estimated that at least that number of men are interested in the settlement of the wage-scale with the Ohio manufacturers which occurred at Youngstown on Saturday night. The success of the Amalgamated association in making the settlements means, also, that the men employed in the non-union mills will get an advance in their wages, and that employers will sign agreements to pay them the union prices. The conference was with the Ohio association, but plants in several other states will be started under the agreement. The firms who signed the scale are as follows: Andrews Bros. & Co., Hazelton, O.; Brown, Bonnell & Co., four plants at Youngstown, O.; Union Iron and Steel company, two plants at Youngstown, one at Warren, and one at Girard; Mahoning Valley Iron company, two plants at Youngstown; Falcon Iron and Nail company, Niles, O.; Coleman, Shields & Co., Niles, O.; Eagle Iron and steel company, Ironton, O.; Union Rolling Mill company, Cleveland; Carnes & Sons' company, Massillon; Chery Valley Iron company, Latonia, O.; Etna Standard Iron and Steel company, Bridgeport, O.; Central Iron and Steel company, Brazil, Ind.; Weatherel Rolling Mill company, Franklin, Ind.; Birmingham Rolling Mill company, Birmingham, Ala.; Alabama Rolling Mill company, Gates City, Ga.; Sharon Iron company, Sharon, Pa.; Struthers Iron company, Struthers, O.; Pomeroy Iron company, Pomeroy, O.

VICTIMS OF MOJAVE DESERT.

The Remains of a New York Man and His Companion Found.

Pomona, Cal., July 28.—Edward M. Clark of New York and his companion, Henry Sanford of Columbus, Mo., have been lost on the Mojave desert while prospecting for gold. They left Banning a few weeks ago and at last accounts their provisions had given out and their horses had succumbed to the heat. A prospector who returned from the desert yesterday reports finding two bodies answering their description lying on the desert twenty-five miles from Volcano Springs, near which point the missing men were last seen. The dead horses of the prospectors were also found and their trappings tally with those purchased by Clark and Sanford.

REFUSE TO BUILD THE BOATS.

Italian Shipbuilders Go Back on a Contract Made with Spain for Cruisers.

Madrid, July 28.—The Genoese firm of shipbuilders, Ansaldo, have refused to ratify the contract made by their agent with the Spanish government for the purchase of two cruisers, and their action has caused much excitement here. It is reported that the vessels in question have been bought by the United States.

Connecticut's Reformatory.

New Haven, July 28.—The reformatory commission, created by the late general assembly, of which Prof. McCook of Trinity college is president, has accepted plans for the proposed new reformatory, which is to be located at Hartford. The plans call for an enclosure of eleven acres and buildings to accommodate 1,000 prisoners. There are to be an administration building, four cell blocks, a manual training school, a graded school, a hospital, a gymnasium, and a workshop, besides other necessary structures. The buildings are to be constructed of free stone, fire-finished brick, and terra cotta.

Shoe Lasters' Strike at Lynn.

Lynn, Mass., July 28.—The labor leaders succeeded yesterday afternoon in getting all the men who went to work in the shoe factory of Thomas G. Plant company to quit the shop and remove their working kits from the factory. The men, twenty-nine in number, were given dinner at the expense of the lasters' union. They returned to New York and Brooklyn last night, also at the expense of the lasters' union.

Labor Organization in Japan.

Fall River, Mass., July 28.—Secretary Howard has received a communication from Samuel Gompers asking for all possible data to be used by a Japanese trades union among the textile operatives in Japan. The organizer mentioned is a graduate of Columbia college, who has been working among his people in Japan two years.

Desperate and Fatal Hand-to-Hand Battle

Nevada City, Cal., July 28.—The dead bodies of Sheriff Douglas and an unknown highwayman who had committed many robberies single-handed during the past two weeks were found two miles from here yesterday. There were many wounds on the bodies, and the men had evidently had a desperate hand-to-hand fight.

Suicide of a Young Business Man.

Clinton, Mass., July 28.—Arthur L. Fitch, chair manufacturer, and one of Sterling's most popular young men, shot himself last evening on the bridge over the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad tracks. He was 25 years of age.

OUR CONSULAR SERVICE.

Germany Trying To Bring Her System Up to the Standard of the United States.

Washington, July 28.—United States Consul Monoghan at Chemnitz regards it as worthy of note that, while earnest efforts are being made in the United States to reform the consular service, a movement is afoot in Germany to reform the consular service of that country so as to bring it up to the present efficiency of that of the United States. At the request of the government the Rhineland and Westphalian union for the protection of the empire's industrial interests has handed in an essay, founded upon a thorough investigation, dealing with the necessity of this reform, and suggesting better training of German consuls, especially in the practical school of commerce and traffic. They complain that the present service is too bureaucratic, and that the consuls are not so closely in touch with their people as those of the United States, and that their reports are so delayed as to be of little use. Another report from Mr. Monoghan shows how far behind the United States Europe is in the matter of electrical propulsion of railway cars. He says that the total number of electrical railways, street and others, in Europe went up in 1895 from 70 to 111, and the total length of the lines from 700 to 902 kilometres (a kilo being 3,250 feet). Germany with 406 kilometres leads the list, France comes next with 132 kilometres, England has only 94 and Portugal ends the list with 2.8 kilometres.

CASTLE ISLAND DISASTER.

Historical Society, the Boat Contractor and the City of Boston Held Responsible.

Boston, July 28.—The blame for the Castle Island disaster of June last has been fixed by Judge Fallon of the South Boston municipal court upon the South Boston Historical society, Wm. E. Sheldon, the boat contractor, and the city of Boston. The court finds that the Historical society "is very much to blame;" that Wm. E. Sheldon "is principally responsible," and that the city of Boston is to a "great extent responsible" for the accident which resulted in the drowning of four children on that day. The police department is the only one of all the parties who were connected with the events of Farragut Day celebration which led up to the sad accident, that is held not blamable. All these findings are made in a report of the inquest which was held by Judge Fallon and filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court.

PITTSBURG'S FATAL STORM.

Two Persons Killed and One Mortally Injured—Monetary Loss, $100,000.

Pittsburg, July 28.—The cyclonic storm which burst upon this city yesterday afternoon killed two men, fatally injured another, and caused a monetary loss of $100,000. Hundreds of trees were uprooted, chimneys blown down, and windows demolished. The blowing down of a huge tree upon the tent of a club at a picnic grove was the cause of the death and injury of the three men above mentioned. The storm spent its fury in ten minutes. Dispatches from Columbus, O., state that the storm there and at Delaware and Delphos blew the roofs off of many houses and factories, demolished several church steeples, and smashed hundreds of panes of glass. At Delphos six persons were injured.

STETSON WILL CASE.

Understood That Judge Grant Has Decided To Admit the Document to Probate.

Boston, July 28.—It is understood that Judge Grant of the Suffolk probate has decided to allow the will of the late John Stetson, jr. The will will be probated at the next regular sitting of the court, which occurs day after to-morrow. The effect of the allowance of the will is that the mother of Mrs. Catherine Stokes Stetson, who is Mrs. Stokes of New York, is entitled to the property as heir of the daughter, who died intestate. The contestants of the will will undoubtedly take an appeal from the decree allowing the will. This they may legally do at any time within thirty days after the decree has been entered in the probate court.

Sank Their Boat; Deserted the Crew.

St. Johns, N. F., July 28.—The schooner Effie has arrived here from the Grand Banks, bringing twenty-one Frenchmen belonging to the schooner Anna Marie of St. Pierre, which was run down by the schooner Pacificque on Thursday last and sank within an hour. The Pacificque held on her course heedless of the cries for help of those who left the sinking vessel. The Anna Marie's crew, however, took to their boats and were saved. There are seventy-seven shipwrecked bank fishermen at this port.

Bequests to Churches.

Newport, R. I., July 28.—The will of Mrs. Thomas A. Lawton, daughter of the late Alfred Smith, has just been probated. The Channing Memorial church of this city receives some $25,000, while the Congregational church at Dighton, Mass., receives $5,000 and the Smith Memorial hall of that place $5,000, the income of which is to be used for repairs.

Democratic Politics in Maine.

Bath, Me., July 28.—E. F. Hanson of Belfast was in Bath yesterday consulting chairman George Hughes and Hon. Arthur Sewall. Mr. Sewall will say nothing about the candidates for the democratic gubernatorial nomination, but thinks that the new convention will pass resolutions endorsing the Chicago platform.

Must Return to Germany for Trial.

Washington, July 28.—The state department has issued a warrant of extradition for George Grothausen, now held in New York, for forgery committed in Berlin, Germany.

REVEILLE ON SHIPBOARD.

The Bugle Calls All Hands to Lash Up the Hammocks.

Let us spend a day on board of a man-of-war and see how this is done. Let us suppose that she is in port. We take our place on her deck very early in the morning. The heavens are bright with stars, and about us masts and rigging, smokestacks and ventilators rise up in shadowy outlines, while the big guns loom ill-defined and ghostlike. In the gangway sentinels are pacing; on the bridge a quartermaster keeps his lookout; and back and forth on the quarter-deck paces an officer, alone. By the light of a lantern he presently consults a book for the "morning orders," which have been written by the executive officer the night before; and then he directs the quartermaster to call the boatswain's mate, the hammock stowers, the master-at-arms and the bugler. Then passes a period of ten minutes, during which a few shadowy figures appear on deck and take their stand beside the long, trough-like places in the ship's bulwarks known as the hammock nettings, opening them up and preparing them for the reception of the hammocks. Then, at the time assigned in the morning orders, the officer of the deck gives his first routine order: "Sound the reveille! Call all hands!"

THE SHIP'S BUGLER.

At once there ring out in the hitherto silent ship those merry bugle notes known to almost all of us. To them have been fitted the words:

I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up in the morning.
I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up at all!

The captain's worse than the sergeant;
The sergeant's worse than the corp'ral;
The corp'ral's worse than the private;
But the major's the worst of all!

I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up in the morning.
I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up;
I can't get 'em up at all!

The last note is followed by the shrill whistle of a boatswain's mate and the prolonged, hoarse cry: "A-a-a-ll ha-a-nds!"

Then on the decks below you can hear the master-at-arms rushing from hammock to hammock, giving the sluggards a slap and a shake and repeatedly crying:

"Heave out; heave out and lash up!"

Run below and watch the feet and legs dangling from the swinging hammocks; see the sailors drop from them to the deck like bats from the limbs of trees, then neatly fold their blankets, roll them up with the mattress in the hammocks and pass around the latter seven times a rope lashing until each resembles a huge sausage. Then, unslinging them from the hooks overhead, they carry them hastily on deck to the nettings; for in ten minutes after that bugle call of reveille every hammock must be stowed away, and anyone who comes later with his hammock is reported for punishment by the officer of the deck to the captain.—Lieut. John M. Ellicott, in St. Nicholas.

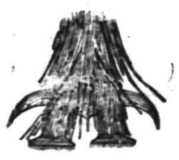
"The Foot of a Fly"



says an eminent English doctor, "will carry enough poison to infect a household." In summer-time, more especially, disease germs fill the air, multitudes are infected, fall ill, die; multitudes escape. These messengers of mischief do not exist for millions. Why not? Because they are healthy and strong—protected as a crocodile is against gun-shot. It is the weak, the wasted, the thin blooded who fall; those who have no resistive power so that a sudden cough or cold develops into graver disease. We hear of catching disease! Why not catch health? We can do it by always maintaining our healthy weight.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, is condensed nourishment; food for the building up of the system to resist the attacks of disease. It should be taken in reasonable doses all summer long by all those whose weight is below the standard of health. If you are losing ground, try a bottle now.

Treasury Gold Reserve To-day Stands at $105,073,919.

SUCCESS OF THE BANKS' EFFORTS

Committee of the Foreign Exchange Bankers at New York Complete a Plan for the Protection of Gold Exports During Next Ninety Days.

Washington, July 28.—The treasury gold reserve is gradually creeping up, the official figures standing to-day at $105,073,919.

New York, July 28.—The committee of seven appointed at the recent meeting of exchange bankers to devise a plan for the prevention of gold exports during the next ninety days, have presented a complete report to the full body at a meeting held at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. The plan was pronounced effective and was unanimously adopted and the committee discharged. The plan will take effect immediately. A member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. said that no public statement would be made at this time. The Brooklyn banks are beginning to tender gold to the United States treasury through Mr. Tappen, in exchange for legal tender notes. The People's bank of Brooklyn has offered to deposit $10,000, and the First National bank and others in that city and the Queens County bank of Long Island City, also will give up a proportionate amount of their gold for the treasury.

Additional Aid from Boston Bankers.

Boston, July 28.—Additional pledges of gold for the relief of the treasury have been made by the following: First Ward bank, $20,000; International Trust company, $10,000; Faneuil Hall National bank, $25,000; total, including $183,000 pledged by the trust companies, $2,250,000.

NEW YORK TAILORS' STRIKE.

Contractors and Workmen Will Wait for the Bosses To Make the First Move.

New York, July 28.—There was some deviation last night from the plan which the men of the Brotherhood of Tailors, now on strike, and the Contractors' association had made to fight the manufacturers, and there were a few scrimmages between union and non-union men. The executive board of the brotherhood met, and then Meyer Schoenfeld said that resolutions had been adopted stating that inasmuch as the contractors' association was not in a position to control all the contractors, the executive board of the Brotherhood of Tailors would settle with the individual contractors. When the leaders of the contractors heard this they hurried to Schoenfeld and held a conference with him. Then there was a secret conference between committees of the contractors and the tailors. After the conference Schoenfeld said it had been agreed that the Brotherhood of Tailors could not settle with any individual contractors, and that the contractors agreed that they would compel those contractors that were outside of that organization to join it. Both the contractors and tailors will wait for the manufacturers to make the first move. There are about 300 members in the contractors' association, and as many outside of it.

Mortality in New York State.

Albany, July 28.—The bulletin of the state board of health for the month of June shows the reported mortality for the month to be 9,432, two hundred less than that of the preceding month, but 600 greater than that of June, 1895. The customary decrease in mortality is less than usual. Next to November, June is the healthiest month of the year in this state.

Cleveland's Great Bicycle Parade.

Cleveland, O., July 28.—Undismayed by threatening weather upwards of 15,000 bicycle riders participated in the great centennial weeel parade yesterday afternoon. Major McKinley with a group of friends reviewed the parade from a large stand in front of the city hall. The riders cheered him as they went by and the people on the sidewalks nearby helped them out.

The Navigator Blamed.

London, July 28.—The board of trade has decided that the loss of the steamship Drummond Castle off Ushant, on June 16, resulting in the drowning of about 200 persons, only one passenger and two seamen being saved, was due to the fact that she was not navigated with propet seamanlike care in view of the prevailing conditions.

Reading Statement for June.

Philadelphia, July 28.—The statement of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company for June, 1896, shows a profit for the month of $826,352. From this is deducted payments for equipments, improvement and fixed charges amounting to $837,024, thus showing a deficit for the month of $10,672.

FULLER MURDERERS

Bram and Brown Arraigned at Boston Again To-day.

STORY OF THE COLORED STEWARD

In Private Conversation He Tells of the Suspicious Actions of a Sailor and Says the Trial Will Develop Sensational Features.

Boston, July 28.—The hearing of Bram and Brown, first mate and sailor respectively on the Herbert Fuller, charged with the triple murder on board that vessel on the high seas, and who arrived here yesterday with the rest of the crew and Lester H. Monks, the only passenger on board the barkentine at the time of the tragedy, are again before United States Commissioner Fiske to-day. All of the crew besides the accused are held as witnesses, Mr. Monks being released on his own recognizance.

Story Told by Colored Steward.

While waiting in the marshal's office, Spencer, the colored steward, said in conversation: "I do not think it is fair for people to make so much talk about Monks navigating the ship into Halifax. All I have got to thank him for is that he loaned me his revolver. With that in my possession I was able to do a good deal. Monks had never been on board a ship before and he was sick before he came on board, and seasick after we got outside. The great wonder is that he was able to compose himself at all when he met the mate after leaving the cabin. He had to go through the cabin where the bodies were; he could not help it, but he was afraid to notify me because the mate would not come forward with him. I don't want to say a great deal about this affair at present, but there will be some interesting developments at the trial. I was about the only one that Bram talked much to before the murder and I believe it was all planned beforehand. I know just after leaving the port I was a little worried about my wife, who is in a delicate condition, and one day I told Bram that I had been worrying but that I felt better then. He looked at me and said, 'well, I do not feel happy yet.' That night the murders were committed.

Something To Be Explained.

"There are some things that will have to be explained in connection with Bram and Brown, to show that both did not know what was going to happen. When I went to the little window in the cabin through which Brown claims to have seen the murders committed, I found that the brass bar had been bent and that the curtains were thrown aside. Brown admitted to have done this, and he left the wheel to do it. He could not see what went on in the cabin from where he stood at the wheel. I know, myself, that sometimes when I wanted to see whether 'the missus' was down there I had to put my face close to the glass before I could see anything, and that night the light in the cabin was so dim, as it always was, that nobody could see down there unless they took particular pains to go to the window, push aside the curtains and look down. We kept a close watch on the suspected men the next day, and there is another one of the sailors who may know something about this affair when he is made to testify. This man was on the watch below at the time, and the next day the passenger called my attention to the mate, who took occasion to talk to this sailor through one of the windows of the house. As soon as I saw them I ran over and asked the mate what the matter was. He turned it off by saying the sailor asked him what was to be done, and he had told him they had decided to put Brown in irons.

Speak Well of Monks' Conduct.

"I don't believe that was the subject of their conversation at all and I do not know what to think of that sailor, for he certainly acted queerly. When he saw me with the revolver after the murder he shook like a leaf and looked frightened to death. He asked me if that was the gun the captain had killed himself with, and I said to him 'you know very well he didn't kill himself.'" Spencer would not give the name of this sailor. The other men did not have a great deal to say, but seemed to think young Monks had conducted himself well under such terrible circumstances and according to the sailors' stories they all had a hand in navigating the ship and did not require a master after they had got a course to Halifax.

To Command the Herbert Fuller.

Boston, July 28.—Capt. McLaughlin will take command of the barkentine Herbert Fuller and is now on his way to Halifax. His services were secured by the owners when it was found that Capt. Ernst Nash, the murdered captain's brother, had declined the proffered position, although he went to Halifax to take charge of the vessel. It is said that enough men have already been secured to man the vessel, and in the course of a few days she will resume her voyage to Rosario.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Doing Well.

Newport, R. I., July 28.—Dr. McLane, who came on from New York with Cornelius Vanderbilt Sunday, states today that his patient is very comfortable and there are no signs of any ill effects from the trip up the sound. He believes that Mr. Vanderbilt's improvement will now be very rapid.

Will Vote for McKinley.

Augusta, Me., July 28.—In a letter to attorney F. L. Staples of this city, President Hyde of Bowdoin college, who is a democrat, announces that he shall vote the republican ticket. He gives as his reason, "the maintenance of financial integrity."

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Local Thunder Showers Tonight; Probably Fair Wednesday.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 81 Degrees.

Congressman McEwan, of the Seventh District, has reconsidered his decision and will accept a renomination.

The War Cry, the organ of the Salvation Army, paid a compliment to The Press last week by publishing entire the report of Commander Booth-Tucker's recent address in this city which was printed in this paper.

It is probable that Augustus Cutler, who was a candidate for the Democratic nomination of Governor last fall, will be the candidate for Congress in the Fourth District this year against Mahlon Pitney. He is a silver Democrat.

Congressional conventions are being called by the Republicans. The First District Convention will be held on Thursday at Woodbury, when Henry C. Loudenslager will be renominated for a third term. The Second District Convention will be held at Atlantic City on September 3d, when Congressman John J. Gardner will be renominated, also for a third term. The Fourth District Convention will be held at Phillipsburg on August 15th when Mahlon Pitney will be renominated.

Since the conventions of the two great parties have been held, their principles enunciated and candidates selected, we have been constantly importuned to lend either editorial aid or condemnation to one or the other standards, but it is well known that The Press is not given to advocating the election of candidates of political parties. The Press is primarily and essentially a paper for the dissemination of local news, and this function it is the intention to continue to the end—a newspaper for the people and not an organ for the advancement of any one political faith. However, The Press will, as usual, open its columns for a moderate discussion of both sides of the issues involved in this approaching election, and in this manner permit a clearer and more honest influence to effect the mind of the undecided voter than the sentiments of party bias could possibly assert.

PERTH AMBOY'S MORMON COLONY

Its Permit to Hold Open-Air Meetings Revoked by the Mayor.

In his sermon Sunday morning the Rev. George B. VanDyke, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Perth Amboy, spoke of the formation of a colony of Mormons there and denounced the leaders and Mormonism. The Mormon converts have been holding meetings there for about two years, and a company of thirty left for Utah a few months ago.

Mayor Tice announced last night that he had revoked the permit granted several weeks ago for the Mormons to hold open-air meetings on the streets. He says that the Mormon principles are incompatible with morality and good citizenship. Captain Samuel Hornsby, a member of the City Council and son of a Mormon elder, will probably question the Mayor's right to permit the Salvation Army and the American Volunteers to hold meetings while he denies the privilege to the Mormons.

ELECTORS MEET AUGUST 27TH.

Republicans Decide Not to Change the Basis of Representation.

The Executive Committee of the State Republican Committee met in secret session in Newark yesterday. After fixing the date for the Electoral Convention on August 27th in Trenton, it decided not to materially change the basis of representation as in force heretofore. This system allows one delegate for every 200 votes, and one for the fraction not below 100. The Conger Strong contest for representation of the State Committee was heard. Strong opposed Conger's acceptance, claiming that he was illegally elected. Conger will make his explanation on August 3d, to which date the committee adjourned. Garret A. Hobart was not in attendance.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints,—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

The New Brunswick Times characterizes Plainfield as a right smart country town, and leads one to infer that New Brunswick is the utopia of modern civilization. What rank libel. Why, in the glare of the footlights of popularity Plainfield occupies the procenium box while New Brunswick perches on the back rail in the topmost gallery. New Brunswick looks at the good side of the world through smoked glasses.

* * * * * *

I see that Lieutenant E. A. Ransom, who is in charge of the American Volunteers in New Brunswick, has succeeded in innoculating the spirit of brotherly love between the Salvationists and Volunteers to such an extent that they joined energies on a recent evening and held an open-air meeting together. This reminds me that Lieutenant Ransom recently gave up a good position on the New York Advertiser to enter the Volunteer work. During Captain Mimms' sojourn in this city while she was in charge of the local post of Volunteers Lieutenant Ransom was a weekly visitor to this city. There was a tinge of romance in the fast friendship of the then young reporter and Captain Mimms. The story is told to me that Ransom was given an assignment one evening which brought him into a Salvation Army meeting—previous to the time Ballington Booth withdrew—and there he met Captain Mimms for the first time. She has a sweet, winning way about her, and the young newspaper man seemed drawn towards her. A friendship was formed and Ransom frequently attended the meetings which she conducted, finally resulting in presenting himself at the penitential form. After Ballington Booth withdrew from the Army and formed the Volunteers, Captain Mimms was one of the first to secede with him. Naturally, Ransom followed too. The new organization was in need of officers and he determined to enter the work. After a time he was sworn in as a Lieutenant, assigned to a Philadelphia post, and now, I see, he is in New Brunswick. But to continue the thread of romance between he and Captain Mimms it can be said that the friendship which was formed developed into an affair of Cupid and resulted in the betrothal of the couple. When the wedding is to take place I cannot say.

I am told that the trolley car that makes the last trip on the Netherwood route at night does not go further than the switch at Webster place if there are no passengers beyond that point. This is not a good method of following the schedule. Passengers or no passengers, the railway people can well afford to make this a complete trip at midnight as well as midday. Suppose there is some belated individual awaiting the arrival of the car at the other end of the road to convey him to the center of the city.

* * * * * *

No dime novel is more lurid in its details than the experience of the young Brooklynites who were arraigned in city court yesterday morning while on their way to the wild west to annihilate Indians and bad people in general with their toy revolvers. They were living expositions of the yellow-hued blood-curdling tales.

* * * * * *

It seems that half of Plainfield's population are at the seashore. Asbury Park is the mecca of recuperation to which most faces are turned.

* * * * * *

Johnston's drive, at the end of the Somerset street trolley line, seems to be a popular point of congregation for people who are out strolling on Sunday. The long and thick grass and the inviting shade of the numerous trees in that immediate vicinity provides a pleasant point to loll for a few minutes. The Plymouth Brethern make it a point to conduct one of their open-air meetings at this point ever Sunday afternoon, and naturally they have a large number of hearers.

to those suffering from catarrh or the thousands subject to severe attacks of cold in the head, will not be amiss if a sure remedy can be offered. Ely's Cream Balm has become a favorite in all sections of the United States, because of its effectiveness. Your cold in the head will be quickly relieved by it, and the severest attack of catarrh will yield to, and be perfectly cured by a thorough treatment. Catarrh is not a blood disease, but inflammation of the passages of the nose and throat, due to climatic changes.

We Begin to Die

The moment we are born. It may not seem so, but it is so.

To be successful in the fight against death, who pounces upon us at every turn, we should keep every organ of the body, in the most perfect working order.

This is particularly true of the kidneys, upon the health and activity of which the purity of our blood and our freedom from disease germs depends.

Dr. Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills prevent Bright's Disease. Kidney and Bladder trouble, and filter out of the blood every poison and impurity, whether from imperfectly digested food, Malaria, Rheumatism, or other causes. The Kidneys are the standard bearers in the great struggle against death, and Dr. Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills their ablest ally.

Union County Republicans Meet.

The Union County Republican Executive Committee held a largely attended meeting at Elizabeth on Saturday afternoon to make arrangements for the fall campaign. Considerable preliminary work was done, favorable reports were received of the outlook for Republican success in the county, and much enthusiasm was displayed. The party leaders claim that Union County will roll up a substantial majority for the National and State tickets.

TERRIFIC WIND AND RAIN

lightning left no marks of its ingress or exit.

The borough did not escape damage from the terrific storm, and several instances of its visitation are reported. Robert Carson's barn on Belmont avenue was struck by lightning and every board in the structure was splintered. The hay was set on fire, but the drenching rain soon extinguished the flames. Fortunately there were no horses in the barn. The damage to the barn is heavy.

On Manning avenue, near Somerset street, a large handsome maple tree was blown over, and another tree on Lincoln place, near Somerset street, was broken off near the trunk by the wind. On Duer street, near Linden avenue, a large tree was blown over into the street. A farmer named Quimby, living twelve miles over the mountains, reported that the roadway from his place to the borough was obstructed in a number of places by fallen trees and shrubbery. He was late in reaching town in consequence.

A small tree was completely split in two on Prospect avenue, near the Cedar brook bridge by the heavy wind while sundry branches in the neighborhood were twisted off by the same cause.

A torrent of water came down Clinton avenue, overflowed the gutter and washed away the cinder sidewalk at the corner of this thoroughfare and South Second street.

At the height of the shower last evening a cyclist rode through the water which had formed under the Watchung avenue railroad bridge to the depth of eighteen inches, to the great amusement of a crowd of spectators who were seeking shelter under the bridge.

The storm was an electric one of unusual force, one of the most severe that has visited this neighborhood for a long time. The lightning was almost continual and the thunder rolled and crashed with terrible vigor. The wind still continued to blow a gale and the trees twisted and bent before its force. Large limbs were torn off and many trees blown over. Awnings, little sheds and arbors were wrecked while the wind played havoc in countless other ways. The air was full of electricity and the systems for the electric lighting of many buildings were rendered temporary useless by the burning out of the fuse.

There was trouble on the power circuit of the Plainfield Electric Light company and the trolley cars were stalled all along the line. The current would return after a wait only to disappear again. The broken branches snapped many telegraph and telephone wires and caused a ground on the fire alarm system. The telephone office was a lively place for a while but the entire system was in working order again in the evening when the burnt out fuses were replaced by new ones.

Two large trees on Central avenue, one in front of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and the other between Seventh and Eighth streets, were uprooted by the storm and the sidewalk was torn up in their fall. They blocked that thoroughfare and the police placed a lantern on each to warn drivers.

Regular seas formed under the railroad bridges in which the water was up to the hubs of the wagons and also invaded the sidewalks and made them unpassable to pedestrians unless they cared to wade. The trolley cars were blocked at the Watchung avenue bridge by the water.

For a time there were no cars running but despite constant stops the trip on the Fourth and Somerset street branches were made. No attempt was made to go further west than Grant avenue on the West Front street line until the storm had abated.

Out in the country the storm had full sweep and fences, trees and sheds went down before it. The apple crop in this vicinity was nearly ruined for the small green apples were almost entirely shaken from the branches while many trees were twisted or torn to pieces.

John Y. Barrett, of Rockview Farm, North Plainfield, suffered severely from a too intimate acquaintance with the lightning. When the storm began, he rushed to the barn to look after the horses there. The lightning apparently struck close to the barn for it filled the interior and ran over a bicycle that lay in the barn. There was a terrible crackling sound and Mr. Barrett was stunned by the shock. When he reached the house again, he was taken very ill and remained that way during the night. His illness was not serious, however, and he had almost recovered this morning. Several trees were struck in that neighborhood.

The storm was felt with all its force at Dr. Lewis' camp near Washington Rock, where the tops of the tallest trees were blown almost to the ground, but they were tough and resisted the storm. The camp wns not injured in the slightest, and the two tents there successfully resisted the wind and rain.

The Mountain Park Inn also withstood the storm. The view from there when the storm was at its height was something magnificent.

—all that money he must have!" wringing her hands again.

"That is his affair. It is not mine. If the Duke des Sarazines Beauxlieux has a purse befitting him, he came by it as the earth comes by the sun, through the grace of God. It is not possible that white should be black, and Beauxlieux is white! White as innocence and goodness. No, no, no, do not give it a thought. You wrong yourself. My God! You've wronged him. We must look elsewhere."

"But why does the suspicion,—oh, the terrible, hateful suspicion, the dreadful facts! Why do they all arrange themselves about him?" she persisted. "Alas! Alas! Why indeed do I live? Why does not my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth? It is my son of whom I speak! Oh, we have had misfortune, Etienne, such misfortune! But never such misfortune, such despair as this!"

"It is certainly a misfortune to lose the jewels," said Etienne with calmness, the calmness of unbroken faith. "There is no other misfortune about it. We will take steps for their recovery. But as for Beauxlieux,—it is preposterous! No, no, two and two do not make three! That white flame of his burns without dross."

"Ah, I believe you!" the poor duchess cried. "And what balm you bring a sore heart! Oh, Etienne, what should I do without you!"

But when night came, and the duchess was in her own rooms again, the horror of doubt and fear overcame her anew. There was her son's portrait as Jean had drawn it—the sweet seriousness, the lofty gravity, the piercing eye, the tender mouth. The candle flickering under it gave it a seeming life. She flung herself down before it as if it were an altar. "How, how, how could I doubt you?" she cried. "And, oh, how can I help it!" she said, presently. She knelt at her prie-dieu for hours, but felt that help forsook her. She took the candlestick and went into her son's rooms—bare, studious rooms, without an ornament or luxury, only one picture on the walls, a face crowned with thorns. "He gave Himself for the love of man," Beauxlieux once had said. "And can I do less?"

As she went back the enormity of her own behavior overwhelmed her. But directly afterward she saw her handkerchief, fallen on the floor—one of several he had sent her—knowing she loved fine, sheer things, and had used coarse ones so long. She snatched it and tore it with her teeth; then as she walked the floor she paused at the great armoire where Olympe had put away the things of his childhood. She unclosed it and lifted the little frock. She recalled him in it, running to meet her, his hair flying, his arms extended, his sweet face overflowing with smiles. He had not forgotten how to smile then. There was the little cap, too; her own fingers had wrought it for him before he was born, and what hopes and what prayers she had wrought into it! Here was a scarf he had worn at his first communion; here were the curls, the silken curls Olympe had shorn from his dear head. She kissed them passionately; she wet them with her crying, a mother grieves so over the memorials of the dead! She had no longer a child.

It was the next day that Beauxlieux came down from town to the chateau. The duchess did not go to meet him as usual. She sent for him instead to come to her. She was standing at her dressing-table, strewn with the empty jewel cases, white as alabaster, her long black gown sweeping round her, her eyes like those of a fate.

FOR A MOMENT HE WAS SILENT.

Startled by her appearance, he hastened toward her with an exclamation. But she threw out her arms in an interposing gesture. And then she wavered as she stood; and with a stride he was beside her, and, his arm about her, he had led her to a seat, and throwing himself on his knees before her, he drew her face over to his. "What is it, my mother?" he murmured. "What ails thee? Art thou ill? Art thou suffering? Lean on me, kiss me, dear, sweet mother."

She withdrew from his clasp and pushed him off a little, her hand flat on his chest. "Oh!" she cried, transfixing him with her great despairing eyes. "Oh! how could you, how could you do it?"

CHAPTER VI.

For a moment, Beauxlieux looked bewildered. He glanced round the room where the light of the dreary autumn day came in through the faded daffodil draperies as if the sun were still shining without.

"I do not understand you," he said. "What does this mean, my mother? What disaster, what misfortune—"

"What disaster!" she cried, sharply. "And you ask! You! Is there worse disaster than when a mother finds her son—Oh, I cannot say it!" tearing open the lace at her throat. "When she discovers—and a Beauxlieux—"

"Ah!" he exclaimed. "It is that, then. My faith, I had almost forgotten! I never dreamed it was going to affect you so, my mother—"

"Not your mother!" she almost shrieked. "Never the mother of—a—thief!"

"What!" he cried, instantly upon his feet. "Does anyone—even my mother—" and then with a look at her his old gentleness and pity and love were uppermost again. "My mother," he said gently, then. "My mother, were they not mine?"

"Then why not take them openly? Why creep in the dark to do so foul a thing—"

"In the dark? Why, it is true I did not consult you. It seemed to me unnecessary. I thought you would object, and there would be so much to be said. And then here in your seclusion I thought you might never know."

"And does all that make it any the less robbery?" with a piercing scorn in her tone.

"Whom have I robbed? I certainly had the right. And Pierre paid me good money for them. He has done well, he says, the rogue. If that is doing well, he has done wonderfully—on the Bourse, in all the big enterprises. His hotel is a palace in the Faubourg. By the most singular turn of fortune, it is the old Hotel Beauxlieux itself—"

"Do you mean—" she exclaimed. "No, it is too shameful to be true! Can a man acknowledge in this unblushing way that he robbed his mother of her diamonds and took money for them! That he crept through her room at night to make off with every jewel—oh, not that I valued the diamonds! I would so gladly have given them if you had asked. Oh, oh, oh, the cruel, the accursed things that make me despise my own flesh and blood, my own son! No, what am I saying? I have no son!"

"Stop, stop, my mother! Go softly here. Is it that the long monotony and disappointment have disordered you? Of what were you speaking? What is it that you say about diamonds?"

She threw out her hands toward the empty cases on the table, his eyes following the movement. For a moment he was silent and transfixed, and he remained silent with perplexity and wonderment. But, directly his quick wit had taken in the truth, he looked at her again, the tears sparkling suspended on her cheeks. There were tears in his own eyes. He took her hand. "My mother," he said. "I would not think that under any circumstances you could have believed this of your son. Do you not see how it is? Victorine took your jewels. Pierre has disposed of them, and with the price of them he goes into his enterprises. It is the meaning of his wealth. And it is with the money he receives for the Beauxlieux diamonds that he buys the Bieuxlieux titles!"

"What is it that I hear you say?" cried the duchess, half startled out of the one terror by a new one. "The Beauxlieux titles! What of the Beauxlieux titles?"

"Why, nothing, except that I sold them to Pierre last June, and it is the matter of which I have been speaking. Not yours, madame; not any title belonging to you; you still retain your address of honor, you are still the Duchess des Sarazines Beauxlieux, if you choose, douairiere. But those which were my own, have I any use for them? I, a man without a fortune, and with other views? In these days when thrones go under and empires disappear in the gulf, and man, man climbs out, my mother, I count it shame to hold titles, not won by myself, but won by men whose very ashes no longer exist! I say to myself—the titles, they are a voice, a breath, they are non-existent attributes. But with the money that foolish Pierre is willing to pay me for leaving him alone if he assumes them, what can I not do for the people that were given in trust to those ancestors of mine who betrayed the trust? It will buy land, houses, maintain the prophets, the priests, of liberty. Perhaps—who knows—buy dynamite."

"Beauxlieux!"

"It will, at any rate, make my mother at ease all her days, I said. What succor will it take to sufferers! And if by means of it I can forward the cause of their uplifting and their freedom—ah, were it only one man who had held his head like a beast's to the earth that I helped to hold it up in the face of God, it is better worth to me than all the titles of all my forefathers. And so I sold them to him; sold them every one. I, Louis Dagobert Clovis Prince de Maria Angelique, no longer Duke des Sarazines Beauxlieux, Prince De Franche Lampis, Count des Aiguilles, Conte de Grande Landes, Baron Boissy, and all the absurd rest of them, my mother!"

"And for what remains," he said after a pause, "if it is honor to be Beauxlieux, the sale of no title can take that honor away. I am always and forever Beauxlieux," with an inexpressible pride of bearing.

"But it is impossible!" cried his mother. "I forbid it!"

"It is done," said Beauxlieux.

"But you do not confer titles—it is the king, the council, the ministers, the government—"

"The government confers no more. You forget that, whether one lives up to it or not, the motto now is liberty, fraternity, equality."

"You appall me! And, besides, he will not be allowed to wear them, the lache!"

"Who is to interfere? I shall not. Nor am I ever to marry. No!" as he saw the protest in her face. "Bring others into the world to sorrow, to struggle, to endure? No, no, there will never be anyone to disturb him. He appears in the world of Paris as the Duke des Sarazines Beauxlieux, and no one will ever be the wiser."

"But my son, Heaven forgive me—do you then assist at a fraud, a felony?"

"Hardly," said Beauxlieux, "the thing is too unsubstantial. What do the titles mean now in a republic? Nothing. He gives me a certain payment for leaving him to play his part in peace. My pride might rebel—but the money is so needed by those others, those poor creatures. And, moreover," said Beauxlieux, "I find the play sufficiently entertaining."

And then suddenly the duchesse threw back her head and opened her mouth with such a peal of laughter as in many a year before had not rung through that old pile.

"Victorine!" she cried, "Victorine the Duchesse des Sarazines Beauxlieux! Victorine! Oh, I see her now! Sieguenr Dieu, but it is too amusing! Victorine!"

And all her white teeth glistened and the tears rolled out of her eyes, tears of merriment, tears of joy.

"But not the less," she said, "if Victorine is a thief, if the Duchesse des Sarazines Beauxlieux is a thief, must be brought to justice!"

"No," said Beauxlieux. "We, who Beauxlieux, cannot afford to have the name dragged in the dust. All the diamonds in the world would not be worth it. And I have contracted with Pierre—I mean the duke—to that effect. If he in any way discredits the titles, I appear. Is it that you can forgive me now, my mother?"

"Oh, Beauxlieux," she said, rising and putting her hands on his shoulders, "there is no question of forgiveness. You could never forgive me, if there were. I could never forgive myself for my stupidity, my ignorance, my blindness, my crime! It is M. Etienne, Heaven bless him, who never doubted you. If he has something to hear, my son, he—he has also something to tell you. Oh, Beauxlieux, I am so happy, I feel as though I had wings!" And as she spoke, a level sunbeam broke from the low western clouds and fell across the room, and they saw gray sky and sullen sea transformed and glorified in a mist of gold.

Sometimes now in the summer months, the old chateau is gay with people; the family have come back Beauxlieux and Jean are there for a time. But for the greater part of the year the only sound within its walls (save the quiet footfall of Olympe, who ignores the existence of her niece, and feels that ruin is abroad, and of the few servants there) is the echo of the rolling surf and the crying of the storm on the gray Atlantic. Mme. Etienne, who cannot afford to wear the title worn by Victorine, lives with her husband in Paris, a Paris that has no knowledge of her in her former estate, and with whose men of wit and science and poetry she forgets old titles and old glories. Sometimes she hears of Victorine flaunting in the finery she loves still as when she risked all in the forest by stringing herself with the stolen jewels that Pierre might see how well their glory became her—Pierre, who, taking advantage of the stepping stone of those diamonds, has gone on adding wealth to wealth. Mme. Etienne trembles only lest some misdeed of his shall throw a stain on the name that has lived a thousand years, unblemished. Sometimes indestructible recollections give her a pang. But when her son—completely effaced though he may be from the eyes of the great world, as he goes and comes, on the dangerous errands to which he has devoted himself—returns to her for a breathing space, when she feels the velvet embraces of the little bourgeoise girl who has been born to her, and turning her head looks into the eyes of the man who has been her protector, loving her in silence for so many years, she feels the old Basque peasant woman assert her claim, feels herself espousing the cause of the people down there in the dark, in her different estate, and knows that she is unspeakably happier than the childless and lonely masquerader in the splendor of the Hotel des Sarazines Beauxlieux.

THE END.

Disproportioned Limbs.

By actual measurement of 50 skeletons the right arm and left leg have been found to be longer in 23, the left arm and right leg in six, the limbs on the right longer than those on the left in four, and in the remainder the inequality of the limbs was varied. Only seven out of 70 skeletons measured, or ten per cent., had limbs of equal length.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

CAMPAIGN LITERATURE.

Big Demand for It at Both Republican and Democratic Headquarters.

Washington, July 28.—The demand for campaign literature at republican and democratic congressional headquarters is unprecedented. Singularly enough the requests for sound money literature come largely from the doubtful middle and western states which the democrats are confident of carrying. On the other hand, the greatest interest is shown in silver literature in such of the eastern states as are believed to be reliably republican. This is especially true of New York, Pennsylvania and New England. Senator Mitchell of Wisconsin has been the only conspicuous caller at democratic headquarters during the past week. At that time Senator Mitchell was undecided whether to support the Chicago ticket or not. He is reported to have said that he was elected by gold democrats, and that he did not see how he could consistently favor an economic policy contrary to their wishes. Senator Jones of Arkansas, the chairman of the democratic national committee, will return to Washington within a few days, and this is interpreted to mean that the visit will be made in pursuance of his purpose to establish himself here during the campaign.

More Than 50,000,000 Speeches.

The announcement is made at republican headquarters that arrangements have been perfected whereby the state committeemen in the several states will be supplied with all the campaign literature prepared by the congressional committee. The principal speeches sent out from republican headquarters are McGleary's reply to Towne showing that the fluctuations of silver have had no bearing upon the prices of farm products; "Babcock on Money," and the speech of judge Geo. H. Aldridge of Dallas, Tex., on the free coinage of silver, which Senator Caffrey of Louisiana had printed in the Congressional Record last winter. It is estimated that more than 50,090,000 speeches of all kinds will be distributed by the republican congressional committee alone.

MARK HANNA AT NEW YORK.

The Republican National Chairman Was Due There About Noon To-day.

New York, July 28.—There were many callers at the Hotel Waldorf last evening looking for chairman Mark Hanna of the national executive committee of the republican party. They were disappointed, for the clerk of the hotel announced that he had as yet received no order from Mr. Hanna for rooms, and that the only word indicating that he would be in this city this week was the announcement received that he would probably be here by Thursday. When Mr. Hanna arrives it is said he will call a meeting of the executive committee and announce the plan of campaign. At the meeting Senator Quay and Messrs. Clayton and Manley are expected to be present. Vice-Presidential Candidate Hobart will probably meet the committeemen, and the active work of the campaign will be fully discussed and a line of action determined upon. Early this morning at the national republican headquarters it was stated that Mr. Hanna would reach this city before noon to-day. Word had reached there that Mr Hanna had left Cleveland at 6 o'clock last evening, and at the Waldorf it was said this morning that his rooms would be in readiness by that time.

Too Much Wind for Fishing.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 28.—President Cleveland was driven to the village postoffice yesterday afternoon, where he received his morning mail. He also made a brief stop at the Parker house to speak with an acquaintance. On account of the high wind down the bay he did not go fishing, but remained at Gray Gables.

Special Excise Agent.

Albany, July 28.—Alfred Tanner of Kingston has been appointed by State Excise Commissioner Lyman as a special agent under the new Raines liquor tax law. This is the first appointment under the competitive civil service schedule of special agents. Mr. Tanner is a veteran.

POPULIST CAMPAIGN

Currency To Be the Chief Question of Discussion.

MANY SPEAKERS ON THE LIST

Missouri Populists and Democrats To Fuse—Congressman Hartman Says He Believes Watson Will Consent to the Withdrawal of His Name.

St. Louis, July 28.—Among the speakers who will take the stump for the populist ticket will be Senator Butler, ex-Chairman Taubeneck, E. V. Debs, Robert Schilling, Gov. Llewelling, Senator Peffer, Mary E. Lease, Mrs. Roberts and many others, including Coxey and Carl Browne. The currency will be the chief question, and the women who will be sent out will make their special point of attack. Mrs. Roberts, in her speech in the convention seconding the nomination of Bryan, won for herself a reputation as one of the forcible of the women populist speakers. "Cyclone" Davis was discussing the outcome of the convention with a party of friends in the Lindell corridors last evening. He said: "There were a thousand men in that convention who differed with me, and there could have been but one result—the selection of Bryan. It was a case of either making them believe they were wrong and myself and little band of 250 were right, or give up. We had to give up. We were not all statesmen, and the 1,000 on the other side were neither fools nor traitors. We concluded they were right."

Fusion in Missouri.

Kansas City, Mo., July 28.—The plan of the populist leaders in this state is for fusion with the democrats. According to ex-Congressman Harris, the populists at their state convention next week will endorse the Bryan and Sewall electors whom the democrats will name on the preceding day. There have been no conferences regarding fusion in this state this year, but fusion seems to be generally approved by both parties. The populists propose to nominate their candidates for state offices and telegraph the result to the democrats, who are expected to endorse them.

Says Watson Must Withdraw.

Butte, Mont., July 28.—Senator Mantle and Representative Hartman, who have returned here, say that they support Bryan for president solely because he is a bimetallist. When the question is settled they will be republicans once more. "While I deplore that the populists put up another ticket," said Mr. Hartman, "yet I think that in thirty days there will be but one bimetallic ticket in the field. I think Watson will allow his name to be withdrawn. The ticket from a point of good politics must be Bryan and Sewall. On second thought Watson and the men who nominated him must concede this."

COMPETITOR PRISONERS.

How Gentlemen from the American Consulate Were Permitted To Visit Them.

Havana, July 28.—The son of Gen. Lee and two gentlemen from the American consulate held an interview with the Competitor prisoners on July 24. They were not permitted to enter the prison, but the seven men of the Competitor were taken outside of the fort to a guardhouse for the conference. Gen. Lee, being slightly indisposed, was not able to be there in person. The prisoners were closely guarded, a double line of pickets being stationed around the guardhouse. The prisoners had not been out of their cells before for two months. All appeared to be in fairly good health. It is understood that a review of the Competitor case will be taken up in the supreme court at Madrid some time in August. Nothing whatever has yet been done in the case.

Jersey Republican Committee.

Newark, N. J., July 28.—The republican state executive committee concluded its labors last evening, after fixing the date for the electoral convention on Aug. 27, at Trenton. It was decided not to materially change the basis of representation as in force heretofore. This system allows one delegate for every 200 votes and one for the fraction not below 100. Garrett A. Hobart was not in attendance. It was announced that he would meet Mark Hanna in New York city to-day.

Died from Self-Inflicted Injuries.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., July 28.—Dr. Max M. Weil, the young physician of New Rochelle who swallowed one ounce of concentrated carbolic acid and also gashed his throat with a razor Friday night at his home, died at the city hospital last night. Driven almost insane by the thought that he had given his wife an overdose of morphine, and that she would die, was the cause of his rash act. His wife recovered and is prostrated with grief.

Gen. Harrison in New York.

New York, July 28.—Ex-President Harrison and his wife arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel from the Adirondacks last night. Gen. and Mrs. Harrison were accompanied by Lieut. Parker, Mrs. Harrison's brother-in-law. Gen. Harrison said that he had come to New York to attend the meeting of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, which will take place at the Fifth Avenue hotel this evening, and to attend to some private business.

Hard Work Reaching Port.

Gloucester, Mass., July 28.—The fishing schooner Albert Caiger is at this port from a fishing cruise, leaking badly and in a damaged condition, having struck a ledge off No Man's Land. The crew had some difficulty in keeping her afloat until she made this port, where she will be repaired.

SPORTS

TUESDAY, July 28. Sun rises 4:51 a. m., sets 7:21 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:21 p. m. and 3:51 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Plainfield A. C. play the E.A.C. at Elizabeth next Saturday.

Miss Gertie Skillman, of South avenue, has purchased a Rugby of W. H. Rogers.

Daniel Page, of Elmwood place, visited friends at Florida Grove on his bicycle yesterday.

A bicycle stand has been placed in front of Randolph's pharmacy for the convenience of patrons.

Wm. Keefe, John Keefe, and Chas. Griebs, of the Keer & Martin Cycle Company, of Newark, visited in town Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Anderson, of Manning avenue, who started on a cycling trip through this section of the State last week, returned Sunday night.

Mrs. T. Burke, of West Third street, is fast solving the mysteries of bicycle riding on a new Crescent wheel recently purchased from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Mrs. J. E. Tyrrell and daughter, Mildred, rode to New Brunswick, Saturday on their bicycle, and spent Sunday with New Brunswick friends. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Stine.

A cyclist from Dog Corners coasted down the incline from the freight house to East Fourth street yesterday, and ran directly into a farm wagon. The look of agony on the face of the rider as he approached the wagon was something remarkable. The wheel was a perfect wreck while the man looked dilapidated.

Clifford Wharton, Jr., of Third place, and Will Baker, of Stelle avenue, returned last evening after a trip to Long Branch. They started Saturday taking their wheels and expected to return Sunday night. They rode to Branchport Saturday night expecting to catch the train there but they met with a rather unpleasant experience. The train hands refused to wait for them to put their wheels aboard and so they remained there over night in preference to leaving their wheels.

J. A. Stocker and G. G. Eckhardt took a bicycle trip to Perth Amboy Sunday, and while on the road the latter's wheel broke down and the rider was obliged to walk about a mile to a repair shop, but when he reached the shop he was unable to have his wheel repaired, and he had to walk to Perth Amboy where his wheel was finally fixed. The two cyclers then rode to Boynton Beach and from there home. Both riders were very much pleased with their trip.

Women at home and abroad are wearing a new cycling glove, one that is also admirably adapted to driving. The thumb and back are of tanned doeskin and tanned cope is used on the palm and underwrists. The fingers are provided with ventilation holes. The claim is made that the glove possesses great advantages for cycling purposes, owing to the freedom obtained by the hand, the ability to get a firm grip on the handle bar thorough ventilation and long wear.

In connection with the big demonstration at Philadelphia recently there was a voting contest for the most poplar bicycle. Following is the vote for all wheels receiving over fifty votes:

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Frank Hedden and "Spiel" Welch caught 21 catfish and 9 eels on Friday night at New Market.

Alex. Sargeant, Frank DeCamp, Billy Brown and Gus Martin went to Perth Amboy Sunday and succeeded in hooking over 600 sand porgies.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Marshall, of North avenue, and James Stryker, of the West End, went to Perth Amboy Saturday and spent ten hours in a boat fishing. They caught 115 porgies and weakfish.

"Wake up, Jacob, day is breaking!" so said De Witt's Little Early Risers to the man who had taken them to arouse his sluggish liver. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

INS AND OUTS.

The Riverdale A. C. team, of New York, will play the Y. M. C. A. team in this city next Saturday. The former is a first-class team and a good game may be expected.

Dislocated His Hip.

Samuel Till, the sexton of the Grace P. E. church, met with a serious fall this morning which dislocated his hip. He was crossing Plainfield avenue when his feet became tangled in a piece of loose wire, which threw him. He was taken to the hospital where Dr. Long set the bone. The dislocation is pronounced a most serious one, and it will probably confine Mr. Till for some-ime.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

[OFFICIAL.]

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, held on Thursday, July 2d, 1896, at 2:30 p. m.

Roll call showed the following members present, viz.:

Director Hubbard and Freeholders Brucklacher, Burnett, Clark, Ehrlich, Farrell, Huiskamper, King, Krouse, Littell, Miller, Ogden, Robison, Roll, Swain, Tier, Wahl—17. Absent—none.

The minutes of the previous meeting were on motion approved as read.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By Willow Grove Bridge Committee:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentleman: The committee on the Willow Grove road bridge, near L. Thies' place, Westfield, would respectfully report, after due examination, recommending the extending of the bridge twelve feet on the south side, with two stone abutments, iron "I" beams, and brick arches, the cost not to exceed $600. Signed,

Addison S. Clark, John Robison, Benj. King, John H. Tier, J. Martin Roll Committee.

Freeholder Tier moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which motion on roll call was unanimously adopted.

By South Street Bridge Committee:

Elizabeth, July 2nd, 1896.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentleman: The committee on South street bridge, at Elizabeth, would respectfully report that the contract for the construction of the said bridge was awarded on June 25th, 1896, to John Sheridan, of Elizabeth, for mason work at his bid of $2,770, and to W. T. Kirk, of Plainfield, for iron work at his bid of $3,900, said bids being the lowest ones received. The committee would recommend a further appropriation of $670 to cover the cost of building said bridge.

Signed, Fred. Miller, Chairman.

Freeholder Farrell moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which motion was on roll call adopted unanimously.

By Committee on Bridge in New Providence:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen: Your committee to examine bridge at Murray Hill, New Providence township would recommend that the said bridge be repaired and replanked at an expense not to exceed $75. Signed, John Wahl, John Robinson, Committee.

Freeholder Burnett moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which motion was on roll call unanimously adopted.

NEW BUSINESS—RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Farrell:

Resolved, That the bill of the Chapman Slate Co., in amount $190, for slate furnished, be paid when audited by the proper committee.

Freeholder Swain moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Clark:

Resolved, That the thanks of this board be tendered to the County Collector, E. M. Wood, for neatly bound copies of the laws of 1896, presented by him to each member of this board.

On motion of Freeholder Swain the resolution was adopted without dissent.

On motion of Freeholder Littell the board took a recess of fifteen minutes for the preparation of bills.

Upon being called to order after recess, roll call showed all members present.

A bill of T. F. McCormick, in amount $431.67, and containing a charge of $40 for sitting on the bench of the Circuit Court, was on motion referred to the County Attorney, and ordered to be paid if found correct.

GIFT TO WORCESTER HOSPITAL

Dedication of the Samuel Winslow Surgery Yesterday Afternoon.

Worcester, Mass., July 23.—The new Samuel Winslow Surgery at the Worcester City hospital, the gift of Col. Samuel E. Winslow to the city as a memorial of his father, the late ex-mayor, was dedicated yesterday. In the morning physicians from all over the country inspected the surgery, which cost $25,000 and is one of the finest in the country. The formal exercises were held late in the afternoon in the surgery. Mayor Sprague turned it over to the trustee of the hospital, whose spokesman was Dr. T. H. Gage.

Received Poisoned Wine and Cake.

New Haven, Conn., July 23.—Mrs. C. Hartels of Sherman avenue, this city, received by mail a day or two since a package of cake and a phial of wine. She received also a letter signed "S. R.," which stated that the cake and wine were portions of her correspondent's wedding feast. The cake smelled strongly of some chemical and the cake and wine were turned over to Dr. Converse. The latter found the cake saturated with carbolic acid and a great quantity of belladonna in the wine. The police are investigating.

Rhode Island Yacht Club.

Providence, July 23.—The Rhode Island Yacht club began its annual cruise yesterday with good wind and weather and with the largest fleet in its history, the big sloops including the rivals Tomahawk and Minerva. The run yesterday was to Wickford, to-day to Newport and to-morrow to Bristol.

Recognized by the President.

Washington, July 23.—The president has recognized Herbert William Broadley Harrison, consul of her Brittanic majesty at New York; Edouard Pesoli, consul of France at Philadelphia, and Duncan Bailly Blanchard, consular agent of France at Boston.

Her Great Advantage.

"The greatest pleasure of my life I get from my music," said she.

"What a great advantage you have over your neighbors," replied the unfeeling brute.—Odds and Ends

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

A Different Kind.

"Sorry, I'm sure," smilingly chirped Mr. Bimley, as the man put the bill grumblingly back in his pocket, "but if you will call around in another month I think I can arrange it."

The man shook his head.

"I wish you was a chicken," he growled, backing down the steps.

"Inasmuch as to wherefore?" asked Mr. Bimley, as a momentary gleam of interest passed over his countenance.

"Becos' you would then shell out in three weeks," retorted the man, as he wearedly put one foot before the other, and so vanished from sight.—N. Y. Recorder.

Not Like Father's.

"These biscuits," said Mrs. Newoman, while her faithful husband looked half fearfully, "are not like the ones my father baked."

As she paused the poor man wiped his eyes with his apron.

"Now, his," she continued, "were heavy and insipid, while yours are perfectly delicious. Why, what's the matter, dear?"

The reaction was too great. The overjoyed husband had fainted. — N. Y. World.

SOMERSET DEMOCRATS.

FORMER SPEAKER BERGEN INTERVIEWED ON POLITICAL SITUATION.

He Is a Strong Gold Man and Says the Democratic State Convention Must Stand by That Standard When They Meet.

It was announced yesterday, says The Herald this morning, that preparations are being made to have New Jersey represented in the coming convention to select a Democratic gold candidate for the Presidency and to give the sound money Democrats a platform to stand on. The absence of Senator Smith in Europe and the differences of opinion among the New Jersey delegates to Chicago and many of the leaders prevented crystallization of sentiment or action among the gold Democrats.

Former Speaker James J. Bergen, who represented the Third Congressional District in the National Convention, was at the State House, Trenton, yesterday. He is an avowed sound money Democrat, and when asked if New Jersey was going to stand by New York in its efforts to secure a gold platform and candidate he said:

"Yes, I think New Jersey will be found with the rest of the gold States. The State Convention fixed our position, and we must stand by it. Just how we will select our delegates I cannot say, because the ways and means are now under consideration. We will know more by this time next week. The matter is receiving the attention of some of our most prominent Democrats."

"Do you find much expression for silver?" was asked.

"I hear many men say that they hear that there is some silver talk here and some silver talk there, but I do not find anybody that directly declares he has been won over to silver. In my own county of Somerset there is very little silver sentiment. Many Democrats are talking for silver because it has been indorsed by the National Convention. On the other hand, gold Democrats generally regret that they are in the awkward position of either remaining inactive or going over to the camp of the enemy. There is a demand for the third candidate."

From other sources it was learned that there is to be a conference in a few days, which will be attended by Democrats who have declared against the Chicago platform. It is known that Allan L McDermott is favorable to a third candidate, but does not care to take the initiative because of the criticism of his course at Chicago.

INTERCEDED FOR HIS BROTHER.

An Italian Attacked a Greek With a Crowbar.

A serious assault occurred at Smalley Brothers stone crusher on Somerset street, this morning about 9 o'clock, when John Hull, a Greek, who is employed about the crusher, was struck in the head twice with a crow-bar by an Italian named Salvey who also works at the same place. The latter's brother and Hull engaged in a heated discussion about some subject when it appeared that Hull was getting the best of it.

It was then that Salvey jumped in with a crowbar and struck Hull, inflicting a deep scalp wound.

N. B. Smalley soon learned of the affair and found the injured man suffering considerable and blood flowing profusely from the ugly wound. Mr. Smalley took the man to the hospital where Dr. Long took charge of him. The doctor was unable at the time to tell whether the brain was affected or not, but it now looks as though he would recover. As yet nothing has been done with Salvey.

Sunday Observance League Dead.

The Westfield Sunday Observance League, of which so much has been heard for the last four or five weeks, is dead. P. J. R. Sjostrom, president of the Methodist Epworth League Chapter, originated the idea. There were eleven members and in a preemptory letter to all offenders, they ordered the strict observance of the Sunday Blue laws, threatening general prosecution if they were not obeyed. The threats were laughed at.

Two-thirds of an Appropriation Gone.

According to an approximate estimate there has been $10,000 spent by the city on Plainfield streets this year, and there is now about $5,000 left for the balance of the year. Out of the latter amount it is expected to put Front street in first-class condition. It is thought that next year the appropriation will not be quite so large, unless something unexpected happens.

CARNIVAL FRIDAY NIGHT

AS THE PARADE WAS READY LAST NIGHT A DRIVING RAIN SET IN.

Even the Greatest Expectations of the Promoters Realized in the Big Turnout and Unique Decorations and Costumes

A meeting of the parade committee of the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" was held at Grand Marshal Martin's store this morning, and it was decided to hold the bicycle parade on Friday evening, starting at 7:30 o'clock, the details of which will be the same as that planned for last evening.

Dame Nature celebrated Plainfield's first carnival night with a thunder storm that arrived in time to effectually put a stop to it just as it had begun.

The "Midsummer Night's Carnival" was not a failure, however, even if the rain did put an end to the bicycle parade before it had scarcely started, for it showed that Plainfield was more than willing to turn out and aid in making the first carnival a success worthy of the city. The cyclists came out in numbers even greater than the promoters of the affair expected and the decorations were numerous and elaborate. Visitors from the surrounding towns came, some to take part in the parade and others to look on, while the Plainfield people turned out like an army.

Of course, there was no parade, for the rain began to fall as the first division started out and by the time the head of the column reached Richmond street and LaGrande avenue, the water was falling in torrents. Everybody scorched for shelter and that part of the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" was over. The trolley cars kept on, however, and the band followed out the original plan. Finally the rain stopped, the stars came out, and the moon appeared on the scene and smiled as she saw the muddy streets, and thought of the disappointed paraders.

But the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" is not over yet. Plainfield will have another chance to see the bicycle parade, for Grand Marshal F. L. C. Martin decided, even as he was flying before the wild charge of the storm, that the bicycle part of the carnival would be postponed to a day when Weather Observer Naegle would agree to furnish good weather.

It's lucky, perhaps for him, that Weather Observer Naegle didn't show up last evening after it began to rain for, had the drenched cyclists who were taking refuge under every roof and shed laid eyes on him, the result could have only been one thing.

Ernestly and faithfully had the parade committee worked in the brief time given them to make the necessary arrangments and the results of their efforts showed that they had not been in vain and that Councilman Frost chose just the right man when he placed the parade under the charge of Frank L. C. Martin.

As early as 7 o'clock the would-be paraders began to appear and from that time up to 8 o'clock, the hour of starting, every street that led toward the starting point in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was crowded with wheelmen and wheelwomen, some in fantastic garb, others half hidden behind their elaborate decorations. There were many who had no extra decorations, but they helped to swell the numbers until the entire number of cyclists numbered over 500. It was very difficult to estimate the exact number in line, as the rain came on before the entire command was lined up in good order.

Grand Marshal Martin and his aides were kept hustling about, directing stray cyclists into the divisions in which they belonged and there arranging them in double column. There was a crowd of sightseers that thronged the starting place and persisted, as they always do, in standing in the wrong place, but they were successfully removed and at exactly 8 o'clock the shrill notes of a bugle notified all that the head of the column had started.

The parade was headed by Grand Marshal F. L. C. Martin, and then came his buglers, Wm. Pittis and Earl Stockton. Next rode the representatives of the police, our gallant Sergeant looking extremely well in his dress uniform, and popular Roundsman Mattox. The first division, commanded by Marshal's aid Louis G. Timpson, was the first in line. The approaching storm kept many away and sent others home, but the lady cyclists and their escorts turned out remarkably well. Almost every wheel in the division was decorated somewhat, and a few quite elaborate. One wheelwoman was apparently the "Lady in Straw," for her costume was completely covered with straw, arranged so as to give a very pretty ap-

FELL FROM A HIGH PERCH

ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY LINEMAN SHOCKED BY A LIVE WIRE.

Was Making Repairs When He Was Schocked and Fell a Distance of Thirty Feet and was Taken to the Hospital.

Patrick Kellegher, a lineman employed by the Plainfield Electric Light Company, sustained injuries this morning while at work which will confine him to the hospital for at least eight weeks. He and James S. Ellis, another lineman, were working together on West Third street, in front of Day's saloon. Kellegher was at the top of a pole among the wires, making some repairs.

He came in contact with a live wire and received a heavy shock. His muscles seemed set for a moment and his body became rigid, then he toppled to one side of the cross-bar on which he was perched and fell to the ground thirty feet below. He struck with great force. This all happened in a few moments and before Ellis could realize what seemed to be the trouble with his companion. Ellis hastened to his side and found him unconscious.

The fall attracted the attention of the people in that vicinity and soon there was quite a crowd around the injured man. The ambulance was sent for and he was conveyed to the hospital.

Dr. Long made an examination and learned that there was a fracture of the thigh bone The man was also seriously bruised about the body and head. It is possible that there are internal injuries which may develop a little later, but in any event the man is in a serious condition and nothing but the best of medical aid and care will bring him through all right. Just in what part of the body he received the shock has not yet been learned as there are no indications to show where the wire touched him. It is said that the shock left Kellegher through his mouth and that a bluish flame was emitted at that time.

Had a Pleasant Time Anyway.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haberle, of 671 West Front street, gave an informal dance to a few friends last evening. The host and hostess had originally planned to witness the Mid-Summer Night Carnival, and had invited their friends for that purpose, but as the celebration failed to materialize the evening was passed in a social way with dancing, singing and a collation. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Hunt, the Misses Springer, Miss Brown, W. Clark, S. Smith, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. T. Hovall, and Miss Hovall, of Scotch Plains; Mrs. Thornton, of Cranford; Mr. Allen and Mr Stillzer, of Fanwood; Miss Sadie Naylor, Mrs. A. Lorton and E. V. Lorton, of Plainfield.

Had an Epiletic Fit.

George Mattison, the man who was taken to the police station yesterday in an unconscius condition, was examined by Dr. Simpson yesterday afternoon. After prescribing for him, he was allowed to go to the home of his brother. The doctor was of the opinion that the man had had an epiletic fit. He was able to walk, however, and seemed to have regained his senses.

Signs of Prosperity.

Those in a position to know say that the coming Presidential election will in no way interfere with C. Schefflin & Son turning out the large orders for clothing which the firm is now receiving for the fall and winter trade. In fact, it is asserted, that new and additional hands will soon be put to work in their extensive shops on West Front street.

Commissioners First Meeting.

DeWitte C. Ivins, J. Parker Mason and George R. Cornwall, composing the sewer commissioners, held their first meeting last evening. Mayor Gilbert also met with the commissioners. It was only a preliminary meeting and nothing of importance was transacted.

The Raging Brook.

Soon after the shower yesterday afternoon the water in Green brook rose rapidly and at Dunellen it overflowed the banks and inundated much of the low land. In some places the roadbed was gouged out for a considerable stretch and fences were washed down stream.

Crop Report.

Weather Observer Neagle has the following crop report this week:

Catchy weather of week hindered haying and the harvesting of oats, the latter now being cut and will yield well; corn looks very fine, is coming in tassel; other crops progressing, except cucumbers, leaves and vines turn yellow. Average temperature, 73 degrees; rainfall, 2.51 inches.

THE DEVIL'S RAG BABIES

THAT IS CHIEF GRANT'S NAME FOR TWO FREIGHT TRAIN RIDERS.

They Were Arrested Last Night and Judge DeMeza Sent Them to Elizabeth to Get a Bath and a New Suit

"The Devil's rag babies" was the way Chief Grant characterized two young specimens of humanity that were taken out of a freight car last evening by Sergeant Kiely and Patrolmen Flanagan and Myers, and locked up for trespassing on the cars of the Jersey Central railroad. There was another young fellow on the top of the car, but the epithet was not as appropriate to him.

The two travelers to whom Chief Grant applied this rather suggestive name, certainly deserved it, for they were by far the raggedest looking couple that have marched into Plainfield's little rookery for a long time. Dirt, filth and rags made up their costumes. They looked as though they had been through a threshing machine and then had had an interview with some farmer's bulldog. They didn't have much to say when arrested, except that they were looking for work.

Their companion on the train evidently did not belong with them for, although poorly dressed, he had apparently tried to keep himself looking as tidy as possible.

The three freight train riders were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning. He suspended sentence on the solitary offender, who gave his name as Louis Keller, as he appeared to be really in hard luck, but sent the two down to Elizabeth for ten days so that they might take a bath and enjoy a suit of clothes that was not all fringe.

CRANK AFTER BONDS.

Armed Man Demanded $2,000,000 in a Railway Office.

About 9 o'clock yesterday morning, as Supt. Wm. H. Peddle, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, was seated at his desk in the office in the Communipaw station, Jersey City, a wild-eyed man of seedy appearance entered the door and walked up to his desk. In a rather husky voice he told Mr. Peddle that he had come to demand $2,000,000 in Central Railroad bonds and in Baltimore and Ohio bonds.

He told the crank that they did not keep large sums of money or railroad bonds there, and that if he would step over to the office of Supt. Charles A. Thompson, of the Motor Power House, he might be accommodated.

The crank, who had one hand engaged in toying with the iron slungshot in his coat pocket, thanked Supt. Peddle, walked out and went direct to the power house.

When the crank entered he told Mr. Thompson that Supt. Peddle had sent him to get $2,000,000 in railroad bonds and that he didn't want to be kept waiting long for them. The man readily followed Mr. Thompson into the office of Chief Detective J. J. Large, of the railroad company, who resides on East Front street, this city. Before the crank could realize it or make any use of his iron weapon, Chief Detective Large had made him a prisoner. He was taken to the court of Police Justice Potts, who committed the man pending an investigation as to his sanity.

Visiting Pastors.

Below will be found the names of the well-known divines who will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent Avenue church during the absence of Rev. Dr. Richards: Rev. J. R. Service, D. D., of Detroit, August 2d and 9th; Rev. R. S Holmes, D. D., of Pittsburg, P. P., August 16th; Rev. J. McLeod, D. D., of Scranton, Pa., August 23d and 30th; Rev. C. J. H. Ropes, of Bangor, Me., September 6th. On September 13th Rev. Dr. Richards will again take charge of his church.

To Remain in Plainfield.

Dr. Savage, who has been preaching in the Bethel chapel on East Fifth street, will remain in Plainfield during the summer and occupy the pulpit at the above chapel. Dr. Savage is one of the most talented colored preachers in the United States, and the cougregation at Bethel chapel are much pleased with his preaching.

Putting a Street in Condition.

A gang of Street Commissioner Meeker's men were at work this morning putting Park avenue at the corner of Fifth street in good condition. Since the laying of the drain across Park avenue, there has been a bad mud hole there.

SUSPENDED IN MID-AIR.

PERILOUS POSITION OF A TELEPHONE LINEMAN FOR FIVE MINUTES.

By a Mistake When He Was Released He Fell to the Ground and Was Unconscious—Injuries are Temporary.

Suspended in midair, head downward, was William Spiker for five long and weary minutes until his fellow-workmen came to his rescue and then, instead of being lowered carefully to the ground, a mistake was made and he fell headfirst on the ground below.

This accident occurred yesterday afternoon on West Fourth street, between Park and Arlington avenues, where a gang of linemen, under the direction of Superintendent J. C. Hankinson, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, were stringing a new cable on the telephone poles of West Fourth street.

There are already two cables on West Fourth street, which run to New Brunswick by the way of South Plainfield. Spiker was at work among the network of wires making a splice in the big cable. He was sitting in a sling of rope fastened to the other cable with his feet resting on a feed trolley wire.

"Be careful" said Superintendent Hankinson, "there's an electric light wire behind you," and the man swinging above him replied, "All right." But the Superintendent had just walked down the street when Spiker leaned back too far and the back of his neck struck the electric light wire. There was a gasp and then Spiker's pincers fell from his nerveless hands and the next instant he was dangling by the rope that had been his seat. In falling it had become entangled about his knees and there he hung twenty-five feet above the sidewalk. The electric light wire was supposed to be insulated, but the insulation did not prove effective and it is supposed, no one really knows, that a current was formed between the electric light wire and the trolley feed wire.

When the passersby saw Spiker's terrible predicament, they hurried to the scene. His fellow linesmen were the first to realize the danger of it and they soon procured two ladders by which they reached the cable. A rope was thrown over the cable and the linesman on the ladder ordered to make it fast to his waist. Through a misunderstanding the rope was thrown back across the cable again leaving a loop hang over. The end was made fast to Spiker and then the rope, in which his feet were entangled, was cut. The loop pulled over the cable and to the horror of the spectators, Spiker fell head first into the mud close beside the company's wagon that contained the apparatus for stringing the cable.

The bronzed face of the lineman above turned pale with horror as he realized that some fatal mistake had been made.

Spiker was unconscious when picked up by his fellow workmen who set about trying to restore him. The ambulance was called and the apparently lifeless form was placed in it and taken to Muhlenburg Hospital.

Spiker did not recover consciousness until seven o'clock last evening and then his condition rapidly improved. There was a long burn on the back of his neck where it is supposed that he touched the electric light wire.

His hands were badly burned, almost to the bone, and it is thought that he probably seized a live wire to retain his balance.

He lives in Newark with his wife and child and expects to return there this afternoon. He is still very weak, however, although much improved.

Leaky Gas Mains.

For sometime past residents in the neighborhood of Fourth street and Central avenue have complained of the strong odor of gas which emanated from the gas mains there. Yesterday the leakage was found to have been caused by either a shrinkage of or improper packing of the joints where the West Fourth street main comes to an abrupt ending. The difficulty was remedied so there will be no more cause for complaint from this source, at least.

The West End Field Club, of Elizabeth, was obliged to cancel their game with the P. A. C. of this city, owing to their inability to get the E. A. C. grounds where they play. The P. A. C. will play the Dunellen A. C. in place of the Elizabeth boys on Saturday

A DUTCHMAN ON A TEAR

AN INEBRIATED BOLOGNA SAUSAGE MAKER FOUGHT TWO OFFICERS.

Made a Nuisance of Himself at Vogeler's Market and Refused to Submit to Arrest by Police Not in Uniform.

A wild-eyed man, struggling in the grasp of two others, one of whom had a cut nearly four inches long in his neck, was the sight that appeared to Patrolman Mattox as he ran into West Second street from Park avenue yesterday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock.

It was an unusual incident for Plainfield's quiet streets, and there was great excitement for a few moments in consequence. To a stranger it looked like something serious, but Patrolman Mattox recognized the two assailants as Special Officers William Dagnall and Robert Davis, who were trying to arrest the third participant in the scrap.

The offender in the case was struggling for might and main and swearing lustily in German. His name is Frank Littenbauer, and has been employed by A. G. Vogeler, of the Union market, as a bologna maker.

For the last three days, according to Mr. Vogeler's statement, Littenbauer has been hanging around the place in a drunken conditton. Yesterday afternoon he got his pay and then started to abuse his former employer. The liquor had left him in a fighting mood, so Mr. Vogeler sent for an officer. Then Littenbauer realized that it was time to take his departure, and started down Exchange alley after firing a volley of oaths at Vogeler in particular and the world in general. The special officers followed and declared him under arrest. The German bologna maker didn't care for any declarations, however, and the officers had to use force.

They dragged their prisoner up to Second street and along as far as Kurzhals' barber shop, when Littenbauer wrenched away from Davis. In doing so one of the bologna knives, in the package he carried, struck Dagnal in the side of the neck, making a gash about four inches long but not at all deep. Dagnal got a grip on his prisoner's throat and was choking his Dutch oaths into a muffled roar when Mattox snapped the nippers onto Littenbauer's wrists. He was then taken to the lockup and spent the night in jail.

This morning the sausage man was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and resisting arrest. He pleaded guilty and paid $5 for his fun.

Havoc in the Path of the Storm.

The effects of the heavy wind last Monday evening were felt with the greatest severity at Greenbrook kennels, on Greenbrook road, two miles from the centre of the city. This point seemed to be directly in the swath of the terrific wind storm and general havoc was wrought among the trees and light structures about the property. Six immense trees were uprooted and laid flat on the ground chimneys were collapsed, window panes broken and a portion of the piazza on the house occupied by F. E. Phœbus, proprietor of the kennels, wrecked by the velocity of the wind. The damage will amount to quite a sum.

J. W. Lupton and family, of Perth Amboy, drove over to Plainfield yesterday and spent the day with friends.

RACE FOR PRESIDENT

Movements and Doings of Political Leaders and Organizations.

MAJOR M'KINLEY RETURNS TO CANTON

Will Remain Home During the Balance of the Campaign—Mr. Bryan Still Silent Regarding the People's Party Nomination.

Cleveland, July 29.—Major McKinley left for Canton this morning and will reach his destination about 1 o'clock. His visit to Cleveland has been in all ways a most agreeable one. He has had an opportunity to consult freely with Mr. Hanna and other active factors in the political fight and he will return to Canton with a pretty definite notion of the lines upon which he wants the campaign conducted. Major McKinley thinks he will remain at Canton throughout the rest of the campaign. In reference to the report that he had agreed to be present and make a speech at the opening of the Ohio campaign, he said that he had no communication on the subject with any one and that his engagements would keep him in Canton.

MR. BRYAN STILL SILENT.

He Has Not Yet Expressed Himself Regarding the Populist Nomination.

Lincoln, Neb., July 29. — Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota, one of the bolting silver republicans, was the only prominent caller at the Bryan residence yesterday. He spent some hours with the nominee talking over the political situation. Mr. Bryan is still silent as to his intention with regard to the populist nomination. Opinions here differ as to what he will do, but the general understanding is that no decision will be reached until after Senator Jones of Arkansas, chairman of the democratic national committee, has consulted with the populist leaders as to the best course to pursue. Mr. Bryan spent a short time at democratic headquarters yesterday afternoon, but did nothing beyond shaking hands with a number of people there.

DONNELLY WILL RETIRE.

After This Campaign He Will Give Up Politics.

Minneapolis, July 29.—Ignatius Donnelly has returned home from St. Louis, and in the next issue of his paper, the Representative, will say: "We have done. We shall support Mr. Bryan and the populist state ticket until the end of the campaign and we shall then withdraw from public life for ever. We are tired of working for those who would destroy us." In speaking of Bryan's nomination he says there were so many men at St. Louis who were candidates for office and hoped for democratic endorsements in their respective districts that they swept the convention on to Bryan. He says that Bryan is talking too much and is standing over a powder magazine.

German Literary Bureau.

Cleveland, July 29.—A German literary campaign bureau has been organized with headquarters in Chicago and New York. Julius Goldschmidt of Milwaukee will have full charge of the bureau. Mr. Goldschmidt was United States consul-general at Vienna under President Harrison. This bureau will aid the German press of the country in securing campaign literature of special interest to the German voter. In addition to this Mr. Goldschmidt will select the campaign speakers best qualified to present the republican cause to the German element in the different sections of this country.

Silverites Planning Joint Debates.

Washington, July 29.—If the plans of some of the silverites are carried out there will be a series of joint debates during the present campaign. They propose, it is asserted, to invite Senator Teller to meet Senator Sherman, Representative Towne, Mr. Reed, Major McKinley and Bryan. It is not believed that the republicans mentioned will consent to the meetings as it is understood their campaign work has been practically mapped out and they will not consent to any break in the programme.

Date of Bryan-Sewall Notification.

New York, July 29.—Frank W. Sanger, manager of the Madison Square garden, said this morning that although no actual agreement had been made with Mr. St. John for the use of the garden on August 11 or 12 for the meeting at which Mr. Bryan will receive the notification of his selection as candidate for the presidency, he considered the matter practically settled.

Third Ticket in Maine.

Rockland, Me., July 29.—C. J. Holman delegate to the Chicago national convention has issued a circular calling upon all democrats of Maine, who repudiate the action of the Chicago convention, to confer with him regarding the calling of a state convention to act in harmony with the bolting sound money democrats of other states, particularly of Illinois.

At Buffalo on September 16.

New York, July 29.—It took the democratic state committee just ten minutes to decide on Buffalo as the place for the state convention and September 16 as the date. No action was taken concerning the Chicago nominations, nor were any resolutions introduced except the one which fixed the date and place of the convention.

Bryan-Sewall-Williams Club.

Boston, July 29.—An adjourned meeting of a committee chosen recently to organize a club in the interest of the candidacy of Bryan, Sewall and Hon. George Fred Williams was held yesterday afternoon at Mr. William's office. A constitution and by-laws were adopted and it was voted to call the organization the Bryan-Sewall-Williams club of Massachusetts. H. D. Shaefer was elected president; J. A. Denison, secretary, and H. J. Jaquith, treasurer. The club has secured headquarters.

Levering Formally Notified.

Baltimore, July 29.—Prohibitionists were very much in evidence in Baltimore yesterday. In the afternoon the state convention met in Hazazer's hall, and last night at Lyceum theatre the notification committee appointed by the national convention discharged its duty and formally notified Joshua Levering of his nomination for the presidency.

Kentucky Gold Democrats.

Louisville, Ky., July 29.—Representative gold democrats of the state met here yesterday afternoon and effected an organization. It was decided to hold a state convention in Louisville, Thursday, August 20, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the national convention and naming presidential electors.

Declares for Bryan and Sewall.

Gloversville, N. Y., July 29.—John T. Morrison, city clerk of Johnstown, heretofore a McKinley man, has declared his preference for Bryan and Sewall. He refuses to resign his position, however, although the republican common council, which elected him, has asked for it.

Michigan Democrats Undivided.

Detroit, Mich., July 29.—Contrary to expectation the meeting of the democratic state central committee yesterday afternoon organized harmoniously and the gold and silver factions in the committee will work together for the election of the Chicago nominees.

Against the Chicago Ticket.

Boston, July 29.—The executive committee of the Young Men's Democratic club of Massachusetts at a meeting yesterday afternoon came out flatfooted against the Chicago ticket and platform.

A Nevada Paper for McKinley.

Reno, Nev., July 29.—The Reno Gazette, one of the leading papers of Nevada, has declared its intention to support McKinley and Hobart on the ground that protection instead of silver is the paramount issue of the campaign.

Virginia Gold Democrats.

Richmond, Va., July 29.—The sound-money democrats of Virginia will hold a state conference to consider the matter of supporting a third ticket.

PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEES.

Considering Home Missions and the "White Elephant" Building Subjects.

New York, July 29.—The committee of eleven and the committee of nine of the Presbyterian church appointed by the Presbyterian conference held a meeting last night at the Fifth Avenue hotel. The meetings of the committees were secret, but it was announced that no business was transacted except an agreement for the meeting of each committee to be held to-day at the Mission home, Twentieth street and Fifth avenue. The committee of eleven, of which ex-President Harrison is a member, was appointed by the Presbyterian conference to consider whether or not it was advisable for the mission board to conduct such a large building as the one at Twentieth street and Fifth avenue. The members of this committee in addition to ex-President Harrison are John Wanamaker, Associate Justice Harlan of the supreme court of the United States, ex-Gov. Beaver of Pennsylvania, J. B. Huey, Thomas McDougall, H. B. Silliman, Alexander McDonald, R. S. Williams, John E. Parsons and Dr. J. Withrow. The committee of nine which is to consider matters relating to home missions consists of Rev. Dr. W. P. Kane, of Bloomington, Ill., chairman; Rev. Dr. John Dixon of Trenton, N. J.; Rev. Dr. Charles A. Dickey, L. B. Harbison, Robert Pitcairn of Pittsburg; C. M. Clement, L. W. Yagy, judge Robert Wilson of Philadelphia and Daniel Eells. All were present last night except Justice Harlan and Daniel Eells. Rev. Dr. Kane said that the committee would be in session for several days.

NOVEL SAILING VESSEL.

It Has Many Improvements Both Above and Below the Water Line.

Very few patents are taken out on the rig of sailing vessels for the reason that most of the improvements have been thought out. Sailors are likewise very conservative and opposed to new-fangled devices.

Here, however, is a newly-devised vessel, with radical and novel improvements both above and below the water line. The various devices have been patented by Mr. William King, of New Orleans. Under his plan the stability of the vessel is increased by providing it with a telescopic centerboard, which consists of a main centerboard within which is a double centerboard, an amidship centerboard carried by the double centerboard, and a port and starboard centerboard respectively carried on each side of the double centerboard, and within the main centerboard.

The spar plan and sail plan are also formed so that they may be enlarged or decreased at pleasure. This is accomplished by providing the spinnaker booms, and the gaffs of the mainsail and of the spinnakers with auxiliary spars, sliding within suitable rings or sockets which are fixed near the ends of said gaffs and booms.

These spars are adjusted by means of halyards and blocks, and can be reefed home or run out as desired, and a larger or smaller amount of canvas carried. Two spinnakers are used, and the booms are pivotally mounted on suitable steps which are placed one on each bow of the vessel.

The spinnakers are not hoisted to the topmast as is usually done, but are hoisted with extensive gaffs, the heels of the gaffs being pivotally connected with a band which is clamped upon the mast. This connection has a universal pivotal movement.

The spinnaker booms are sheeted forward to the bowsprit end and aft to the outrigger and when they are not in use they rest in crutches at the end of the bowsprit.

Good

Blood is essential to health. Every nook and corner of the system is reached by the blood, and on its quality the condition of every organ depends. Good blood means strong nerves, good digestion, robust health. Impure blood means scrofula, dyspepsia, rheumatism, catarrh or other diseases. The surest way to have good blood is to take Hood's

Blood

Sarsaparilla. This medicine purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, and sends the elements of health and strength to every nerve, organ and tissue. It creates a good appetite, gives refreshing sleep and cures that tired feeling. It is because of its great power to purify the blood that

From

Weak Lungs

Hot weather won't cure weak lungs. You may feel better because out of doors more, but the trouble is still there. Don't stop taking your because the weather happens to be warm. If you have a weak throat, a slight hacking cough, or some trouble with the bronchial tubes, summer is the best time to get rid of it. If you are losing flesh there is all the more need of attention. Weakness about the chest and thinness should never go together. One greatly increases the danger of the other. Heal the throat, cure the cough, and strengthen the whole system now. Keep taking Scott's Emulsion all summer.

Scott's Emulsion

TO CAPTURE FILIBUSTERS.

Spain Offers Big Rewards and Immunity for Captains of Vessels Seized.

Havana, July 29.—The Official Gazette publishes a decree offering a reward of $24,000 to any one enabling the Spanish cruisers to effect the seizure of filibustering steamers, and a further reward of $9,000 to any person enabling the Spanish cruisers to capture filibustering sailing vessels of over 205 tons. The captains of filibustering vessels seized will be considered as enjoying immunity.

THE BERMUDA SOLD.

Various Rumors Concerning the Recent Filibustering Steamer.

Philadelphia, July 29.—The filibustering steamship Bermuda was sold yesterday to J. Milliard, a marine architect, whose office is in New York. He is a British subject and will take steps to have the ship's English custom house registry restored. This can only be done through the admiralty office in England, which some time ago cancelled the ship's custom house registry after she had returned from a successful and sensational filibustering expedition to Cuba. The cancelling of the ship's registry virtually made her a prisoner. Since then she has been a ship without a nation, unable to obtain clearing papers from the custom house. Several attempts have been made to have her cleared, but each time Capt. Clipperton, the British consul, has filed a protest with Collector Read. John Hart, the managing owner of the ship, refused to talk about the terms of the sale. Just what the ship's new owner proposes to do with her could not be learned. It was said that the steamer will sail next week for Jamaica, where the transfer to the new registered owner will be made and the legal formalities complied with on British soil. It was also said that hereafter the vessel will not be engaged in the filibustering expeditions. Various rumors concerning the Bermuda were in circulation. One had it that Mr. Milliard had purchased the ship for a German firm in New York, who had been commissioned to buy the ship by the Cuban Junta, and that the vessel would be sent out as soon as possible with an important expedition, consisting of men and arms. It was further stated that Col. Aguirre had been sent to this country by Gen. Gomez with special instructions to purchase the Bermuda or any other suitable ship so as to hurry up the expedition. Col. Aguirre is now in New York.

GEORGIA COTTON CROP.

First Bale of the Season of '96-97 Banded in Gold and Shipped to New York.

Savannah, Ga., July 29.—The first bale of the Georgia cotton of the new crop was received here yesterday by Gaudry, Crisp & Co., from Macon, Ga. It was graded fully middling and was sold at auction to ex-collector of customs T. E. Johnson at 7¾ cents per pound. It was shipped last night by the steamer City of Augusta to New York to be sold on the cotton exchange there. Col. Johnson had the bale banded in gold and marked: "First Georgia bale; crop 1896-1897; McKinley and gold; no 16 to 1 for us; no fiat money; our greeting to the Empire State of the north. T. E. J. Savannah, Georgia." The bale weighed 510 pounds and was raised in Macon county. It reached here seventeen days earlier than the first bale last season, and one day earlier than in any previous season.

Venezuela Blue Book.

Washington, July 29.—The state department has received several copies of the supplementary British Blue Book on the Venezuelan boundary and will deliver them to the Venezuelan commission. The volume is a huge one, similar to its predecessor, and its preliminary statement is divided into five parts, viz.: Settlements, postholders, trade, relations of the Indian tribes and boundaries. It is expected to prove of great value to the commissioners in their investigations.

Mrs. Law Held for Murder.

Pittsburg, July 29.—The finding of the coroner's jury in the case of Mrs. Ida Law, who while temporarily insane cut the throat of he eighteen days-old child last week, was to the effect that Mrs. Law be held on the charge of murder and that she be placed in a hospital under restraint, pending the action of the grand jury.

Yellow Fever in Mexico.

Washington, July 29.—A telegram from the United States consul at Vera Cruze to the surgeon-general, United States marine hospital service, announces the existence of yellow fever in Vera Cruze. A report has also been received from the United States consul at Acapulco, Mex., announcing the presence of yellow fever in that city.

Pillaging Turks Routed by Insurgents.

Athens, July 29.—A large body of Mussulmans, supported by Turkish troops, engaged in pillaging the Asomati district of the island of Crete, was recently attacked by a force of 1,500 insurgents. The latter drove Mussulmans and Turkish troops out of the district, and inflicted a serious loss upon them.

Insane Patients in New York Hospitals.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 29.—At the first day's session of the state commission in lunacy held in the Grand Union hotel here, only routine business was considered. At present there are nineteen thousand insane patients in the state institutions and one thousand in private hospitals.

Child Killed by a Train.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 29.—Millie Stanley, 9 years old, while crossing the Delaware & Hudson railroad track at North Circular street last evening was struck by a south bound express and instantly killed.

MANY ARE STARVING

Terrible Condition of the Coast Residents in Labrador.

LIVING ON SEAWEED AND SHELLFISH

The Grown People Almost Naked and the Children Wholly So—Without Flour, Bread or Nourishing Food for Many Weeks.

St. Johns, N. F., July 29.—Dr. Grenfall, superintendent of the British mission to the deep sea fishermen operating in Labrador, writes to the St. John's papers that the most extreme poverty exists in the northeast portion of Newfoundland and on the coast of Labrador, and that many of the inhabitants are in a starving condition. Dr. Grenfall, who is a most reliable authority, declares that it is impossible for language to describe the sufferings of the coast residents, who have been without flour, bread or nourishing food for weeks. They have, he says, been living upon seaweed and shellfish. The grown people are almost naked and the children wholly so. The doctor photographed two entire families in order to preserve a record of the condition in which he found them. The tabling of last year's accounts to-day shows that the government's recently announced surplus of $200,000 is greatly exaggerated and was obtained by including fifteen months' customs receipts from all parts of the island outside of St. Johns in the year's revenue and by other expedients of a similar character.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau Bulletin for the Eastern and Middle Atlantic States.

Washington, July 29.—The weather bureau crop bulletin for the week ended yesterday contains the following general remarks: In the Atlantic and east gulf coasts the week has been very favorable for all growing crops, but excessive rains have to some extent retarded farm work, thrashing particularly, and caused much injury to grain in shock. Special telegraphic reports follow: New England—Pastures excellent in south portion and improving in north; cloudy weather delayed hay and grain harvest in southern portion. New York—Heavy soaking rains greatly benefited growing crops; fine oats and fodder largely offset light hay crop; hops and tobacco growing nicely; army worm disappearing. New Jersey—Conditions continue favorable to growth and rapid development of crops, but unfavorable to harvesting of oats and late timothy; that cut in fields is badly damaged. Pennsylvania—Conditions continue excellent for rapid growth; army worms very destructive in many localities, but not general. Maryland—Wheat and oats threshing satisfactory; corn and tobacco excellent; some tobacco housed; tomatoes for canneries promising; peaches being shipped in large quantities.

MIDNIGHT SUN.

Unusual Spectacle Witnessed by American Tourists on a Voyage to North Cape.

New York, July 29.—Emil Boss, general manager of the Hamburg-American line, has received cable advices to the effect that the steamship Columbia, with a party of American tourists on board, was favored by good weather on her trip to the North Cape and Spitzbergen. The passengers witnessed the unusual spectacle of the midnight sun four times on four nights in succession in a perfectly cloudless sky, the last time the sun shining upon the glaciers and ice mountains of Spitzbergen, and they were absolutely enthusiastic in their admiration.

A Carrier Pigeon Found at Sea.

Washington, July 29.—Capt. Berginal of the French bark Alice and Isabelle, from Philadelphia for France, has reported to the hydrographic office that on June 11, about 7 p. m., latitude 39 north, longitude 71 west, a carrier pigeon came aboard, probably from the east coast of the United States. It had a copper band on each leg, the right marked "G. R. L.—L., 96." The pigeon may be reclaimed by its owner. It has been intrusted to the "Messagers de l'Ocean" Homing club of Sables d'Olonne, Vendee, France.

Killed by a Live Wire.

Erie, Pa., July 29.—William Dwyer, a lineman in the employ of the New York & Pennsylvania Telephone company, was instantly killed here last evening while stringing wires. He was at the top of a fifty foot pole and brought his wire in contact with an electric light wire. The shock killed Dwyer instantly and he was horribly burned before he fell from the pole. William Moffett, who was handling the same wire from another pole was terribly shocked but fell athwart the wires and was rescued.

Putnam Taken to Prison.

Concord, N. H., July 29.—Warren F. Putnam of the Exeter bank was brought here late yesterday afternoon and placed in prison. He was accompanied by Mrs. I. E. Records of Boston, who is at the head of the movement looking to Putnam's pardon by the president.

Will of the Late ex-Gov. Russell.

Cambridge, Mass., July 29.—The will of the late ex-Gov. William E. Russell has been filed in the Middlesex probate court. It leaves his entire estate to his widow, Margaret Manning Russell, and Mrs. Russell is named as executrix.

The Matabele Revolt.

Buluwayo, July 29.—A force of imperial troops is being hurriedly pushed to the front from Macloutsie to Mangwe and Fort Tuli. The situation is becoming more serious every day.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Continued Warm With Conditions Favorable for Thunderstorms Tonight and Thursday.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 89 Degrees.

The People's party State Convention will be held August 18th in Newark. They will have two electors, who are to go on the regular Democratic ticket.

The first State election for the fall will be held in Vermont September 1st. Then follows Arkansas on September 7th and Maine on the 14th of the same month.

The Boston banks again came forward yesterday with an offer of a million dollars in gold coin to the Treasury. Philadelphia offered $300,000. If the department gets all in sight the balance will be raised to $112,000,000.

A Memphis man is advocating an amendment to the Tennessee Constitution striking out the requirement that public officers shall give bonds, on the ground that as the public elects its officers it should lose if they prove faithless, and that making the people the losers will cause them to be more careful in the selection of candidates.

L. E. Livermore, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, of this city, sent the following statement of the political situation in Plainfield to the New York Journal, and it was published today:

So far as I know or can learn at present, there is very little influence in favor of "the free silver doctrine" in this city. A little later in the campaign this sentiment may develop so as to become perceptible, but if it exists to any extent now it is latent, or, at least, dormant.

So far as crowds, bicycles and enthusiasm went, the Midsummer Night's Carnival was a great success last night. The display of the elements, however, ended nearly all the festivities in a brief space of time and sent the spectators scampering to places of shelter. 'Twas a pity, but there is satisfaction in knowing that the event was on the high road to a glorious success, and the following out of the same plans at an early date will probably prove the achievement that was promised last night.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Fred A. Upton, of Brookside Retreat, is spending his vacation at Plymouth, Pa.

Fred Coles, of Tarrytown, spent yesterday with his friend, Percy V. Wheeler, of LaGrande avenue.

Miss Josie Butscher, of West Fourth street, is entertaining her cousin Miss Mollie Hartman, of New York.

Mrs. Edwin Loomis and family have returned from Bethlehem to spend the month of August at their home on Rockview avenue.

H. C. McVey and Theo. Kurzhals, Jr., will enjoy a trip up the Hudson river tomorrow evening on the steamboat Grand Republic.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hannigan, of West Third street, are the parents of a young son. The little fellow came to town Monday morning.

Miss Mamie Fritts, daughter of ex-Judge and Mrs. Fritts, of Washington, this State, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conover, of Elmwood place.

Miss Evelyn Taylor, of Philadelphia, who has been the guest for several weeks of Miss Woodruff, of East Second street, returned home this afternoon.

Patrolman Joseph Cooney started on his vacation today, which he will spend in Pennsylvania. Joe expects to fish and hunt considerable during his absence.

The condition of Joseph Beach, of 215 East Second street, father of Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, is still critical. He is in an unconscious state, and his death seems not far off.

Mrs. N. B. Smalley, of Mountain avenue, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital Saturday last for treatment. Mrs. Smalley has been ill for some time with a complication of diseases and it was deemed advisable to place her in the hospital for better treatment. She is doing as well as can be expected and there are hopes that she will leave some time next week cured.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

I hear from Rich & Maeder, lessees of Music Hall, that they will open the house for the approaching theatrical season with "The Cotton Spinner," on August 27th, a production which they stand sponsors for. John Daly will be their representative here the same as last season. The firm say that they have a high grade of attractions booked for the pleasure of Plainfielders who enjoy theatricals There is certainly plenty of opportunity for improvement over previous seasons in this respect.

The buzz of the Mayorality bee is beginning to be heard. There is likely to be a plethora of local statesmen for the honor.

By all means let's have the Midsummer Night's Carnival for an annual hot weather event. If, with the short time for preparation and advertising allowed this year, it was to be such a success until the rain intervened, then how much greater and grander it would be if it was known weeks in advance that it was to be held.

The spirit of progress invades the North Plainfield Board of Education. Those boroughites who have taken an interest in educational matters have deplored the fact, that every year several of the students who had finished their studies in the public school there have crossed the brook and entered the High School in this city to finish the education before entering the walks of business or to prepare themselves for college. They looked upon this condition as a reflection on their progressiveness and attention to the welfare of their children. Since the re-organization of both the Board of Education and the faculty of the school, there is a decided movement towards giving the school a cirriculum of higher studies, and putting it on the same basis as to compete with the city system of education. And it now comes to me in a pretty straight manner that this change will be consummated by the time the fall term opens.

A Minister Set to Rights.

Rev. William D. Johnson, whose name was connected with the story published in the New York Journal, and reprinted in The Press yesterday, concerning the alleged troubles of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church and a church in Westfield, called at this office this morning and denied the truth of the statements. He said that though the church had struggled against many handicaps on the road to prosperity, it was getting along as well as could be expected. As for his being under the influence of Rachael Graham, he said that he didn't even know the woman.

A Word or Two

to those suffering from catarrh or the thousands subject to severe attacks of cold in the head, will not be amiss if a sure remedy can be offered. Ely's Cream Balm has become a favorite in all sections of the United States, because of its effectiveness. Your cold in the head will be quickly relieved by it, and the severest attack of catarrh will yield to, and be perfectly cured by a thorough treatment. Catarrh is not a blood disease, but inflammation of the passages of the nose and throat, due to climatic changes.

FELL FROM AN ELFVATOR.

Former Bepresentative Dunn Seriously Injured.

Former Representative John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth, was very painfully injured while entering an elevator in the Merchants' Insurance building on Broad street, Newark, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Dunn was about to step into the elevator when the colored boy in charge started the lift up. Mr. Dunn was carried several feet above the floor and then thrown back with such violence that two of his ribs were fractured and his collarbone broken. After ascertaining that his injuries were not necessarily fatal Mr. Dunn, accompanied by his son, was taken to his home in Elizabeth.

Points to a Record of 100,000 Pianos.

We do not look for perfection in pianos, or in any other articles, at once. Time must be given before the perfect growth is attained. The well known firm of J. & C. Fischer is a grand example of what time, and scientific and well directed talents have achieved in piano manufacture. Beginning in a very humble way, the business of the firm has yearly increased until it can point to a record of 100,000 pianos manufactured and in use to this time. Now, numerically, this is certainly an enviable achievement; but it is not in numbers that the true triumph of the "Fischer" Piano has been attained. Numbers in themselves show little. It is the gradual growth toward perfection that has so marked the "Fischer" Piano wherein lies its wonderful popularity. The general public has awakened to the fact that a piano cannot be heralded and praised world-wide without a substantial basis of reason.

Though musically perfect, yet, a piano would lack something if it did not appeal in outward finish to the æsthetic taste of the gazer therefore the forests of the world have been explored for rich and rare woods of beautifully modulated shades wherein to encase these gems of musical perfection.

In looking over the whole field we have come to the conclusion that the "Fischer" Piano has well earned this popularity. It is the Public's Piano. It is the Home Piano. It is a superior piano in every sense of the word.

An Increasing Business.

W. J. Stephenson, of 146 North avenue, near the station, owing to the increase in his restaurant business and his established reputation as a caterer, finds it necessary to have more room and has therefore fitted up in good style, on the second floor of his building, a large room 25x55 with three long extension dining tables, also small tables, and is now ready to furnish dinners and suppers to clubs, lodges, or other parties who can have the use of this room as a private one. He will also furnish a first-class dinner for 50 cents, or he will serve meals "a la carte." He employs only competent cooks and polite attendants.

—City Judge DeMeza went to Somerville today to try an important case.

—The Borough Council will meet Friday evening and transact important business.

—The case of Carson against Frieze, has been discontinued in Justice Crosley's court.

—Fresh stock of colored fire, paper roofing, Japanese lanterns, etc., at Harper's 111 Park avenue.

—The ceiling in Warren Engine Company's house has been repaired by W. C. Smith, the mason.

—Be on time tomorrow morning if you intend to go with the Baptists to Asbury Park. The train leaves at 8 o'clock.

—Henry Pedeflous, of the mountain road, is an expert on raising mushroons, and he now has a bed of them ready to pluck.

—There are six new houses being built at the Westfield addition, recently bought by a company of New York Germans.

—Two handsome new signs, one for A. J. Gavett, and the other for G. Q. Packer, now adorns the front of the Jackson building.

—The Sunday-school scholars of St. Joseph's church have been enjoying themselves today picnicing in Hyde's woods in the borough.

—Twenty Plainfielders joined the Central Railroad Company's excursion to Mauch Chunk this morning. There was a large number of excursionists on the train.

—A horse belonging to Peter Seader, the hackman, started to run away at the North avenue station yesterday afternoon. The animal was caught before any damage resulted.

—Cypress Commandery, Colored Masons, will attend divine services at the Mt. Olive Baptist church this evening. Rev. P. S. Gison, the pastor, will preach a sermon to the order.

—Tomorrow morning the Sunday-schools of the First Baptist church, Grace P. E. church and Washington chapel will go to Asbury Park. Everything now points to a most successful time.

—A calf, four weeks old, weighing 205 pounds, was sold by Wallace Vail yesterday to Smalley Bros., the North avenue butchers. It was one of the finest, for its age, ever sold in Plainfield.

—Don't forget that H. E. Rider, of North avenue, has a full and complete line of sporting goods for all kinds of popular sports. He also sells the Jersey, Victor and Richmond wheels.

—One of the best excursions to Asbury Park this year will be the Methodist, which goes next Tuesday, August 4th. The Methodists are good people to go with and you will make no mistake.

—Augustus Fiering, of Harrison street, is having his house painted and he has also just erected a new and substantial barn on his premises. He is now arranging to have the house connected with both the water and sewerage systems.

—All those who have signed the the charter list and those who desire are requested to be present at the preliminary meeting this evening of the new Council of the Daughters of America, to be held at the offices of Mrs. Ira Riker, 132 Central avenue.

—Lawrence Paoli, who for many years conducted a fruit and confectionery store on North avenue, has become so attached to the Borough that he has leased a similar small store on Somerset street, adjoining Boyce's hotel and put his son Gabrielli in charge of it.

—One man from Orange who said he spent $3.86 and four hours time decorating his wheel for the parade last evening, was seen after the parade, and then he said about $3.80 worth of his decorations had been spoiled by the rain, and he would have to lose a half day's work polishing up his machine.

$100 Reward; $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Thomas Randall, of Glendon, Pa. is visiting in this city.

Miss Mamie Doud, of Duer street, is the guest of friends in New York State.

Patrolman Thomas McCue returned to duty today after enjoying his vacation.

J. M. Burnett and family, of Madison avenue, have returned from Ocean Grove.

Miss Florence R. Beal, of South avenue, has been ill at her home for several days.

Mrs. C. E. Horne and son, Roland, are spending a few days with relatives at Edison, Pa.

Walter H. Freeman and family, of East Ninth street, are stopping at Pine Bush, N. Y.

Allan Hartley, of New York, is visiting at the home of George P. Mellick, of LaGrande avenue.

DeWitt C. Ivins and family, of Watchung avenue, have returned from their summer outing.

Everett Dwight, of Rockview avenue, has gone to Jamestown, N. Y., to spend the month of August.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Patterson and daughter, of Central avenue, are spending the month of August at Lake Minnewaska, N. Y.

Principal C. E. Boss is moving his household goods to his farm in New York State, where he and Mrs. Boss will spend the summer. Mrs. R. W. Rice will occupy the house vacated by Mr. Boss on Craig place.

OCEAN GROVE MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Walter Damrosch to Give the "Messiah" and "Creation" With 400 Voices.

The Ocean Grove Musical Festival will be held this year on August 12th, 13th, and 14th, in the great auditorium, holding over twelve thousand people. On the first night the "Creation" will be given. On the second evening a Symphony Concert, by Damrosch's full symphony orchestra, assisted by noted soloists and a chorus of one thousand children. The "Messiah" will be given on the last evening. Walter Damrosch will be the conductor, and will bring with him a large part of the New York Oratorio Society. Mr. Damrosch has engaged Tallie Morgan, of New York, a well known chorus director, to drill the chorus at Ocean Grove, and which now numbers over two hundred voices. This chorus is composed very largely of summer visitors, and all singers who expect to be at Ocean Grove or Asbury Park not later than August 1st, and who will sing at the concerts, are requested to send their names to Tallie Morgan, 10 East Fourteenth street, New York, or to Ocean Grove.

The soloists will include some of the finest artists of the Nation. Last year's festival was a magnificent success, and this year's will be equally so. Excursion trains on the Central Railroad of New Jersey will run from New York and intermediate towns to each concert.

Bought a Valuable Property.

Alexander D. Findlay, who for sometime past has been conducting a saloon business in the building owned by Charles Bock, at 123 East Second street, purchased the property yesterday from Mr. Bock. The price paid is understood to be $10,000. Mr. Findlay will probably make some alterations to the building which will improve the value of it.

We Begin to Die

The moment we are born. It may not seem so, but it is so.

To be successful in the fight against death, who pounces upon us at every turn, we should keep every organ of the body, in the most perfect working order.

This is particularly true of the kidneys, upon the health and activity of which the purity of our blood and our freedom from disease germs depends.

Dr. Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills prevent Bright's Disease, Kidney and Bladder trouble, and filter out of the blood every poison and impurity, whether from imperfectly digested food, Malaria, Rheumatism, or other causes. The Kidneys are the standard bearers in the great struggle against death, and Dr. Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills their ablest ally.

Pass the good word along the line. Piles can be quickly cured without an operation by simply applying De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. L. W. Randolph. 143 West Front street.

pearance. One of the prettiest and most striking couples was Miss Pansy Herring and Frank Flannery, both dressed entirely in white, while their wheels were wound and decorated, tires and all, with white. Several of the wheels in this division were decked in red, white and blue, while much originality was shown in the different decorations. In this division were two of the Messrs. Pittis, clad all in black, with hideous, skull-like heads. W. E. Brock's pneumatic tricycle was in line, tastefully decorated in red, white and blue.

Following this division came the advertising wheels, and many unique ideas were shown. "Randolph's glaces" was advertised by a veritable palace on wheels with Edward F. Randolph in a page's costume from the time of George III, seated in this wheeling palace. Edward White's bicycle delivery wagon, prettily decorated, was in line. H. E. Rider had a tandem and a single wheel, charmingly arranged, in the parade. Hepburn, Clark & Crane and several others were also represented.

The second division was a large one. It consisted of the clubs and was under the charge of Marshal's Aid Charles B. Morse. The Y. M. C. A. Cyclers had the right of line and they really deserved it, for their turnout was a very creditable one. Captain Thomas A. Cuming, mounted on a good old ordinary, bedecked with the National colors, headed his club clad in one of the old-fashioned bicycle suits of ten years ago. Beside him rode Assistant Bugler Webster Littell, gotten up after the fashion of "Uncle John" fresh from the country. The Y. M. C. A. Cyclers transparency was borne on Olaf Sangstad's Punnett Companion. Then followed the club, sixty strong, with nearly every wheel decorated.

There were rustics, two "Jersey Mosquitoes," and a general assortment of remarkable characters, all of whom deserved special mention for their originality and taste.

The Scott Press Works Club, sixty riders strong, was next in line. Every rider carried a small American flag with the name of the club printed on it, while some decorated more elaborately. David Allen brought up the rear of the club on an old solid-tire wheel as a "Reuben" from the countriest part of the country with all his necessary implements for farming.

The Crescent Wheelmen Juniors sustained the name Crescent in the parade as it has never been represented before. Headed by their captain, Will Nash, fully twenty of the young riders turned out, and every wheel was elaborately and prettily decorated. The favorite design was that of a ship and the National colors prevailed, although Ned Waring had a very pleasing orange and black yacht arranged about his wheel. Courtney and Hazelwood Keller lined up with the rest, one dressed as a frog and the other as a court-jester.

The Scotch Plains Cyclists, headed by a bugler, had eight men in line. The Harlem Packing House Wheelmen were represented by a delegation commanded by Richard Webber, Jr. Six young men, scarcely recognizable in their disguises, made up the "Reubens" or "Hayseeds" as they called themselves and their appearance certainly followed out their name.

The third division was headed by Captain Israel Jones, of the Victor Wheelmen with an enormous headlight in front. The Victor Wheelmen turned out a transparency and a large delegation besides the unattached colored riders that joined with them. They had several elaborately decorated wheels.

The fourth division was a big one and the three Marshal's aides, F. R. Stevens, N. N. Titsworth and M. F. Elderton, were kept busy at the start getting them in line. "Weary Raggles" was there in all his glory while a whole company of "Hayseeds" were intermingled with the rest. There were also many fancy decorations, very elaborate and of tasteful design, but the rain came down before they had hardly started and there was a general scattering. There was one remarkable pair that kept it up until even the committee gave up. They were "Manager" William Sweeney and George Snediker. The small proportions of the former were incased in a riding suit with samples of "free silver" fastened all over it, and the latter was rigged out as an old gray-haired "Hayseed" resembling the pictures of such a character in Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer."

BERLIN SEWAGE FARMS.

Established at a Cost of Many Million Marks.

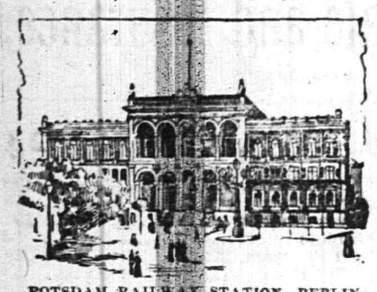
The Most Unique Sewage System in the World—How a Dreary Corner Was Transformed Into a Fine Street.

[Special Berlin (Germany) Letter.]

Nothing probably shows the far-sighted policy and the wise persistence of the Berlin municipal government as well as does the system of sewage farms. This is unique of its kind—nowhere else in the world has a city's government ever before undertaken a giant task of this sort; one, too, untried hitherto. The sewage farms are really nothing but a complete drainage works on a large scale. All the houses of Berlin are now connected with them, and from 78,000,000 to 83,000,000 cubic meters of sewage are annually carried to these farms—whose local name is "Rieselfelder"—and distributed on their soil by scientific irrigation. These municipal farms have an aggregate extent of more than 20,000 acres, or upward of 30 square miles. Additional land has been bought from time to time. It is of interest to remark here that a city, whose municipal boundaries include but 25 square miles, should have acquired an outside territory of such vast dimensions merely as a place for the discharge of its liquid waste. And, besides, the land of these farms is arid, sandy soil naturally; but land comes high when so near the city limits, and hence some 15,000,000 marks had to be expended on the purchase of this land alone. A like sum has been spent in laying out the farms, trenching and tiling them for irrigation purposes, and equipping them with the necessary buildings and improvements. For the radial sewer system and the discharging tunnels inside Berlin another 65,000,000 has been expended, and some 25,000,000 more has been laid out during the past three years on the extension of the system, thus amounting in all to a plant of 120,000,000 marks (or about $30,000,000).

This is a vast sum just for one item of municipal improvement, and there have not been wanting voices which were raised against what seemed, at first sight, an unduly large expenditure—and an unprofitable one. But the municipal government had, before embarking on this huge enterprise, studied the question thoroughly, and had employed the best obtainable technical experts to inform it of the returns to be expected and of all the pros and cons of the case, and once feeling sure of their ground they have gone ahead. Though the whole venture is, as yet, in its initial stage, events have clearly proven that their calculations were based on solid facts. Before the new system was introduced, the citizens had to pay for the removal of night soil, etc. The city now charges a moderate sewage rate against all property served by the new system. The farms are yielding, year after year, larger returns, despite the intense agricultural depression reigning everywhere in Germany. The parts of the farms that have been brought under closest cultivation are already very profitable,

BELLE ALLIANCE SQUARE, BERLIN.



POTSDAM RAILWAY STATION, BERLIN.

and the net income from the 30 square miles now pays nearly the full interest on the investment, for purchase and improvement, of 90,000,000 marks. The fertilizing value of the sewage is so great, and the administrations of the farms so excellent, that within another three or four years the investment will have become enormously productive. And the best proof of the solid sense and commercial correctness underlying the whole venture may be found in the fact that the cavilling voices of the unprogressive delegates in the council and of the fault-finding part of the population have been stilled.

On each of the sewage farms are nurseries of young fruit trees, and considerable areas of orchard have already begun to yield fruitage (last summer to the amount of 265,000 marks, the right to gather it being sold to the highest bidder). Prodigious crops of vegetables are grown, and the yield per acre of cereals and grass is something remarkable. To judge by the present rate of increase in yield, these sewage farms in another ten years will have earned profits enough to pay back all that was invested in them, and eventually they will be a source of surplus income that will materially lessen the burden of municipal taxation.

Another enterprise, likewise undertaken on a gigantic scale, was the building of the new Emperor William street—the continuation of the world-famed Unter den Linden. But a few years ago at the point where the last-named beautiful avenue ended there began a network of dingy, narrow streets, the houses ancient and shabby-looking, and the contrast was all the more striking and unpalatable because it did not come by stages. The city purchased these old streets and lanes, tore down the decayed buildings, laid out a broad, beautiful street (its width is 88 feet), rechristened it as above and sold the territory to the leading merchants and importers, who forthwith erected palatial structures. To-day Kaiser Wilhelm's strasse is one of the handsomest in Berlin, a fitting pendant to the Linden. And though the city, to do this, laid out a matter of 40,000,000 marks, the money was returned twofold by the sale of lots on this imperial thoroughfare. Encouraged by their experience, the municipality is now taking hold of a project which is the logical continuation of the first one, viz.: the purchase and reconstruction of that knot of alleys and lanes lying back and to the side of Kaiser Wilhelm's strasse, the so-called "Muhlendamm" and the ill-favored Rectzengasse being among them. In their stead will rise, within the space of four years, one main street almost as fine as Kaiser Wilhelm's strasse, and a half dozen of less pretentious ones.

The erection of market halls is a subject too big to be dovetailed in here, and will be handled in a later article, inasmuch as market halls of the proper kind—such as those of Berlin and Paris—are among the problems hitherto unsolved in American cities. I will only say here that in this particular, too, the Berlin city fathers proved themselves worthy of their trust and able to grapple with the situation.

Another item in the annual city budget which is of both magnitude and interest is that of municipal aid to the poor of the city. Last year this item amounted to almost 14,000,000 marks (or almost $3,500,000), and this enormous sum was not distributed, either, in big chunks, nor did it go in large part (as municipal charity too often does in America) to the undeserving. But instead, the money was expended by the large number of poor commissioners, of whom I spoke in a previous article, in such a way as to insure the direct benefit of each family given, of each morsel of bread and each bushel of coal. There were last year 259 such poor commissioners, with 2,818 unsalaried members (it being held an office of honor and responsibility). There were 24,432 recipients of alms, so that each group of ten had one commissioner to look into their cases, thus insuring full acquaintance with their circumstances and needs. There were, besides, 8,675 children assisted or taken care of, and 82,323 cases in which occasional gifts were made. Among these regular recipients of alms were all sorts of persons, learned and illiterate, as is shown by the fact that 46 of them were artists, scientists, writers; 51 teachers and former officials.

From all the facts cited above it will have been seen that the members of the Berlin municipal government handle each year immense sums of money, just as our American aldermen do, either directly or indirectly. And yet an entire absence of "jobs," of corruption, of "steals" such as the papers at home tell us of nearly every week!

How's that? I do not venture to frame a reply to such a question, at least not a reply which would be a real explanation. Let the fact suffice that there are no "jobs" for aldermen here. Not as if the safeguards placed around them here in the way of disposing of city funds were more ample or closer than at home. But the mere suspicion of a "job" would mean the political, social and civic death of a man, and since "jobs" nearly always are engineered not by one man, but by a body of men acting in collusion, things here cannot get that far, since long before there would be anything like a "job" ripe and worth the plucking, the offender or offenders would have encountered that unscalable wall of suspicion which would put an end to their career. I will here cite the case of just one man, because it so nearly illustrates what I say above. A wealthy man named Pincussohn died here a few weeks ago. At one time—for but a very short time—he was a member of the Berlin city council. Another market hall was to be erected in a recently settled part of the town, and Mr. P. laid his wires so as to get the committee to take into consideration, for purchase, a tract of land which he had bought on speculation. This little scheme leaked out, and nothing came of it. But the mere fact that Mr. P. had "figured" that way ruined his reputation for honesty and fairness so completely in the eyes of his colleagues and of his electors that it forced him to resign his seat and disappear forever from public view.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? PRISON FOR RAIDERS

The Conviction of Jameson and His Followers Was Necessary.

THERE WAS NO WAY TO SHIELD THEM

The Proof Overwhelmingly Against Them, England Was Compelled To Make a Pretense of Her Friendship for the Boer Government.

London, July 29.—While the conviction of Dr. Jameson and his companions for the recent raid into the Transvaal caused some little surprise among those who did not realize the gravity of the offence with which the men were charged, those who had given the proofs against the raiders consideration, plainly saw that no matter how strongly sympathy might be with the accused in England, there was nothing for the courts to do but to convict. Of course, the raiders were let down as easily as possible, without making the case a complete farce, and at the same time making a showing of the friendly feeling existing in England towards the Boer government. In the summing up of the case the chief justice's remarks were distinctly hostile to the defendants. Lord Russell began by pointing out that none of the essential facts in the case against the prisoners had been contested, and that there was no doubt in regard to their having taken part in or abetted the proceedings at Pitsani and Mafeking, where the invading forces were mustered preparatory to entering the Transvaal. It was entirely unimportant, in his opinion, whether the foreign enlistment act was in force. There was no doubt, he said, that the expedition was of a military character and whether it was aimed to overthrow the Transvaal government or to force a change in the laws of that republic in the interests of others, it was equally an expedition against a friendly state. Lord Russell, throughout, summed up adversely to the raiders and concluded with submitting to the jury a series of questions difficult to answer any way but affirmatively. After an hours' absence the jury returned and answered all the questions in the affirmative. Thereupon the chief justice said that this finding amounted to a verdict of guilty and directed the jury to so find. The jury added a rider to the effect that the disturbances at Johannesburg were provocative.

Received Their Sentences Unmoved.

Dr. Jameson and his co-defendants were apparently unmoved, and Sir Edward Clarke asked the court's disposition to move for a new trial. The judges retired for consultation, and during their absence Sir Edward Clarke and the defendants consulted together, with the result that when the judges returned Sir Edward Clarke said that in view of the verdict rendered the defendants refused to instruct for a new trial and expressed a desire to settle the case now. Lord Russell said that the verdict was given on evidence which no reasonable man would be able to disregard. All the defendants, he added, were men of intelligence, holding positions under the queen, and their crime had the gravest consequences, including death to some, injury to others, while the future consequences of their crime no one was yet able to foresee. Dr. Jameson was sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment without labor. Major Sir John Willoughby was sentenced to ten months' imprisonment, Major R. White to seven months' imprisonment, and Capt. Henry F. Coventry, Col. R. Grey and Col. H. F. White were sentenced to five months' imprisonment each. Dr. Jameson, who had hitherto hung down his head, looked up proudly when sentence had been passed and the other defendants stared hard at the lord chief justice.

Cheered by the Crowd.

A large crowd had gathered outside the court room to await the exit of the prisoners, and cheered vociferously when they made their appearance. Many shouts of "God bless you" were heard as the prisoners were brought out on their way to Holloway jail, where they are to be confined temporarily.

MONEY AND TARIFF

They Must Go Hand in Hand in This Campaign, Says Mr. Hanna.

THE FORMER A GREAT BURNING ISSUE

He Is Not in Favor of High Tariff, Knows No Individual in the Present Struggle and Is Not Cherishing Resentment.

New York, July 29.—Since his arrival here yesterday Mark A. Hanna, Major McKinley's campaign manager and chairman of the republican national committee, has been a very busy man. He is constantly besieged by prominent republican callers and newspaper men, but to the latter he has little to say, although receiving them all with the most extreme courtesy. He was not in New York more than an hour before he began inspecting the different places for headquarters and soon gave the eastern men an illustration of what push and go-ahead there was in his makeup. The first meeting of eastern members of the executive committee of the national republican committee will be held at the Waldorf hotel this afternoon. Chairman Hanna will preside, and there will be present Messrs. Quay, Scott and Osborne. Manley is not in the city. Mr. Hobart came over from his home in Paterson this morning and went at once to the Waldorf, where he met Mr. Hanna in the latter's room. They remained in private consultation for nearly an hour. Mr. Hanna, in reply to the question of a reporter, said that he would advise with everybody who knew more than he did, and, he said, there are a lot of them. When asked what, in his opinion, was the prominent issue of the campaign, tariff or money, he replied that the issue was to elect McKinley.

Money and Tariff the Issues.

Mr. Hanna talked with a representative of the United Press. He spoke reluctantly about his plans for the campaign. He said he did not wish to say much before the meeting of the executive committee. When asked as to his position on the currency question Mr. Hanna said that his position and Major McKinley's position is that the financial question and the tariff question must go hand in hand. They both recognized, he said, that the money question is a great and burning issue, and that the republican party will have to meet it. The kind of money the country is to use is only one part of the question. Another part is the raising of money to meet the expenses of government. "To put it briefly," he said, "our position is in favor of sound money and a protective tariff, and mind," he added emphatically, "I do not mean a high tariff by any means." He said further that their policy will be to preserve the currency on a sound basis of gold, and at the same time to raise sufficient money to defray all the expenses of the government.

Does Not Cherish Resentment.

As to the true position of Mr. McKinley on the financial question, Mr. Hanna seemed anxious to be clear. He said he wanted to impress on the minds of the business men of the east the fact that the managers of the Republican campaign are fully alive to the importance of the great financial interests involved in the currency question, but that both he and Mr. McKinley think that the financial question cannot be separated from the question of tariff and the raising of sufficient revenue for the needs of the government. Mr. Hanna expressed himself as desirous of talking freely and fully to the public through the newspapers, and he means to do so as soon as the other members of the national committee come and he has a chance to confer with them. When asked about factions in this state Mr. Hanna said that all matters will be fixed up in a way that will be satisfactory to everbody. "I wish you would say for me," he declared, "that I do not know individuals in this campaign, and I am not cherishing any resentments." He said that he had not seen Mr. Platt, but supposed he would see him soon. Mr. Hanna said, in reply to a question as to where the real headquarters will be, in New York or Chicago, that they would be in both places. He will go back and forth between the two places.

CYCLING COMMENT.

C. Frank French, of Somerset street, rides a new Monarch.

Geo. F. Coard, of East Ninth street, has joined the League of American Wheelmen.

The L. A. W. does not officially countenance road racing, but its leading members act in the capacity of officials, so that while the organization attempts to convey the impression that it is antagonistic to such events, the actions of its members does not carry out this assumption. It is thought that in a short time, unless the promoters of road races exercise the greatest care in the management and the selection of a course, the opposition springing up in every direction will eventually result in police interference and these races stopped.

A wheelmen's illuminated parade and reception to visiting wheelmen is to be held in Elizabeth tomorrow evening under the direction of the Alcyone Cyclers. The parade will form in Union Square at 8 o'clock and will be reviewed in Liberty Square at 9 o'clock. For the best decorated woman's wheel there will be a prize of a $25 gold watch and chain; for the best decorated man's wheel the prize will be a $25 open-face gold watch, and for the club having the largest number of riders in line, a handsome $50 silver cup. There will be a reception and prize presentation at the clubhouse at 9:30 o'clock, and dancing for an hour or two after 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. PROGRESS IN SURGERY.

How to Conceal the Loss of a Finger Completely.

Surgeons Now Believe That Usefulness and Not Length Should Determine the Value of the Stump—The Idea Illustrated.

Surgeons can now remove an entire finger so deftly that the loss can scarcely be detected.

This is the result of a new surgery, whose exponent, according to the New York Journal, is Dr. James W. Maiser. He claims that the scalpel should be so cleverly used in the amputation of fingers that even that old friend, casual observer, would not notice that anything was missing.

It is the aim of this new method to repair as rapidly and with as little pain as possible any injury to the human form, and then to replace nature. It has always been the practice of surgeons in amputating a thumb or finger to remove as little as possible of the injured member. Instead of doing this, disciples of the new idea will try to completely hide the fact that there has been any amputation. Dr. Maiser has just completed a series of experiments as to the best ways of treating amputation of the hand or any portion thereof, and as a result has arrived at the conclusion that hand surgery in the past has been sadly neglected.

There always has been a natural tendency on the part of persons who have received an injury to value the hurt in proportion to the size of the injured member, and they will go with cheerful confidence to the nearest doctor's sign for relief if the injury happens to be "only a finger." Many a young doctor, fresh from college, has much the same opinion as had a well-known and celebrated oculist, who, in his later days, after he had become famous, acknowledged to having "spoiled a bushel of eyes" in acquiring his phenomenal skill.

When the amputation of a finger is necessary the predominating idea must be, in the opinion of Dr. Maiser, to cover the stump with flesh from the palmar side. It was formerly the rule that surgeons should save every possible fraction of an inch of finger, but they are now beginning to believe that usefulness and not length should determine the value of the stump. Such stumps should have a sufficient covering, and fingers are cut back until a sufficient palmar flap has been secured. A very annoying class of cases are those where just the end of a finger or thumb has been pinched off, leaving an unsightly square-ended stump, which is of little or no use to the patient.

"When for any reason amputation is necessary at or near the metatarsophalangeal junction," says Dr. Maiser, "the head of the metacarpal bone should be removed, for, while the removal of such bone slightly weakens the hand, it renders it much more sightly."

The principle of this new surgery is to remove the bones of the injured finger sufficiently near the knuckle joints to allow for a closer growth of the remaining bones. This almost completely conceals the loss of any single finger by bringing the remaining ones closer together, and in a manner filling in the space occupied by the missing digit.

Washington's Prayer Book.

St. Stephen's college, at Annandale-on-Hudson, N. Y., has recently acquired George Washington's MS. prayer book, "The Daily Sacrifice." It consists of 24 neatly-written pages in Washington's own handwriting, being prayers for private or social use for each day of the week, composed or copied by him, presumably at an early period of his life. The work is incomplete and ends abruptly. The MS. descended to the last private owner of Mount Vernon, and passed into the hands of a collector, from whom it was purchased by Rev. Charles F. Hoffman, D. D., who presented it to St. Stephen's.

How to Detect Oleomargarine.

To detect oleomargarine from genuine butter a small portion of each is melted in proper receptacles, in which common cotton wicks are inserted and lighted. These will burn freely. METHUSALEH OF FROGS.

Weighed Over Ten Pounds and Was a Foot and a Half Tall.

Rahway turned out one of the greatest murder mysteries of the age, and now it has, according to the New York World, produced a frog compared with which all recorded frogs are pigmies.

Old Moses, with that magic rod of his, brought a plague of frogs that covered Egypt and clogged the yellow Nile. But among all the frogs with which Moses rebuked the Pharaoh, it is dollars to buttons there was no such old "hunker" of a frog as a colored man named Jackson captured the other day in Milton lake, near Rahway, N. J.

He was the original frog, the indubitable Methusaleh and founder of the frog family. When the little pick-aninny Jackson, walking along the lake shore, saw a big stone covered with green slime protruding from the water he poked it. There came forth a noise like all the thunders of Sinai, and the darky fled, screaming.

THE BIG FROG AND A SILVER DOLLAR COMPARED.

Some workmen who were mending a dam near by asked him what the trouble was. He gasped and said an alligator had tried to swallow him. They coaxed and threatened him, offered him money and a drubbing, but nothing would tempt him back to the lake.

The workmen finally found the water monster snoozing in shallow water, underneath some willows. They attacked him with clubs and stunned him. Then they dragged him out on shore.

No one in Rahway ever told a lie. The giant frog weighed 10¾ pounds. His right leg weighed 2¾ pounds, and his left leg 2¼ pounds. He was 18 inches long and 12 inches wide. The width of his mouth was 8 inches, the length of his leg 13½ inches.

And that wasn't all of it. Jackson's father celebrated his silver wedding a night or two after, and the five pounds of frog legs made part and parcel of the feast.

The biggest frogs on earth are found in this country. Nowhere else are frogs so large a feature of swamp and marsh life. A year ago 12 enormous American frogs were sent alive to Europe, where they excited much wonder, but none of them was as large as the Rahway frog here described.

FOR Your Protection we positively state that this remedy does not contain mercury or any other injurious drug.

No "Flim Flam" Game
To Be Worked on Early Purchasers of
The Spalding Bicycle
After the adoption of our 1896 model and a careful estimate of the cost of manufacture, we placed the price on the Spalding Bicycle at $100. The price is now $100 and will continue at $100 throughout the season, no matter what other manufacturers may do.
We don't believe it is fair, honest or good business policy to sell a standard article like the Spalding Bicycle at one price in May and reduce its value in June by a material reduction in price. As a matter of common fairness to early purchasers of Spalding Bicycles and as an evidence of good faith on our part we will, in case of reduction in price during the season, send a rebate check to every purchaser of a Spalding Bicycle of the amount of any such reduction that may be made by us during the season This is our meaning of a GUARANTEE OF PRICE.
Ride the Spalding and you will be happy, contented and assured that you will not be "flim-flammed" in price or quality.

ENTIRETY OF CONTRACT.

DECISION ON THE DOMESTIC'S RIGHT TO QUIT AND RECEIVE PAY.

When There is a Contract to Work by the Month the Full Period Must be Continued to Entitle Employe to Wages.

Another case, which is of particular interest to every employer of domestics in this city, was brought up in Justice Mosher's court yesterday morning in the action of Meke Meysa against Samuel A. Cruikshank.

The complainant was a Japanese chef employed by Mr. Cruikshank April 29th last to serve in his household at a salary of $30 per month. He remained with the family for two months and received his pay at the end of each month. On June 29th he received his compensation for the second month, and started on the third month with the understanding that everything was satisfactory.

After he had worked twelve days on the third month, Meysa decided to leave the employ of Mr. Cruikshank immediately. Since he was employed by the month, the latter told him that he would have to finish the month in his employ. This Meysa refused to do, and when he ceased work he was refused the pay for his services from the time the third month of his service began.

He brought suit through Lawyer Arthur Miller for what he claimed was his hire. Mr. Cruikshank at once retained Counselor McClure to defend the case, and in court yesterday Mr. McClure made the claim that under the law of entirity of contract, the complainant had no claim for services on Mr. Cruikshank as he had violated his agreement by quitting before the month was finished. He argued that Meysa had broken his agreement with the defendant without just cause and now asked to be remunerated for services he had given to Mr. Cruikshank in part performance of the contract under which he labored. To hold the defendant responsible would be to aid an act of bad faith. After voluntarily and without cause making an infraction of the contract which he agreed too when he was employed, and after the employer stood ready to perform his part of the stipulations, abrogated his right to the money for the twelve days.

After hearing the testimony and argument, the court, following the leading case in the Supreme Court of this State (Beach against Mullins 5 vr 344) and other cases in New York and England quoted by Counselor McClure, said: "That the law was well settled in this State, and in fact every other State in this country and in England, that hiring for a month at a fixed sum made an entire contract and that being an entire contract there can be no apportionment. The contract, therefore, must be fulfilled before wages can be legally demanded. The contract not having been fulfilled, and because of no fault of the defendant, judgment must be for the defendant."

The justice further held, quoting Spencer, J. 13 Johns, 364: "It would be an alarming doctrine to hold that the plaintiff might violate the contract, and because he chose to do so, make his own infraction of the agreement the bases for an action."

Judgment was given for the defendant.

Ex-Congressman Dunn's Hurts.

Ex-Congressman Dunn, of Elizabeth, will not be able to get about for some time. He is nursing a broken rib, fractured collar-bone and other injuries received by the jerking of the elevator in the Merchant's Insurance Company's building at Newark on Tuesday while he was calling upon R. V. Lindabury. Just as he stepped on the elevator it started up several inches and threw him.

He went home with his son on a trolley car.

Expert Crook Gets Three Years.

In the Union County Court yesterday Frank Lovell, a burglar, was sentenced to three years in State prison. Lovell was caught after he and a companion had broken into and robbed the cigar store of William Collard at Elizabethport. Lovell's pal escaped. The prisoner said he was from San Francisco. The police say he is an expert crook.

Attended Divine Service.

Cypress Commandery, No. 6, K. of T., and stone Square Lodge, F. and A. M., attended divine service in Mt. Olive Baptist church last night. The sermon was preached by Rev. P. S. Gibson, and he was assisted by Revs. James Groves and W. A. Alexander. There was a good attendance from both lodges.

Many a day's work is lost by sick headache, caused by indigestion and stomach troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most effectual pill for overcoming such difficulties. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

CROSSMAN IN THE TOILS.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE NETHERWOOD SANITARIUM BACKER.

It is Alleged That He Misappropriated Funds to His Own Purposes—Arrested and Then Released on Bail.

The arrest and incarceration of Greenleaf W. Crossman, of the Townsend Sanitarium Company, vice-president of the Empire Loan and Investment Company, 253 Broadway, New York, and his subsequent release on bail, occurred yesterday morning at his home, 173 West Seventy-eighth street, New York city. His wife went his bail for $2,500.

He was arrested on complaint of Rudolph Lerch, manager of the Netherwood Sanitarium, and Carl Davidson, through their counsel, A. P. Miller, of this city, and August Reymert, of 31 Pine street, New York.

The action was brought against him for obtaining money under false representation and misappropriating funds for his personal use, he claiming to have purchased the Netherwood Hotel. He also represented that he was about to purchase another, the Halcyon Hall, Millbrook, Duchess county, N. Y., one of the most magnificent buildings in the State. The defendant claimed that he had bought and paid for the Netherwood Hotel, $85,000.

The preliminary hearing in the case is to come up in Centre Street Police Court tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Rudolph Lerch has a five years contract and was sent out here to the hotel with the necessary help to fix it up properly. When the time came to pay his help their first month's salary he was told, and it was a strict understanding from the start, that the money had to be forthcoming to pay help and other necessary expenses. But it was found that Mr. Crossman had expended the money for private purposes, loaned to friends and acquaintances, paid old bills, and by doing so put the manager "in a hole," so to speak. After the money, $1,400, had been invested by Mr. Lerch, he found Mr. Crossman had been up in supplementary proceedings and swore that he was not worth one dollar.

THE LARGEST.

Twenty-six Cars of Happy Excursionists Start for Asbury Park.

The largest excursion for the seashore to go from Plainfield this year left the North Avenue station this morning shortly after 8 o'clock. There were two sections of thirteen cars each and the combined Sunday-schools of the First Baptist church, the Grace P. E. church and their chapels, with the other excursionists, managed to fill all but three of the cars. The colored people turned out in large numbers, as three cars were reserved for the Mt. Olive Baptist church and they were soon filled. The morning was a delightful one and everybody was all anticipation to get to the shore and enjoy the cooling breezes. As usual, there was a throng of friends who came to see the excursion off, and wish that they were going too. The excursion returns from the shore at 6:30 o'clock and will arrive here shortly after 8 o'clock.

That Ill-Fated Thirteen.

The Press a few days ago told about Randolph Marsh, of Plainfield avenue, setting a thirteen-months-old hen on thirteen eggs and hatching out thirteen fine chickens. The hen must have seen the item in The Press, for she has disowned the last chicken hatched and refuses to countenance it at all. So Mr. Marsh has taken the little fowl in charge and domiciles it under his front porch where it is growing fast.

Plainfield '96.

On Sunday afternoon next the following services will be held in the First Baptist church: 4 p. m., union prayer service. Prayer for spiritual power and direction in convention plans and work; 4:20 p. m., service of song; 4:30, citizens mass meeting in the interest of the convention.

It is hoped to have one and possibly two of the best speakers of the Washington convention address the meeting.

His Bail Withdrawn.

Constable Totten, Somerville, came to Plainfield this morning and arrested James Kiedling, of the Duke Scott farm, near Somerville. Keidling was arrested some time ago on the charge of embezzlement and released on bail. He came to this city to visit his brother and while here, the bail was withdrawn and he was re-arrested by the Somerville official and taken to that place.

Mayor's Address Postponed.

Mayor Alex. Gilbert will not address the Young Men's Association of the Monroe Avenue chapel tomorrow evening, as was previously announced. The address has been postponed one week on account of the bicycle parade.

FOR ALL EXEMPTS NOW.

THE RETIRED FIREMEN MAKE IMPORTANT AMENDMENT TO BY-LAWS.

Borough Exempts Can Now Become Members of the City Organization as Well as Can Any of the Retired Fire Fighters.

The Exempt Firemen's Association met last evening and transacted important business. The constitution was so changed that all exempt firemen in North Plainfield can legally become members of the Plainfield Association and any fireman moving to Plainfield from any out of town place can join the association, providing he has served his time, and is thereby exempt. The association has been considering for the past month the advisability of such a change and last evening the report of the committee was adopted unanimously. This is the first association of the kind that has thrown open its doors and made like concessions and the change is a most commendable one. There are a large number of exempt firemen in the borough, but they have no association and they do not feel like going to the expense of organizing one and furnishing quarters. Under these conditions the action of the Plainfield association should prove a great benefit to the North Plainfield exempts. It now remains to be seen how they will receive the new order of things.

TO RECUPERATE IN THE BASTILE.

A Professional Beggar Arrested Across the Brook.

A most dejected and forlorn looking specimen of humanity was apprehended on Rockview avenue this morning by Chief Marshal Wilson. The man was making his way along that thoroughfare when the chief stopped and questioned him as to where he was going and what he was doing around here. The stranger at first said he was on his way to New York State, but on close questioning the chief learned that the stranger had been going from house to house demanding money and clothes.

At the station house the chief found an outfit such as is carried by professional beggars. He gave his name as John Dornen. Later in the morning he was brought before Justice Crosley who gave him his choice between $10 or twenty days. He will recuperate for the next twenty days at Somerville.

A DESIGN SELECTED.

Mr. Tracy the Architect for the New Clubhouse for the Hillside Club.

The design for the new clubhouse of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club has been selected and all that now remains to be done before the house is started is to arrange for the bonding of the club. A special meeting of the board of governors of the club was held last evening at the club house on Watchung avenue, and plans submitted by A. L. C. Marsh, A. D. Shepard, Jr., and Evarts Tracy, were considered. They were carefully examined and after considerable deliberation the board selected the design of Evarts Tracy. No other important business was transacted.

One of the new by-laws of the club says that there shall be no playing on the tennis courts or golf links of the club on Suddays.

The Manhattan Changes Hands.

Jacob Hipp's hotel on Somerset street, known as The Manhattan, passed into other hands yesterday. J. Henry Gracely is the new proprietor. Mr. Gracely will move his family here from Brooklyn, Conn., early next week. Mr. Hipp, the former proprietor, it is understood will return to Raritan, where he originally came from.

A Dime Sociable.

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Church of Christ, will hold a dime sociable this evening in the Liberty Street mission. A very pleasing programme will be rendered including vocal and instrumental music and recitations, after which ice cream, cake and lemonade will be served. Everybody will be made welcome.

Scalded by Steam.

Mrs. Geo. Gray, of 1001 South Second street, was quite severely scalded about the hands by steam yesterday. She was ironing and took up an iron and placed it in a pan of water to cool. The steam enveloped her hands and arms and caused a painful injury.

A Day at Boynton Beach.

There was quite a family picnic at Boynton Beach yesterday. It included the familes of T. H. Keller, of East Front street, S. P. T. Wilbur, of East Third street, and John Craig, of Dunellen. The paternal part of the picnic tried their luck at weak fishing and succeeded in capturing a number.

Poison Ivy, insect bites, bruises, scalds, burns, are quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, the great pile cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

SAILORS, NOT COWBOYS.

RASH YOUTHS WHO START FOR THE PRARIE WILL GO TO SEA.

Inspired By Dime Novels They Ran Away From Home, and at Westfield Commenced Their Depredations—Now Ended

Roland Leveridge and William Hanold, the two young fellows who were arrested in this city for attempting to steal a bicycle at Westfield last Saturday, were arraigned before Judge McCormick at Elizabeth yesterday morning on three charges, one for breaking, entering and stealing, a second for petit larceny and the third for grand larceny.

The pair belong in Brooklyn, and went to a place back of Westfield, where they camped. They lived on what they could steal from the town. One night they broke into a store and stole some cash from the till, and on another occasion cut a tent in half and ran away with one portion of it. They robbed garden patches and hen coops and committed all sorts of depredations.

When the lads were brought before the court their parents were present and promised Judge McCormick that if the boys were let go they would see to it that the lads were not given an opportunity to repeat their misdeeds. It was their intention to have the lads placed on a schoolship.

Judge McCormick gave the prisoners a severe lecture, and then suspended sentence.

REVIVAL IN SHOOTING.

Amateur Shooters' League Adopt a Handicap System.

The handicap system adopted by the New Jersey Amateur Trap Shooters' League at its last team contest will no doubt bring about a revival in shooting.

The teams are handicapped in accordance with their previous showing. In this way novice shots are encouraged. The trouble in the past has been that novices were pitted against crack shots on equal terms with disastrous results.

It requires a few years practice before a new man becomes proficient in handling the breechloader. Meanwhile he is entitled to some incentive, such as a handicap of birds or in the way of distance when facing the traps.

PICNICED IN THE WOODS.

Sunday-school Scholars of St. Joseph's Church Have a Good Time.

The annual picnic of the Sunday-school scholars of St. Joseph's church, held in Hyde's grove yesterday, was the occasion of great fun and merriment. The affair was arranged by the teachers, as usual, and there were about 100 scholars present. They reached the grove about 9 o'clock in the morning and remained there till 6 o'clock in the evening. The day was passed in playing all sorts of games and singing popular tunes. An abundance of good things, such as ice cream, cake, sandwiches, etc., were provided.

Rev. Father Miller and the visiting priest, Rev. Father Cary, of Trenton, were present and assisted much in making the day an ideal one for all. Four wagons were pressed into service to carry the younger scholars to and from the grove. The picnic will long be remembered by all as one of delight and pleasure.

Police Department Changes.

The summer vacation comes for the policeman as well as the clerk. Patrolman Cooney began his vacation yesterday which he will spend in the mountains of Pennsylvania. Patrolman McCue returned yesterday after spending his vacation in Ocean Grove. Roundsman Frederickson also returned to duty. Patrolman Flynn was transferred from the day force to the night force to cover Cooney's beat in the neighborhood of West Seventh street.

A Wild Acting Dog.

The family of H. A. McGee, of Orchard place, Washington Park, were alarmed this morning by a dog which was running about the street and showing signs of hydrophobia. A member of the household telephoned to fire headquarters for someone to go and shoot the animal. When the party arrived in the Park the dog was not to be found.

Editor Boyd Loses His Daughter.

Miss Alice Edith Boyd, only daughter of Hugh Boyd, editor of the New Brunswick Home News, died yesterday morning at her father's home, Livingston avenue and New street, after an illness of eight months. She was twenty years of age.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE CARNIVAL AGAIN.

A BIG TURNOUT OF CYCLISTS AND LOTS OF DECORATIONS PROMISED.

Not Many of the Decorations Were Spoiled By the Rain, and They Will Be Out Tomorrow Night—Same Route.

A glorious day tomorrow can hardly make up for all the pleasure that was spoiled Tuesday evening by the rain, but nevertheless the bicycle parade of the "Midsummer Night's Carnival," which is to take place tomorrow night, promises to be as great a success as before. Most of the decorations of last Tuesday night have been saved, and will reappear in line tomorrow night; there are many who have just decided to decorate, and will have something entirely new. Many did not try to join the parade, Tuesday, as they feared there would be too few in line, but they have got bravely over that and will turn out with the rest tomorrow.

Many of the residents along the line of march decorated their homes quite elaboorately and many more are preparing to dothe same tomorrow. Altogether the prospects for a big parade to morrow are very bright and, unless another thunder storm comes up, the affair will be truly a delightful one.

The Y. M. C. A. Cyclers, who made such an excellent turnout, expect to have as large a one tomorrow night. Invitation have been sent to the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers of New Brunswick, Rahway and Westfield and it is expected that each will send a delegation. The Y. M. C. A. Cyclers will meet at the Y. M. C. A. building at 7:15 and ride in a body to take their position in line. It is hoped that the other clubs will turn out as well for the parade tomorrow evening and keep up the reputation of the city.

The parade will start from the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church promptly at 7:30 o'clock so that the first part of the parade will be made in the daylight and the beauty of the different decorations seen.

The committee wish to give special thanks to Edward White for donating the ribbon for their official sashes and to The Daily Press for printing on the same. They also wish to thank the cyclists who so warmly seconded their efforts to make the affair a success and only ask that they will turn out as well tomorrow night. It is hoped that the employes of the Potter Press Works and the Pond Tool Works will follow the example of the Scott Press Works men and organize a club for the occasion.

SECOND EUCHRE PARTY.

Revere House Guests Enjoy an Evening With the Cards.

The second progressive euchre party was given last evening at the Revere House, and was a delightful affair.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Plass, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Halsey, Mr. and Mrs. George B DeRevere, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Harbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Bolse, Mrs. Henry Brevoort, Mrs. Roome, Mrs. Fowler, Miss Belle Halsey, Miss Maud Fowler. J. Hamilton Jaffray, Jr., Harry Halsey and Herbert Plass.

The first lady's prize was won by Mrs. George B. DeRevere, second prize by Mrs. H. C. Plass. Harry Halsey received first gentleman's prize and D. F. Harbaugh second prize. The consolation prize was won by Quincy Bolse.

After the game refreshments were served, and dancing followed. Great praise is due Miss Halsey, who managed the affair.

Took an Unpremeditated Bath.

A. W. Brown, the North avenue barber, had an experience yesterday while going home to dinner that was far from pleasant. He lives on Elm place and he frequently goes through Stiger's alley and crosses Tier's dam. He took that route yesterday and the water being higher than usual he found it necessary to step carefully on the dry stones in passing over. He got along all right until he stepped on a round stone with rolling proclivities. Quick as a flash he found himself in the water, and before he could extricate himself he received a pretty thorough soaking. He succeeded in getting on dry land, when he hurried home and made a change of clothing. Mr. Brown, it is safe to say, will be cautious in the future when he attempts to cross the dam.

Where Is Polly?

A valuable parrot belonging to Mrs. Rushmore, of East Fifth street, flew away Tuesday and has not been seen since. Mrs. Rushmore prized the parrot highly.

It doesn't matter much whether sick headache, billiousness, indigestion and constipation are caused by neglect or by unavoidable circumstances; DeWitt's Little Early Risers will speedily cure them all. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A SUCCESSFUL STRIKE.

CARPENTERS ON A GARWOOD FACTORY TO GET MORE WAGES.

Asked for an Increase From $2.25 to $2.50, and After Stopping Work, it was Granted—Most All of Them Plainfielders

Dissatisfied with their wages of $2.25 for nine hours work a day, thirty-two carpenters employed in the construction of the factory of the Hercelus Bicycle Tubing Company at Garwood went on a strike this morning. The men wanted a raise of twenty-five cents a day.

The men, twenty-seven of whom are from this city and five from Newark, have been working for two weeks on the building. A portion of them were getting $2.50 a day, but the majority only $2.25. They were dissatisfied with this scale and wanted uniform pay of $2 50. Last night a meeting of the carpenters was held in this city and it was decided to demand an increase of twenty five cents a day for all who were not receiving $2 50. If it was refused they decided to go on a strike. A committee of three were appointed as follows to present their claims to Hedden & Son, of Newark, the contractors: Louis Donavan, Andrew Mattis and Charles Johnson.

Before the time for work to commence this morning the committee approached Superintendent Samuel Wright and made the demands. He said he had no authority to grant them, and the men refused to go to work. Word was sent to the contractors and they came to the scene of the strike and listened to what the dissatisfied workmen had to offer. The work could not be stopped and they agreed to the concessions. Part of the carpenters went to work immediately and the rest will start tomorrow morning. Only seventeen out of the thirty-two are union men, but they all acted together with the exception of S. P. Hoffman, of this city, the forman and a journeyman by the name of Schooley, who refused to go out with them.

Yesterday the hod-carriers on the same building struck for an increase of twenty-five cents a day, making their wages $2 for nine hours. Their demands were granted.

An Exhibition of the Ball Nozzle.

An exhibition of the work of the Ball nozzle, in which three streams of water are combined in one, will be given on West Ninth street, between Park and Arlington avenues, tomorrow night at 7 o'clock. It is well known that should one of the large buildings in town burn, that an ordinary one and one-eighth inch stream of water would not be of much use, for by the time it reaches the height attained by most of our buildings, it is reduced to spray, and the heat easily absorbs it. The idea, therefore, is to consolidate three streams of water and send them through one nozzle, practically a water tower on a small scale.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The following summons have been issued in Justice Newcorn's court, on contract, returnable August 4th: Griffen against Drake, Griffen against McKees, Griffen against Beerbower, Griffen against Reid, Griffen against Voorhees, Griffen against James, F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company against Benner. In each case Clarence L. Murphy is counsel for the plaintiff.

Trouble Over a Load of Hay.

Two farmers, one from Summit and the other from Liberty Corners, have quarreled over a load of hay which the Summit man refuses to pay for and a suit has been started in Justice Nash's court, in consequence. The case is W. E. King against Michael Flynn, on contract, and will come up in the court next week. A. H. Cornish will represent the plaintiff.

Patients Improving.

Samuel Till, colored, who dislocated his hip on Plainfield avenue, Tuesday morning, was reported from the hospital this morning as improving nicely. Patrick Kellegher, who was also injured by falling off an electric light pole on West Third street yesterday morning, is also on the road to recovery.

Box Car Afire.

A box car in a freight train which reached this city about four o'clock yesterday afternoon, was discovered on fire inside. Edward Martin, porter at the North avenue station soon deluged the fire with a stream of water, although the interior of the car was considerably damaged.

—The members of Cypress Commandery, Colored Masons, attended service at the Mt. Olive Baptist church last evening and listened to a special sermon preached to them by Rev. P. S. Gibson.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

DEATH OF GARRETT

The News Came as a Complete Surprise at Baltimore.

A MENTAL WRECK FOR YEARS

Brief Sketch of the Unfortunate Career of the Late Ex-President of the B. & O. Railroad—Left a Fortune of $12,000,000 by His Father.

Baltimore, July 30.—The news of the death yesterday at Deer Park of Robert Garrett, ex-president of the B. & O. railroad came as a profound surprise to the people of this city, where it was not generally known that Mr. Garret was so seriously ill. Mr. Garrett had been a hopeless mental invalid for many years, but his physical infirmities were not such as to cause any uneasiness to his friends until about two weeks ago, when he began to fail, and it was thought best to remove him from "Uplands," his country home, near Baltimore, to Deer Park, in the hope that the change of air and scenery would benefit him. The improvement was not so great as his physicians had hoped for and within the past week the patient had suffered much from mental depression and melancholia. On Monday his physical condition showed a marked change for the worse, and yesterday his condition became critical. His devoted wife was with him when the end came, which was peaceful and apparently painless. The immediate cause of death is understood to be nephritis, from which he had suffered for many years.

ROBERT GARRETT'S CAREER.

Left a Fortune of $12,000,000. His Railroad Experience Was a Failure.

Robert Garrett, eldest son of the great railroad man and banker, John W. Garrett, was born in Baltimore on April 9, 1847. After he was graduated from Princeton college he was taken into the banking firm of Robert Garrett & Son, which had been founded by his grandfather and was then being managed by his father. When Gen. Robert E. Lee resigned from the presidency of the Valley railroad of Virginia, Robert Garrett, who was then 24 years old, succeeded him. In 1879 he was elected third vice-president of the Baltimore & Ohio road of which his father was president. Two years later he was advanced to the first vice-presidency. His father trained him carefully in banking and railroad methods, but the young man had been reared amid too much luxury to permit of his growing into the same practical business habits that characterized his father. When his father died in 1884 Robert succeeded him as president of the Baltimore & Ohio road. The fortune he inherited from his father was estimated at $12,000,000. Within three years after the mantle of his father had fallen upon his shoulders the great Baltimore & Ohio road, which was considered almost part and parcel of the government of Maryland itself, passed out of Garrett's hands. He had the mortification of seeing one of his subordinates raised to the presidency from which he had been deposed and, to fill the cup of his bitterness, his worst enemy, Jay Gould, gobbled up the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company, which had been the only telegraph company that had been able for a long time successfully to fight the Western Union company. Garrett had for a long time coveted the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore railroad. President Thomas A. Scott of the Pennsylvania road also wanted to get possession of it, and finally succeeded in getting in ahead of Garrett, through, it is said, the latter's unguarded tongue in giving his plans away. Unable to bear this defeat with equanimity, Mr. Garrett built a road of his own which cost over $8,000,000 and proved a fizzle. And that was the beginning of the end. Mr. Garrett's wife was a Miss Frick of Baltimore, a charming and accomplished woman.

American Students in France.

Washington, July 30.—Official information has been received in Washington by the France-American committe, organized for the purpose of securing fuller privileges for American students in the educational institutions of France, that in all probability the faculties of letters will soon be open to Americans as freely as the other faculties that have already been opened. There are already fifty or more American students enrolled in the French faculties.

Released from Cuban Prisons.

Washington, July 30.—The department of state is advised by Consul General Lee at Havana, under date of July 23, that George Colver, an American citizen arrested in Manzanillo, district of Santiago de Cuba, in the month of April of this year, and Manuel Romagosa, also an American citizen residing in the same province, have been officially notified of their unconditional release from prison.

Large Estate Soon To Be Settled.

Stamford, Conn., July 30.—The J. Hoyt estate, involving $4,000,000, after being in the courts for seven years, is to be settled. An agreement has been reached between the contending parties, and within one month the entire estate will be disposed of.

Winner of Double Scull Race.

Halifax, N. S., July 30.—The professional double scull race yesterday afternoon was won by Gaudaur and Rogers, with Bubear and Barry second, and Durnan and Hackett last.

Russia's Credit Is Good.

Paris, July 30.—The Russian loan of 1,000,000,000 francs ($200,000,000) issued by the Rothschilds, has been covered twenty-five times over.

BRYAN NOTIFICATION.

Madison Square Garden in New York Rented for August 12.

New York, July 30.—William P. St. John, ex-president of the National Bank of the Republic, who has taken a very active interest in the promotion of the campaign of Bryan and Sewall, said this morning that he had signed a contract for the hiring of Madison Square garden for the notification meeting which will be held on the evening of August 12. Mr. St. John also said that the New York department of the democratic national committee and the national silver committee, have taken adjoining apartments in the hotel Bartholdi for their New York quarters and will open them on August 1. William G. McLaughlin will have charge of the democratic headquarters and Oliver Sumner Teall will have charge of the silver headquarters. They will be conducted separately and distinctly.

Fusion in Michigan.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 30.—There will probably be a fusion of the new silver party and the populists with the democrats at the democratic state convention, to be held at Bay City next month. After the date of the convention was fixed by the democratic state central committee, invitations were extended to the silver party and populists to also hold their state conventions in Bay City on the same date. The plan is to hold a joint convention and put a united silver ticket in the field.

CHAUTAUQUA L. S. C.

A Strong Course Has Been Prepared for the Year 1896-97.

Chautauqua, N. Y., July 30.—Yesterday was rallying day for the Chautauqua literary and scientific circles, and thousands of delegates, representing circles of the C. L. S. C., from all parts of the country were present. The meeting and recitations formally inaugurated the C. L. S. C. season at Chautauqua for 1896. A strong course has been prepared for the year 1896-7. The prescribed literature includes five books, viz: "The Growth of the French Nation," by George P. Adams of Yale; "French Traits," by Brownell; "A Study of the Sky," by Herbert A. Howe of Denver; "A Survey of Greek Civilization," by Prof. J. P. Mahaffy of Trinity college, Dublin, Ireland, and "A History of Greek Art," by Prof. Frank B. Tarbell, of the University of Chicago. The lecture of Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus of Plymouth church, Chicago, upon Oliver Cromwell, drew a large audience yesterday afternoon. It not only afforded an admirable glance into the life of the great conqueror, but the doctor drew apt illustrations of picturesque diction, and his lectures give an unusual opportunity to study the art of oratory. Other lectures of great merit were those by Prof. Matthews of Chicago and Prof. White of Harvard; that of Prof. Matthews upon the French revolution, "The Constitutional Monarchy," being exceptionally fine.

To Promote Christian Life and Service.

Northfield, Mass., July 30.—The fourteenth general conference for the promotion of Christain life and services will open here to-night. D. L. Moody will preside and speak. All indications point towards this as being the large conference ever held in Northfield, and the townspeople have made extensive preparations for the accommodation of those who attend. Many guests have already arrived and the town now presents an unusually lively appearance.

In the Hands of a Receiver.

Boston, July 30.—The Boston Daily Publishing Co., publisher of the late Standard, has gone into the hands of a receiver. This action was taken in the superior court by Judge Richardson in the bill in equity which was brought by John Soley of Chelsea against the corporation. Soley is a creditor of the concern to the amount of $3,000 for money loaned. The property is alleged to be worth $60,000 and the liabilities amount to $80,000.

Cardinal Taschereau Very Low.

Montreal, July 30.—The hot weather is having a bad effect on the health of Cardinal Taschereau, and he is very low.

ENTERPRISING BOYS.

How Two Chicago Youngsters Earn Money by Their Own Efforts.

You think, perhaps, that boys have a hard time making any money. But that depends a good deal on the boys.

After the last hard rainstorm miles of concrete on the south side of Chicago fairly swarmed with angleworms, drowned out of their holes by the water. Doubtless a good many boys saw these worms and thought what good bait they would make if there was only a place to fish. But one boy went further than this. He took a basket and spent several hours in filling it with worms. In all he gathered about 1,600, and bright and early Saturday morning he presented himself at the office of a certain fishing club that makes a trip every week or two to the lakes of Wisconsin. Now, these fishermen want angleworms very much indeed, and they always have trouble in getting a good supply. Accordingly, when this enterprising boy appeared with his basketful of bait, he had no trouble at all in doing business.

TWO BOYS WHO EARN THEIR LIVING.

The 1,600 worms sold for three dollars cash—and it was cheap, too. More than that, the boy has promised to bring worms to the club every Saturday.

It is safe to say that such a boy will some time own his own home, and it won't be in a back street, either.

Another Chicago boy has found an odd way of making money. One day he stood looking into one of the lagoons at Lincoln park. Just under the surface of the water he could see whole schools of beautiful goldfish swimming about. For these fish, since the ponds were first stocked with them, have increased very rapidly until they number thousands, if not millions. The young fisher knew that the lagoons all opened into the lake, and he reasoned that some of the goldfish would swim out along the sea wall, where it would be perfectly allowable to fish for them. Accordingly he dug bait and seated himself patiently on the piling, as near to the opening of the lagoon as he could, and it was not long before he caught a goldfish. This he preserved alive and sold for 20 cents to a dealer in aquarium supplies downtown. Of course he catches other fish, and sometimes he won't get a goldfish in a whole day, but every one that he does get brings him 20 cents. That is why this boy sits on the piling where other fishers say that the fishing isn't good.

There are plenty of other boys who not only earn money, but often support themselves and help their mothers and smaller brothers and sisters.—Chicago Record.

Don't Let Yourself Get Thin

If you get hungry three times a day, enjoy your food, and enjoy the next two hours, you are happy enough.

If not, what you want is to get there.

A great deal of sickness begins with loss of fat. You know this. When your friend is in good flesh, you say, "How well you look!" and when he is thin you don't say what you think, but you worry about him.

Apply this to yourself. Don't let yourself get thin.

The diseases of thinness that we fear most are scrofula in the child and consumption in the adult. If you keep your child and yourself plump, you do not fear these diseases.

It will be useful to you to know the exact reason for this.

The germ of scrofula and consumption thrives on leanness. Fat keeps it down. Fat, then, is the food-means of getting the odds in our favor when contending against this germ.

Everybody knows that cod-liver oil is a fat producer.

Scott's Emulsion

is cod-liver oil made easy. The taste is concealed; the oil half-digested; it is half-ready to make fat.

In health you get this fat from your ordinary food, and have no need of cod-liver oil. When you begin to lose flesh, you are not getting the fat that you must have out of your ordinary food, and you do need cod-liver oil. Take Scott's Emulsion.

AFRAID OF A MUTINY

Spain Will Send Reinforcements to Cuba Without Arms.

MANY DESERTIONS FROM THE ARMY

Discovery of a Secret Cuban Committee in Madrid and a Separatist Scheme Relative to the Philippine Islands Adds To Spain's Troubles.

London, July 30.—A dispatch to the Central News of Lisbon says that private advices received from Madrid state that the existence of a secret Cuban committee has been discovered there and that certain Cuban exiles who were in Madrid have vanished. It has also been discovered, the advices say, that separatist schemes relative to the Philippine islands are on foot. As a result of certain acts of insubordination among the last 600 men embarked for Cuba and the discovery that secret proclamations were being circulated among the soldiery, and in view of the reluctance of the troops to go to Cuba, the reinforcements, forty thousand strong, who will be embarked at the end of August will be shipped without arms, through fear of mutiny among them, and their arms will be forwarded by other vessels. The advices also state that desertions from the army are numerous, especially in Aragon. Fear is entertained by the authorities that disorders will occur in connection with the dispatching of reinforcements for the Spanish forces in Cuba and elaborate precautions are being taken to prevent trouble. Instructions have been given to the Spanish censor to suppress all telegrams relating to the matter.

Shot in a Spanish Fortress.

Havana, July 30.—A number of persons suspected of being connected with political plots will be deported to-day to the penal colony on the Chafarinas islands, Africa. Narciso Rodriguel Torres, a prisoner of war, was shot this morning at the Cabana fortress. Twenty-one persons who had been deported to the isle of Pines recently mutinied and attempted to kill the local governor. Their plains, however, failed of succes and they will be brought to Havana for trial.

JAMESON IS SATISFIED.

Surprised at the Leniency of His Sentence. Will Return to Africa.

London, July 30.—All of the leading English newspapers approve of the conviction and sentence of Dr. Jameson and the other Transvaal raiders. In an interview, Dr. Jameson says that he was surprised at the leniency of the sentence after Baron Russell's summing up. He said that he and his friends had all decided to return to Africa as soon as their sentences had expired. In an editorial the Chronicle says: "The sentences are merciful. At length the raid is reduced to its proper proportion. We are glad to be able to announce that Mr. Chamberlain has definitely promised to sit upon the special committee to investigate the administration of Rhodesia, but he desires that a perfectly impartial chairman should be appointed."

HODYNSKI PLAIN DISASTER.

The Czar Issues a Ukase Placing the Blame Upon Moscow Authorities.

St. Petersburg, July 30.—An imperial ukase has been issued stating that the czar, having personally considered the results of the initial inquiry into the disaster that occurred on the Hodynsky plain, just outside of Moscow, on the occasion of the popular fete in connection with the coronation of the czar, has countermanded the order for a further inquiry. The ukase declares that the Moscow authorities are answerable for the disaster and orders that Police Prefect Vlassovsky be cashiered and that minor penalties be inflicted upon the other authorities who have been found to be in any way responsible for the calamity.

MORELAND'S $26,900 FINE.

Equal to the Shortage for Which He Was Convicted, But over $300,000 Is Missing.

Pittsburg, July 30.—The fine of $26,900 with the sentence of three years' imprisonment in Riverside penitentiary imposed upon mayor W. C. Moreland, former city attorney, for embezzling city funds, was the amount of the shortage upon which he was convicted although between $300,000 and $400,000 is unaccounted for on the books of the city attorney. His assistant, W. H. House, must pay a fine of $1,000 and serve two years in the penitentiary.

He Gives Away a Fortune.

Danbury, Conn., July 30. — John Coleman Martin of this city has just received word from his uncle, John Coleman, of Savannah, Ga., that he has been made the latter's heir, and notifying him to go on and prepare to take possession of the property. Mr. Coleman is worth $25,000. He is 87 years old, and says he feels that end is drawing near. Mr. Martin is 61 years of age, and has eked out an existence doing odd jobs for a number of years past.

Schooner Run Down and Sunk.

Halifax, July 30.—A private dispatch reports that the schooner Geneva of LaHave, N. S., was run down on the Grand Banks and sent to the bottom with one of the crew on board. Capt. Bomkeye and the remainder of the crew were rescued and landed at St. Johns, N. F. The captain had one leg broken and four of the other survivors were injured, three of them seriously.

SEWALL MUST GO

Watson Says Populists Demand His Withdrawal.

WILL NOT DO ALL THE YIELDING

Otherwise, No Division on Electors and a Straight Fight—Sewall's Retirement Would Not Hurt His Party, Watson Says.

Atlanta, Ga., July, July 30.—The Atlanta Constitution yesterday sent the following telegram to Hon. Thos. G. Watson, the people's party vice-presidential nominee: "In your letter sent out Tuesday night from Augusta you say that if the democrats are ready for a fair division of electors so are you, and if not, then two sets of electors will be put in the field. Please wire upon receipt of this your idea of fair division. On the basis of what vote do you think apportionment of electors in the several states should be made? Kindly define your position on this point in order that we may give it publicity."

Can't Do All the Yielding.

To this Mr. Watson replied: "Replying to yours, I state that what I have heretofore said was based upon the idea that your party should show some patriotism and retire Mr. Sewall. If he remains on the ticket and your party declines the St. Louis overtures there can be no division on electors. There can only be a straight fight. The democratic managers must not demand that the populists do all the yielding. You must do some of it yourselves. Sewall can come off the ticket without hurting his party. My withdrawal would kill mine. Our people cannot be led to the support of Bryan and Sewall. Unless Sewall retires the masses of our party will, in my judgment, demand a straight populist ticket. THOMAS E. WATSON."

AGAINST A THIRD TICKET.

Hon. W. A. Chipley Says Florida Democrats Will Not Support It.

Atlanta, Ga., July 30.—A special from Pensacola, Fla., says: Hon. W. D. Chipley, candidate for the United States senate from that state, and who has been classed among the gold standard leaders of Florida, has received a telegram from Gen. E. S. Bragg, dated Chicago, and asking in behalf of the independent sound money movement, "who is the right man to organize Florida sound money democrats for the third tickes." To this telegram Mr. Chipley has sent the following answer: "Disruption of the democratic organization means more harm to the south than the people of the north can understand. The democratic party has ever been the bulwark of the liberties of our people, and I do not believe 500 democrats in Florida will support the third ticket you propose if nominated. I know of no democrat of prominence or influence in Florida available for your purpose. Florida will stand by the Chicago nomines by enormous majorities, and will maintain democratic supremacy in domestic affairs."

MAINE DEMOCRATS.

The State Committee Votes To Reconvene the Old Convention.

Augusta, Me., July 30.—A meeting of the democratic state committee here last evening decided, by a vote of 11 to 5, to reconvene the old convention, and by a vote of 14 to 2—York and Cumberland committeemen voting for Portland—it was decided to hold the convention in Waterville. Hanson and other prominent free silver men favored Bangor, but compromised on Waterville. But six of the sixteen members of the committee were present, the others being reported by proxies. The gold democrats were conspicuous by their absence. The date of the convention was fixed for Aug. 6. The general impression seemed to be that it will nominate a silver candidate on the national platform.

Silver Party Executive Committee.

Washington, July 30.—Charles D. Lane of California, chairman of the national committee of the national silver party, has designated Messrs. F. P. Keeney of New York city, G. S. Nixon of Nevada, B. O. Fower of Boston, W. H. (Coin) Harvey of Chicago and C. J. Hillyer of Washington, members of the executive committee. These appointments complete the membership of the committe, as I. N. Stevens of Denver was elected vice-chairman, W. P. St. John of New York treasurer and R. E. Diffendorfer of Philadelphia secretary at the meeting of the committee held in St. Louis last week.

Declines Re-election.

Nashville, Tenn., July 30.—Representative Joseph E. Washington, dem., has addressed an open letter to the democrats of his district, the sixth, declining to be a candidate for re-election, because he finds it impossible to support the Chicago platform. In his letter he says: "I do not believe that the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, which is so widely different from the present market ratio, can give us a bimetallic currency. In my judgment, this can only result in forcing the United States to silver monometallism, and in establishing the single silver standard. This, in my judgment, would be most disastrous in its consequences."

National Populist Headquarters.

Raleigh, N. C., July 30.—Senator Butler, who was here last evening, said he had not yet selected national populist headquarters. It will be several days before he decides. He has invited several prominent populists to go to Alabama and enter the campaign now nearly closed in that state and will also bring some to North Carolina during the campaign.

Sometimes the most unexpected thing happens. In the minds of many the free silver believer is associated with the "hayseed" individual of the agricultural community. But now we are treated to the spectacle of Oliver Sumner Teall, the once famous Beau Brummel of polite New York society, announcing himself as a supporter of Bryan and Sewall.

A new low-price record was established on corn in the leading markets Tuesday, the Chicago quotations having fallen to 23¾ cents per bushel for the July delivery, and 24¾ cents for September. The price depression reflects the effect of liberal receipts and the prospect that another phenomenal crop yield will follow the unprecedented harvest of last year.

Those pessimists, with which every community are afflicted, who are constantly questioning the sincerity of the ministers of the gospel because they frequently receive a larger compensation than some of the lay members of the congregation, and who generally put the whole ministry in the same category, should study the case of the Long Island pastor who received the meagre salary of $25 per month and was then ousted from his position because he dredged for oysters in order that he might earn sufficient additional money to eke out a respectable existence. There can be no exception to the minister when we consistently apply the scriptural advice, "The laborer is worthy of his hire."

A test of the New Jersey's so called "blue laws" has recently been made at Belmar, and the result will be looked upon with particular interest in Plainfield where the Sunday observance law is rigidly enforced. Warrants were issued for the arrest of a merchant for selling candy on Sunday. The counsel for the defendant did not attempt to refute the evidence offered that the sale was made, but confined his argument to showing that the law, under which the arrest was made, was an absurd one. It was passed in 1798, when candy and cigars were not liberally purchased, and was not intended at that time to apply to petty cases. The jury, after considering the case for five minutes, returned a verdict of acquittal.

This campaign is prolific in idoms, and here is one of them: William M. Singerly is the editor of the Philadelphia Record, an erstwhile candidate of the Democrats for Governor of Pennsylvania, and at present a candidate of the same party for Presidential elector in that State. But both in his private life and in his paper he is bitterly opposed to the election of Bryan and Sewall. Knowing his opposition to the success of the ticket, an anxious Democrat, who is a supporter of the regularly nominated candidates, wrote him a letter asking how he would vote in the electoral college if the Democratic ticket should carry Pennsylvania. Mr. Singerly answers that he would vote for Bryan and Sewall, but he takes consolation in the statement that he does not think there is the slightest chance of his being placed in this delicate and rather inconsistent position.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

Ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr, who makes his home in this city, is an all-around campaigner and can talk Republicanism from any standpoint of the band wagon. When the tariff was the issue he had tons of statistics at the tip of his tongue to fire at his audiences and when he couldn't make a telling point with a strict adherence to cold figures, he told a funny story to illustrate his point. Those who couldn't be reached by an exposition of problems were generally touched by the laughable story, and in this way he met the two extremes of his audience. Now that the tariff has taken to the background and the currency question has loomed into the campaign as the paramount issue, he can talk money just as well as he could orate on high protection before. However, it is generally conceded that this quaint speaker got the worst end of the debate into which he entered with "Coin" Harvey at Chicago last winter. But he is up to the scratch and ready for another bout with anybody that comes along. Just now, Whitelaw Reid, for whom he contributes a good deal of Republican argument to The Tribune, and who acts somewhat in the capacity of a manager for him, is endeavoring to arrange a debate between him and some silver advocate, to be held at Asbury Park.

What Some Merry Boys and Girls Did for a Worn-Out Horse.

The hill was alive with merry boys and girls on a bright Saturday afternoon in winter. What fun it was indeed to coast swiftly down the icy slope, and what shouts of ringing laughter as the sleds flew down the hill.

Young and old seemed to be having the gayest time possible. Big boys on double runners, with rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes, turned the sharp corner at the end of the hill to shortly help drag the heavy carryall up to the top again.

The sun had almost set, and its rosy light filled the street, but before any had started to go home a man driving a large load of wood began to ascend the icy path. The sleds steered out of the way as the poor horse tried almost in vain to go on.

Suddenly he stopped, for he could go on no further. The road was so slippery that in trying to walk his hind legs slipped from beneath him. The man seemed enraged and began whipping the poor creature. As the horse could not go on the man struck the harder. Then a little girl, Amy by name, got off her sled, and, stepping up to the man, said, politely: "Couldn't I help you with your horse, sir? The load of wood seems very heavy for him." The man looked very much surprised, but stopped immediately. Amy went up to the horse, patted his nose gently, and whispered kindly in his ear. A number of boys were taking a few of the logs off the cart, and transferring them to their sleds to drag up the hill.

Amy then led the horse along, for she was very gentle, and the noble creature was perfectly willing to obey her. The man walked along and really felt much ashamed, as he ought. At last they reached the top, and the boys put back the wood as the load was not too heavy for a level. As the children all bade each other good night to go home, the man turned around, saying: "Many thanks to ye, my lads, and to the little missy," which showed how he felt. Which do you think was the happier that night, the horse, or the little girl who belonged to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals?—N. Y. Mercury.

GEORGIA'S BOY DWARF.

Although Eighteen Years of Age, He Is But Three Feet High.

Down in Georgia, in a little town called Tweed, lives a tiny bit of humanity who is probably the smallest 18-year-old boy alive. The name of this junior midget is Henry Rutherford Ricks, Jr. He looks very much as Tom Thumb looked at the age of 18, and he's as bright as a new dollar.

Young Ricks is only 35 inches tall, and weighs but 48 pounds. He is a fully developed boy, and is as ambitious as he is small, which is saying a great deal.

Henry is a great reader and has an honest, open face. He is also very good natured, and, considering his size, is very plump. He is a pupil of the Farmers' academy, and his teacher speaks of him in the highest terms; she says he is one of her best scholars and learns more quickly than the other boys.

The Liliputian has a sleek-coated dog named Gyp, and the two are familiar to everyone around about Tweed. Gyp is a gentle dog; it is lucky for Henry that this is so, because if Gyp was rough, he might easily kill little Henry, who barely reaches to the shoulder of the dog when standing beside him.

Henry is strong for one of his extremely diminutive size. He enjoys a big appetite—big for him—and there really does not seem to be any reason for his dwarfishness, since both his father and mother are persons of ordinary size. You might think to look at him that young Ricks was a lad of eight, though his manner is that of a gentlemanly youth of 18. He scorns the idea of showing himself in museums, though he has had several very liberal offers from well-known people in the theatrical business.

Some day this new Tom Thumb means to visit New York. If he takes this trip he will be the most conspicuous little man in the metropolis, and, with his dog Gyp, he would easily become the center of all attention; so much so that Dr. Depew, Mr. Roosevelt and Mayor Strong would have to look to their laurels in the matter of popularity.—N. Y. Recorder.

How a Dog Got Fresh Eggs.

Bob is a fine two-year-old mastiff, with head and face of massive strength, heightened by great mildness of expression. One day he was seen carrying a hen very gently in his mouth to the kennel. Placing her in one corner he stood sentry while she laid an egg, which he at once devoured. From that day the two have been fast friends, the hen refusing to lay anywhere but in Bob's kennel and getting her reward in the dainty morsels from his platter. There must have been a bit of canine reasoning here. Bob must have found eggs to his liking, that they were laid by hens, and that he could best secure a supply by having a hen to himself.

A Boy's Best Friend.

His mother is a boy's best friend;
And though the happy, careless youth
Is slow to see it, in the end
There shines upon his mind the truth.
One day of sickness, he will find,
Will much more forcefully instill
This lasting thought into his mind
Than forty books of proverbs will.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Kirkman's Borax Soap.

What a sweet clean ring there is in the word "Borax." Think of it as an ingredient of soap, then think of Kirkman's Borax Soap. For sale by grocers everywhere. Beware of imitations. 6 5 m 3t

THEATRICAL.

At Proctor's popular Pleasure Palace, New York, the wind blows through the whole establishment, thanks to the open roof of the brilliant and luxurious Garden of Palms. It matters little upon which side of the double stage one selects a seat. The temperature is marked down as low as the summer admission fee and there is not a more refreshing refreshing resort on a blistering hot summer afternoon or evening. With the exception of two very popular acts, everything is new in the diversified offering of mirth, melody and novelties. John W. Ransone has been re-engaged, owing to his emphatic hit, as the famous political manipulator, Mark Hanna. His make up is as clever as that which made him famous in "The Ruler of New York." His parody songs are genuinely funny and there is no sting in his political satire. Ransone keeps right in line with every passing topic, local or political, and his jokes have the welcome ring of spontaneity. The flying Cee-Mees are in their last fortnight of aerial exploits, and shortly return to Paris. But everything else is new, including Clark and Williams as the droll "Colored Nurses."

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits; 75c. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, druggist, Park and North avenues. 2 12 y

Feed the Nerves—upon pure, rich blood and you will not be nervous. Pure blood comes by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla which is thus the greatest and best nerve tonic.

ARMY ORGANIZATIONS.

Maintained by the Armies of the Tennessee, Cumberland and Potomac.

Many of the larger armies of the civil war have special organizations, notably the Army of the Tennessee, the Army of the Cumberland and the Army of the Potomac. Of these the Society of the Army of the Tennessee was organized April 14, 1865, in Raleigh, N. C. It admits to membership "every officer who has served with honor in that army," and membership may descend to a son or daughter according to the expressed wishes of a member. The total membership is about 460. The society hold annual reunions; that of last year took place in Cincinnati. Gen. Sherman, the army's old commander, was president until his death in 1891, since when Gen. Greenville M. Dodge has filled the office. Through its influence statues have been erected to Gens. Rawlins and McPherson in Washington, and statues of Gens. Logan and Sherman are to follow.

GEN. GREENVILLE M. DODGE.

The Society of the Army of the Cumberland, says Munsey's Magazine, was organized in Cincinnati February 6, 1868. It admits to membership "every officer and soldier who has at any time served with honor in that army." The present membership is about 600. Annual meetings are held at which an address by some distinguished orator is the conspicuous feature. Statues to Gens. Thomas and Garfield have been raised in Washington through its efforts, and funds are being collected for a memorial to Gen. Sheridan. Its first president was Gen. Thomas. He was succeeded by Gen. Sheridan, on whose death the present incumbent, Gen. Rosecrans, was chosen.

The Society of the Army of the James was organized September 2, 1868, and Gen. Charles Devens, Jr., became its president. It held several reunions, and finally, in 1876, was merged into the Society of the Army of the Potomac, which body was organized on February 22, 1869, in New York. It admits to membership "every officer and enlisted man who has at any time served with honor in the Army of the Potomac." More than 2,000 names are on its rolls. Annual reunions are held, at each of which an oration and a poem form conspicuous features. At the meeting held in 1895 Gen. John Gibbon was the orator, and H. C. Bunner was the poet. The officers of the society include a president and a vice president for each of the nine corps, as well as one for the cavalry, one for the artillery and one for the staff. The first president was Gen. Sheridan, who has been followed by a brilliant galaxy of names, including Meade, Hooker, Burnside, Hancock, Sickles and Grant. Last year the late Gen. John Gibbon was elected to the presidency.

PRINCESS OF WALES.

She Has a New Dog Which She Considers a Rare Beauty.

There is no greater lover of dogs than her royal highness, the princess of Wales. Not only is she fond of them, but her highness is so well up in the quality of blooded dogs that she is an excellent judge of them.

Her highness visited the Holland house (London) dog show held recently. Among the animals exhibited was a litter of Schipperke puppies with their mother. The litter won the first prize, and their claim to distinction was indorsed by the princess, who purchased one of them.

SCHIPPERKE PUP "MISCHIEF."

The pup is called "Mischief," and is the pride of the family. He will no doubt become a very famous Schipperke, because the princess of Wales will exhibit him at the great dog shows in England. "Mischief" is expected to carry off many first prizes.

Manufacture of Diamonds.

Diamonds are now made by electricity. When carbon is melted or vaporized in the electric furnace and allowed to condense it does so in the form of graphite. When allowed to condense under great pressure, however, it condenses in the crystallized form of the diamond. This pressure is obtained by forming a solution of carbon in molten iron and allowing the iron to solidify suddenly, thereby bringing sufficient pressure upon the condensed carbon to crystallize the latter into diamonds. The diamonds made by this process are said to be so small that the cost of production is greater than their value.

Fire Burns Thirty-Eight Years.

There is a burning coal mine at Summit Hill, near the town of Mauch Chunk, Pa. The fire, which was started by a tiny accident, has raged in this mine since 1858, and all the trials at extinguishing it have failed.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable. NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? M'KINLEY CAMPAIGN

Mark Hanna Rapidly Completing the Organization in New York.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Situation in Different States Reported by the Committeemen—Rumored That Hanna Has Arranged for a Conference with ex-Senator Platt.

New York, July 30.—Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Hanna did not retire until late last night he was up bright and early this morning, and before he had finished his breakfast there were half a dozen cards sent in to him, and he was soon busy consulting with prominent callers. It is understood that his next move will be an effort to heal the breach in republican ranks in this state, and it is also intimated that a conference has been arranged with Mr. Platt, possibly for to-day. Hanna is indeed a hustler, and in the two days he has been in New York he has succeeded in getting the republican campaign in the east in fairly good running order. The meeting of the executive committee yesterday afternoon did not adjourn until 7 p. m. There were present Mark A. Hanna, Garrett A. Hobart, Cornelius N. Bliss, Matthew S. Quay, Frederick S. Gibbs of New York, Col. Caxton, Redfield Proctor, P. C. Cheney, Col. Brayton of Rhode Island, Col. Bowdoin of Virginia, U. S. Senator-elect W. L. Wellington of Maryland, William McKinley Osborne and S. A. Perkins.

National Committeemen Report.

Chairman Hanna heard from each committeeman how the situation looked in his state. After the gentlemen had made their statements the chairman asked a few questions about the condition of the state organization and the expenses of running the campaign in the respective states. Former Postmaster-General Wanamaker, who was present to add to senator M. S. Quay's report, made a lengthy statement about the manufacturers' view of the situation, as he understood it, and Chairman Hanna received from him many suggestions about the feeling of the manufacturers, whom Mr. Wanamaker had interviewed. At the conclusion of the general meeting the members of the national executive committee remained with Mr. Hanna to map out the plan of campaign. The only business of public interest transacted was the election of Cornelius N. Bliss of this city as treasurer of the national executive committee, a position he filled on the national committee in the last campaign. The committee also selected J. A. Rogers as a national committeeman for Utah.

Hobart Not To Remain Idle.

Mr. Hobart was seen by a reporter last evening after the meeting of the republican executive committee. He said the committee had prepared plans to start the campaign in the east without delay. "I shall spend a great deal of time at the New York headquarters during the campaign," said Mr. Hobart. "I have had considerable experience of the kind needed at headquarters, and I may be useful there. Work will be begun at headquarters as soon as the furniture is in." Mr. Hobart did not care to say anything about the political outlook. While Mr. Hobart and Mr. Hanna were conversing in the lobby of the Waldorf Senator Elkins of West Virginia stepped up and shook hands with the two gentlemen. He told them that they could count on West Virginia for McKinley. "I have made a thorough canvass of the state," he said, "and I am satisfied that it will go republican this year. The free-silver craze has not affected the republican farmers at all. The protection issue will be important in West Virginia, next in importance to the currency issue. But the people want a moderate protection—not protection run wild. Our convention last week declared for such protection." Mr. Elkins was very emphatic in saying that he favored only moderate protection.

Besieged by Furniture Dealers.

Gen. William M. Osborne, secretary of the republican national committee, who has to attend to the work of furnishing the headquarters in the Metropolitian Insurance company building, has been besieged for the past two days by agents of furniture houses. All of them introduce themselves as good republicans who are willing to sacrifice prices for their party. Gen. Osborne informs them that he has already selected his furniture, but they pursue him to his room, offering to cut prices still further. Agents for campaign goods houses have also turned up, and Gen. Osborne's position is by no means a cheerful one.

MARTIN'S VIEWS.

The Nebraska Democratic Chairman Says He Believes McKinley Will Win.

New York, July 30.—Euclid Martin of Omaha, chairman of the democratic state committee of Nebraska, is in this city to meet his family who are returning from Europe. Mr. Martin was one of the gold delegates from Nebraska to the recent democratic national convention at Chicago. There was a contest between the gold and silver men from Nebraska for the seats in the convention and the silver men won. The Nebraska chairman said in an interview: "I think that McKinley will be elected next fall if the republicans carry on the fight where and as they ought to. By this condition I mean that the great contest will be in West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Nebraska and some of the states near these. I believe most if not all of them are certain to go for McKinley if the republicans carry on the right sort of a campaign. Most people think McKinley is 'talking through his hat' when he says the tariff is the great issue in this campaign, but he knows what he is talking about. In West Virginia, Indiana and Ohio the miners and workingmen generally think they must have a high tariff in order to keep up and perhaps increase their wages and they look on McKinley as the apostle of protection. They will not listen to talk about sound money, free silver or anything else but the tariff, and that is why McKinley is right when he says that in some sections of the country at least the tariff will be the chief issue, and on that issue I believe all the states I have mentioned are reasonably certain to go for McKinley. My impression is that the free silver craze has reached its height in the west and has already begun to go backward."

Reed Opens the Maine Campaign.

Augusta, Me., July 30.—The opening day of the present republican campaign brought together more people in this quaint county seat than were ever seen here at one time before. They came not only from the different sections of York county, but from all parts of the state and from New Hampshire and Massachusetts also. The York county republicans held their convention, but the chief event of the day was the speech of Thomas B. Reed, who is expected to be renominated for congress by the convention of his district. The speaker said we had been through a money inflation craze before and compared the present campaign with that of the greenback agitation of 1878. More capital from abroad is needed to give workingmen employment, he said.

WARNING TO POSTAL CLERKS.

They Must Not Take an Active Part in the Present Campaign.

Washington, July 30.—The postoffice department has issued a circular of instructions to railway postal clerks informing them of the department's wishes concerning the attitude of these clerks in the coming political campaign. The circular states that "the department does not attempt or desire to control the political opinions of any one connected with the postal service, but it insists that employes of the railway mail service shall not take an active interest in politics in the way of attending conventions as delegates, making political speeches or assisting in the management of political campaigns. These employes should recognize the fact that their tenure of office depends upon themselves; if they conform to these requirements and are efficient, honest, courteous to the public, their officers and comrades, and abstain from unseemly and indecent language in discussing candidates or parties, they may reasonably expect to remain in the service.

NAVAL SENTENCE DISAPPROVED

Paymaster Webster Restored to Duty, But His Conduct Is Criticised.

Washington, July 30.—The secretary of the navy has disapproved the proceedings, findings and sentences of dismissal imposed by court-martial held at Mare Island, Cal., recently upon passed assistant paymaster Edwin B. Webster, lately attached to the Yorktown on the China station. The officer was accused of having retained a bond exacted from his pay-clerk, W. J. Tobin, after having dismissed the clerk. The secretary finds that there were grave informalities in the proceedings of the court which convicted the officer, and, moreover, inclines to the belief, based principally upon the testimony of Chief Engineer Webster, a brother officer on the Yorktown, that the money, amounting to $2,500, placed in the paymaster's hands by Tobin's mother, was technically a loan and not a bond. For these reasons he reverses the findings of the court and restores Webster to duty, but takes occasion to say that the transaction, in any sense in which it may be viewed, is disgraceful to Paymaster Webster and to the navy, and in spirit a violation of the statute prohibiting any office to take money for procuring an appointment. It was scandalous in any case, says the secretary, that Webster should fail to pay back after the termination of Tobin's service the money received by him in consideration of his appointmen as clerk, and should he for any great length of time persist in this failure, the department may be expected to proceed further in this matter.

Executive Clemency.

Washington, July 30.—The president has pardoned John Gallagher, sentenced in Minnesota to six months' imprisonment for assaulting an officer, and C. H. Mallory, sentenced in Florida to five years for robbery. He has commuted to two years' imprisonment the three years' sentence imposed in Mississippi upon W. H. Gibbs for embezzling postal funds. Applications for pardons have been refused in the case of Thomas L. Eads, sentenced in Indiana to three months' imprisonment.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mrs. F. Becker, of Race street, has purchased a Crescent wheel of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Clarence L. Thorn, of East Second street, leaves Saturday for a trip to Asbury Park, where he will remain for several days.

Mr. Blake, formerly of the Jersey Wheel Company, has accepted a position in the repair department of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Chief Doane and Driver Townley, of the fire department, rode to New Brunswick yesterday on wheels. It is said that the chief wore knickerbockers.

A. W. W. Evans and E. C. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, expect to try this afternoon for the 100-mile tandem road record on the Elizabeth-Rahway course.

One of the troubles of wheelmen on a windy night may be overcome by the use of an apparatus for lighting a lamp which has lately been invented. It is called a bicycle gun and is placed in the hole beside the lamp with a common parlor match in its muzzle. By pulling the trigger the match is pushed between two rough jaws and ignited inside the lamp, where the wind will not extinguish it.

The 1896 New Jersey Division L. A. W. Hand Book is out, and is expected to be in the hands of all the local consuls this week. Every League member who rides in this State should have one. It contains special laws of interest to wheelmen, a complete list of local consuls and league hotels, and short sayings of interest to members. It may be obtained from the local consul, Charles C. Lister.

Many purchasers of low priced wheels are complaining that the guarantees given with such wheels are worthless, as they are unable to have unreliable parts replaced, defects remedied, or to procure any satisfaction or attention to their complaints. Moral—Buy your wheel of a reliable concern, and if possible of a local dealer, so that you can secure attention if for any reason your wheel is unsatisfactory or if parts are defective.

Much dissatisfaction and trouble have been caused by some of the bell requirements in ordinances adopted by local authorities throughout this State and especially by the arrest of cyclists touring through such places. The L. A. W. Consuls are requested to look after the interests of League members arrested on account of these ordinances, especially when the non-ringing of the bell at street crossings is the cause, as this is a clear violation of the State law.

Messrs. A. W. W. Evans and George Voorhees will try to break the National tandem record for 100 miles, which is seven hours, some time this week on the course between Highland Park and Elizabeth. They feel confident of success. Many tandem riders claim that they have ridden 100 miles under seven hours, but it has not yet been recorded. Mr. Evans has not fixed a date for his 24-hour ride, in which time he expects to make 400 miles.—New Brunswick Home News.

The coasting contest of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs on Saturday, August 15th, will take place on the Pompton Turnpike, at Cedar Grove. The coast is 4,600 feet or nearly a mile long. A new plan has been adopted, the contestants being sent off in relays of three or four, similar to the heats in a race, the winners in each series will be restarted in a semi-final, till finally the three leaders will be sent off, their positions to decide the award of prizes. Entries in both singles and tandems, close on August 10th, with W. E. Scudder, 45 William street, New York.

A Word or Two

to those suffering from catarrh or the thousands subject to severe attacks of cold in the head, will not be amiss if a sure remedy can be offered. Ely's Cream Balm has become a favorite in all sections of the United States, because of its effectiveness. Your cold in the head will be quickly relieved by it, and the severest attack of catarrh will yield to, and be perfectly cured by a thorough treatment. Catarrh is not a blood disease, but inflammation of the passages of the nose and throat, due to climatic changes.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneous relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

NO PLACE FOR TRAMPS

WANDERING WILLIES DO NOT GET THE GLAD HAND HERE.

A Gang Took Refuge in Freight Cars and Were Hauled Out of the Grasp of the Police—Stopped Over in Dunellen.

This is the season of the year when "Wandering Willies," "Weary Waggies" and the other knights of the road are enjoying their summer outing in the country. New Jersey is quite a favorite resort for these connoisseurs of the back door collations, and hither they flock, but Plainfield is to most of them an unwelcome place, as ordinances are too strictly enforced, and they usually pass by on the other side or hide in a freight car. Early this morning a crowd of about eighteen or twenty of these travelers invaded a freight train just outside this city and took possession of it, not interfering with the crew, however, in the performance of their duty. The train stopped here and Fred Barker, night operator for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, learning of the invasion, used his police whistle to call an officer to the scene. Roundsman Frederickson responded promptly but, by that time, the train was in motion, and it was too late to remove the uninvited guests.

A party of tramps, it is not known whether they were the same or not, visited a barn near Dunellen and spent part of the night there and departed, accompanied by several stray blankets that seemed to have an uncontrollable fondness for tramp life.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Henry B. Drake, of Duer street, has bought an Eagle wheel.

The membership of the League of American Wheelmen up to July 24th was new, 1,301; total, 61,245. New Jersey Division: New, 59; total, 4,090.

Horace J. Martin is moving his bicycle emporium today from the corner of Park avenue and Second street to his place of business on Somerset street.

The Bayonne Wheelmen announce a century run to this city on August 30th, and will give a silver bugle to the club having the largest number of survivors.

Rain cannot be helped. Those bicyclists who did not get discouraged will decorate again tomorrow. You can get festooning and lanterns at R. C. Rands, 140 West Front street.

The Tourists' Cycle Club, of Paterson, are considering the advisability of holding a series of professional races on its new track, some night in August, the same as the Crescent Wheelmen did last year.

Coming from Coney Island on the old path is much more dangerous now than before the new path was finished, as it is presumed that all wheelmen coming north will use that path, and their unexpected appearance on the wrong side is apt to cause collisions. The park authorities should take action in the matter.

The State championship race meet of the New Jersey Division, L. A. W., will be given under the auspices of the Associated Cycling clubs of this State, at the Tourists' Oval, in Paterson, on Saturday, August 8th, and promises to be a big success. The State championship races are as follows: One-third-mile, one-mile, two-miles and five-miles. The prizes will be the regular State championship medals. For the other events, prizes of jewelry, silverware and cycle sundries will be offered. The track can be used for training purposes from now to the date of the meet. For blanks address Charles H. Norwood, Tourists' Cycle Club, Paterson, and remember that the entries close on August 1st. Before the race meet the cyclists will gather in Paterson and join in the grand cycling parade. Six valuable prizes are offered by the Tourists' Cycle Club.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Charles C. Brower has been driving the trotter "Highland Boy," belonging to James Arkell, of Westfield, in the races at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson.

The Middlesex Athletic Club, of Spottswood, N. J., will hold their annual race meet at the Middlesex Driving Park, near Old Bridge, on August 29th. Entry blanks can be had by addressing G. W. DeVoe, secretary, Spottswood, N. J.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

A. I. Smalley, of Somerset street, expects soon to go south on a hunting expedition.

Elvin VanName and Sam and Geo. Neal spent yesterday angling at Boynton Beach and returned home last night with thirty-six weakfish.

A number of sportsmen say that there are two hound dogs on the mountain back of Prideville, who are killing off all the young rabbits.

A party, composed of A. A. Stryker, James Stryker, Frank Manchester and E. E. Marshall, will spend Saturday angling at South Amboy. Great results are expected.

After the election of the officers Martha Washington was chosen as the name of the Council.

Current Was Grounded.

The current on Car No. 9 of the street railway become grounded at the Dunellen terminus about 11 o'clock last night, but by the vigilance of the conductor and motorman, no one was allowed to go near it until the difficulty had been righted.

Ice Cream Season Again.

"Will you marry me, darling?"

For a moment she hung her head in maiden bashfulness. Then she gathered courage to speak, though not to look at him.

"Do you love me for myself alone?" she asked.

He hesitated.

"I cannot deny," he said, truthfully, "that I am influenced by the money that I have put into you."—Chicago Tribune.

A Shock to Her Resolution.

"It's too bad," said the young woman who wants to be new.

"What's the trouble?" asked her mother.

"Just as soon as we've made up our minds to show the world that we are not the weak, timid creatures we have been pictured, the announcement comes that the trees are full of caterpillars this year."—Washington Star.

Wants More Variety.

They paused before the cigar stand.

"And so you don't like Sniggers? Well, well. Why, I think him the best sort of a fellow. He's always the same. You know what he'll do in any case. There's no affectation about Sniggers. He's always himself—"

"Yes, that's what I object to."—Chicago Tribune.

Love's Duplicates.

I love you, love you, love you, dear,
More than my tongue can tell!
In all the land, both far and near,
There's none I love so well.
And though to others, now and then,
I say these words, 'tis true,
How can a fellow help it when
They so resemble you?

—L. A. W. Bulletin.

Didn't Starve.

"Well, Minnie, did you take good care of the animals during my absence?"

"Yes, my lady, excepting the cat, which I forgot to feed."

"I hope that didn't hurt her?"

"Oh, no; not at all—she helped herself to the parrot and the canary bird."—Fliegende Blaetter.

A South American Bird Which Knows How to Herd Sheep.

A dog that, unaided, may be trusted to shepherd a flock of sheep is considered a sagacious animal, but a shepherd bird which will drive its charges to pasture, protect them from prowling animals, and gathering them carefully together at nightfall, bring them safely home again, is something till recently unheard of in this part of the world.

Such a bird is the yakamik of South America. The settler in Venezuela and British Guiana needs no dog to care for his sheep and poultry. He has an efficient guardian in the shape of a crane which he, or an Indian for him, trains to obey the voice of its master.

To the care of this bird, says the Youth's Companion, he intrusts his sheep, his ducks and other poultry, and sees them depart to their feeding-grounds secure in the knowledge that the crane will bring them all back safely. Woe to the unlucky animal that, prowling about to steal, is detected by the vigilant yakamik. The bird savagely attacks the marauder with wing and beak, and forces it to retreat in haste. A dog is no match for the crane.

At nightfall the bird returns with its flock, never losing the way, no matter how far it may wander, for its sense of location is very acute. Arrived at home, it roosts upon a tree or shed near its charges, to be ready to resume its supervision of them when they are let out again in the morning.

The bird is as affectionate as it is trustworthy. It will follow its master about, capering with delight and showing its appreciation of his caresses by the most absurd movements.

Mr. Carter Beard, in an article in the Popular Science News, says that the yakamik is so jealous of other household pets that when it appears at mealtimes it will not take its own food until it has driven off every cat and dog and secured full possession for itself.

It can bear no rival in its master's favor, and will not even tolerate the negro waiters unless it knows them well.

WEDDED AS THE SUN SET.

A NUPTIAL EVENT IN HIGH CIRCLES OF COLORED SOCIETY.

The Marriage Solemnized in Mt. Olive Baptist Church by Rev. P. S. Gibson and Witnessed by a Concourse of Friends.

A large and fashionable wedding was solemnized in the Mt. Olive Baptist church last evening, when two of Plainfield's most popular colored people were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the church.

At 8 o'clock the contracting parties took their places in front of the pulpit.

The bride was Miss Frances Jones, of Duer street, and the groom, Benjamin Perkins, of West Third street. Miss Pauline Saddler was maid of honor, Miss Annie White and Miss Lottie Johnson, Miss Nancy Burdon and Miss Josephine Harris bridemaids, and Miss Ada Wood flower girl. John Perkins, a brother of the groom, was best man.

The bride wore a gown of white silk trimmed with duchess lace and the maid of honor and bridemaids were attired in white silk and the flower girl in pink silk.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception took place at the future home of the newly married couple, where congratulations were showered upon them.

Among those present at the reception were the Misses Mattie Johnson, Williams, Belle Anderson, Ida Henry, Ethel Johnson, Jennie Curtis, Jennie Lewis, Mary Jones, Belle Powell, Robinson, Belle Flanagan, Pauline Sadler, Annie White, Lottie Johnson, Nancy Burdon, Ada Wood; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Venable, Mr. and Mrs. Tucker Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Burrell Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Peterson; Messrs. Bert Harney, Wm. Douglass, Edward Martin, Jesse Henry, Reuben Ray and John Perkins. Those from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Saunders and Lewis White, Riverside Drive, New York, and Henry Randall, of Fewark.

The groom received a $50 set of bedroom furniture from his employer, Wm. T. Kirk, and many household articles from other friends. The couple will reside temporarily at 213 West Third street.

A CARCASS IN THE WELL.

o the Sign Says, But Some Wheelmen are Incredulous.

Some wag has played a smart joke upon the cycling public and at the same time, there is little doubt, increased the trade of an enterprising gentleman who has recently set up a "Wheelmen's Rest" at Pumptown, near Metuchen, where he dispenses various "soft" beverages.

Pumptown, it is said, takes its name from the fact that at the bend in the Metuchen-Plainfield macadam road there is a pump, celebrated for its water. Wheelmen resort there.

The rogue in question tacked up a sign conveying this startling information: "$25 Reward for the Arrest and Conviction of the Party Who Threw Into This Well the Carcass of a Dog." The proprietor of the "Rest" greets his patrons with broad grins when he sees them turn away from the pump. Nevertheless, despite the alleged dead dog flavor, the water continues to quench cycling thirsts, for a joke is suspected—New Brunswick Home News.

Malt Left in the Sun.

A few days ago a carload of malt was run in Plainfield on a side track along East Fourth street. The greater portion of it has been removed, but a quantity was left on the ground just where the sun could strike it, causing an unbearable stench. Residents of East Fourth street were consequently much annoyed. This morning a complaint was made to Health Inspector Weaver, and the nuisance will be attended to.

Bought the Thorn Homestead.

City Judge DeMeza has purchased the Thorn homestead on East Front street, opposite Sanford avenue, from Edward Thorn.

Tipp's Wife Leaves the Hospital.

Mrs. Kate Thompson, wife of Gilbert Thompson, better known as "Tipp. the bootblack," was released from the kospital today, having sufficenty recovered from her injuries.

To Be Tried Next Wednesday.

James Williams, the man who is accused of breaking into Dealaman's store at Dunellen on the night of July 3d, will be tried next Wednesday at New Brunswick.

Many a day's work is lost by sick headache, caused by indigestion and stomach troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most effectual pill for overcoming such difficulties. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

NOW THE PARADE AGAIN

PROMISES TO BE AS SUCCESSFUL AS IT DID TUESDAY EVENING.

The Weather Looks All Right, the Paraders Plenty, Decorations Elaborate and the Number of Sightseers Large.

Weather and everything promises to be favorable for the "Midsummer Night's Carnival" this evening. Weather Observer Neagle has smiled upon the efforts of the committee to make a success of the bicycle parade and has declared that "fair, cooler weather" shall appear.

While some of the pessimistic characters have declared that a postponed affair can never be a success, the majority of the citizens don't agree with them. The time since Tuesday has been used in advertising the Carnival throughout the country, and already reports have been received to show that the efforts were not in vain.

The New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. cyclers and Catholic cyclers have promised to be represented. Bound Brook will have a number of her wheelmen present. Westfield will send her delegation, and the wheelman from that town who won the prize for the most handsomely decorated wheel at the bicycle parade at Elizabeth last evening, promises to be present with his prize-winning wheel.

Grand Marshal Martin has prepared a surprise for the cyclists, and the Plainfield Cornet Band, led by N. H. Guttman, will be at the head of the procession in a stage. They will furnish music all the length of the route, and the cyclists in the parade will be able to ride to music after all.

The parade is to start at 7:30 o'clock from the square in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian churh.

The First Division, composed of the lady cyclists and their gentlemen escorts, will form on East Seventh street. The Second Division, composed of the clubs, will line up on Crescent avenue. The Third Division, the colored clubs and riders, will form on Watchung avenue. The Fourth Division of unattached cyclists will be formed on La Grande avenue.

The divisions, in forming, face the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church.

The line of march will be through Watchung avenue, to East Fifth street, to Richmond street, to Putnam avenue, to Franklin place, to Watchung avenue, to Cresent avenue, to West Eighth street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Seventh street, to Park avenue, to the corner of Ninth street, and counter-marching on Park avenue, to North avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Front street, to Grove street, to Park place, to Jackson avenue, to Grand street, to Fair view avenue, to Linden avenue, to Grove street, to Rockview avenue, to Washington avenue, to West Front street, to Grant avenue, to West Seventh street, to Park avenue, to North avenue station.

BELABORED A CRIPPLED HORSE.

But Agent Pangborn Saw the Cruelty and Will Take Proper Action.

With slow unsteady steps a horse attached to a buggy pulled away from the curb on Somerset street near Front street last evening. It was apparent to the passersby that the horse was in no condition to be driven as it could barely move, but the driver began to belabor the poor equine with his whip. Ex-Chief Marshal William A. Pangborn, the agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was at the corner of Front and Somerset streets at the time, and when the man drove up to the corner he stopped him.

The individual in the buggy proved to be the hired man employed by Eabbli Senovskoz, of New Market. After learning the facts of the case, Mr. Pangborn allowed the man to go and will compell the owner of the horse to refrain from using the animal on the road. It is afflicted with blood spavin, and one leg is almost entirely useless.

Should Have Been Arrested.

A colored woman, name unknown, drove through the streets of Scotch Plains about 7 o'clock last evening. The harness was broken and the animal, a bay, was almost white with foam, yet the brute of a women, who was evidently drunk, kept continually plying the whip. That inhumane creature who handled the reins should have been arrested.

Allen Homestead Sold.

Acting as agent, Wm. N. Pangborn, yesterday, consummated the sale of the John Allen homestead, 124 Somerset street, to Alexander G. Spencer, of Rahway, eldest son of Tax Collector Newton Spencer. The consideration was $4,000. Mr. Spencer will make extensive alterations in the property and take up his residence there.

BEAT HIS AGED WIFE.

A WESTFIELD MAN ATTACKS HIS HELPMEET WITH A STICK.

Turned Her Out of Doors and Then Barricaded the House and Defied Arrest With a Huge and Murderous Looking Knife.

John Hickey, a burly woodchopper, who lives about a mile out of Westfield, while drunk last night beat his wife badly with a heavy stick and then turned her out of the house.

Word was sent to the police. When officers reached Hickey's place they found him barricaded inside. His wife was sitting by the road.

The officers tried to get into the place. Hickey drew a razor, put out the light and declared that he would kill any one who tried to come through the door.

The officers, seeing they could not enter, turned their attention to Mrs. Hickey. It was not supposed that she was injured until she was taken to Dr. Cooper's office.

There it was found that the bone of the middle finger of her right hand protruded through the flesh. Her ribs on the right side had been crushed in by a terrible blow.

The doctor considered the injuries so serious that, after a preliminary dressing, the woman was sent to the hospital at Elizabeth.

Mrs. Hickey is a frail woman, seventy years old. Her husband is much younger and powerful.

He was arrested yesterday morning and was committeed to await the result of his wife's injuries.

A CHURCH FESTIVAL.

First Church of Christ Members Conduct a Successful Event.

A festival was held at the First Church of Christ last night. The church was prettily decorated with flowers, bunting and flags, while numerous Chinese lanterns shed a mild glow of light over the sidewalk outside.

The programme consisted of a vocal solo, Miss Pauline Farlo; recitation, Miss Annie Jessup; vocal solo, Mrs. E. Brown, with cornet obligato, Mr. Schultise; dialogue, "Rose and Thorn," Mrs. Cox, Miss Mabel VanMiddlesworth, Miss Lillie Ackerman, J. Staats; song, Henry Ackerman; recitation, Lillie Haberle; recitation, Henry Staats; address, Rev. Mr. Thomas, New York.

After the entertainment refreshments were enjoyed by those present and each one agreed that they had spent a most pleasant evening.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. J. Staats, chairman; Miss Mabel VanMiddlesworth, Miss Lillian Ackerman and Mrs. H. VanMiddlesworth.

PASTOR WITHOUT A CHURCH.

The Rev. Mr. Judd's Place Was Filled While He Was Abroad.

The Rev. William B. Judd has returned to Cranford from his year at the university at Jena, Germany and though he won the degree of Ph. D., he is very much exercised to find that he is without a pastorate. He is a Methodist minister of the Newark Conference, and his leave of absence was for a year.

The time was up in March when the conference met, and the Bishop appointed him to the pastorate at High Bridge. But after completing his course, he tarried for a little sightseeing and this week, upon returning to his home here, he found that Presiding Elder Smith had filled the place to which he had been assigned.

Death Recalls a Scandal.

W. B. Avery, who at one time resided on Westervelt avenue, and was in the Custom House brokerage business, was found dead in bed in the Ashland house, in New York City a few days ago. His death was caused by a congestive chill. It will be remembered that Mr. Avery's home was broken up and a scandal caused by the disappearance of his wife with John Gable, an upholsterer, who was hanger-on around the engine houses a few years ago, Gable deserting a wife and family and leaving them in destitute circumstances. Mr. Avery was a very modest man and well liked by many citizens in this city.

A Great Christian Body.

The total number of Christian Endeavor societies in the world are 46,125; total membership, 2,750,000; total number uniting with the church this year, 231,900; amount given to benevolence, $360,172. The Presbyterians still lead in the number of societies, with 5,458 young people's societies and 2,599 junior societies; the Congregationalists, the Disciples of Christ and Christians, Baptist, Methodist Protestant, and Lutheran follow in order.

Poison Ivy, insect bites, bruises, scalds, burns, are quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, the great pile cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE GREAT CONVENTION

ENDEAVOR LEADERS PREPARING THE DETAILS TWO MONTHS AHEAD.

Arrangements Being Made to Provide for the Immense Crowd of Delegates Who Will Be Present at the Assemblage.

The coming '96 Christian Endeavor convention, to be held in this city in October, promises to be the greatest one this State has ever seen. There are, of course, many important details for the convention to be arranged by the committees. The members of these committees and the presidents of the societies in the Local Union held a meeting last evening at the Y. M. C. A. building, at which the committees told something of their plans and helpful suggestions were made. The meeting opened with prayer, E. E. Anthony acting as leader. He stated that the Jersey Cycle Academy had been secured for the convention and that comfortable camp chairs had been hired for the occasion. Circulars and the provisional programme will be sent out in a few weeks by Miss Stevens, State secretary.

The question of providing ushers for the different meetings was brought up and several methods proposed. The entertainment of the visiting delegates was also considered and some suggestions made to the entertainment committee. The very important work of the finance committee was the subject of some discussion and then the work of the press, hall and decoration, committees were discussed. A full statement of the work of these committees will be announced later. After a general informal discussion of various plans for the convention, the meeting closed with a short prayer service.

WHILED AWAY WITH DANCING.

Notwithstanding the Heat the Light Fantastic Toe Was Tripped.

The board of governors of the Catholic Club gave another of their delightful dances in the Catholic clubhouse last night, and despite the oppressiveness of the weather the attendance was all that could be desired, as every available inch of floor space was utilized.

The fact that everyone present were enjoying themselves was very apparent, and the management once more proved themselves to be popular pleasure providers. Prof. O'Reilly was in charge of the full orchestra present.

The committee in charge consisted of Michael Mack, P. Casey, J. Keenan, James Carey, Charles Ward, Hugh McDonald and John Gallagher, while W Claassen had charge of the door, T. Carty the refreshments, and Dennis Galbraith and Con Guinee were the floor committee.

CLAIMS HE WAS ASSAULTED.

A Colored Man Says He Was Pounced Upon by Five White Men.

Edward Palacios, colored, a resident of North Plainfield, was taken to the hospital this forenoon suffering from two badly swollen eyes and a sprained wrist. He was admitted for treatment and Dr. Long considers the man's condition serious. The man says that he was going home last evening at a reasonable hour and on the way five white men jumped on him and assaulted him. He does not know who the men are nor can he give any reason for the assault. In fact he seems to know very little about the affair except that he got the worst of the fight. The affair evidently did not come under the observation of the police as no arrests were made.

An Old Hoax.

An old, but always successful, joke was played on William Ross, proprietor of the Delmonico Oyster and Chop House, yesterday, by some of the lads of the neighborhood. There was a large basket of choice peaches standing in front of Ross' place and someone placed a sign on it reading "Sample peaches, take one." Of course, everybody accepted the invitation and the peaches were nearly gone when Mr. Ross discovered the sign. His expression at that time was worthy of being placed on canvas.

Corner Stone to Be Laid.

The corner stone for the new Bound Brook Presbyterian church will be laid tomorrow afternoon. The old church was destroyed by fire last winter at the time of the flood that so devastated that region. The church is the oldest in a large section of country and has a long and interesting history.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A ROYAL RECEPTION.

HOSPITALITY OF THE NEW BRUNSWICK Y. M. C. A. BOYS LAST NIGHT.

Gave Their Cycling Bretheren a Jolly Time After a Hard Ride Over the Roads Leading to that City.—Delightful Ride Home.

New Brunswick obtained a reputation last evening for hospitality that will last for many a day. The cause of it was the way in which their Y. M. C. A. entertained their guests of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League. The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. cyclists were there with the rest and had the largest representation, twenty-four riders, two of whom were on the tandem. Eight men rode over from Passaic, a distance of fourty-two miles, and returned later in the evening, making their run eighty-four miles long. Four of their number were on tandems and paced the rest. The other associations represented were Orange, Rahway and Westfield.

As soon as the guests arrived, with perspiration running off them in little streams, for the evening was a very warm one, they were hurried to the shower bath and then treated to a glass of "Sparkling Kolafra" which is made in New Brunswick. An entertainment was given consisting of selections by a young men's orchestra and a male quartette, in which was to be seen the familiar face of Laurie Bragdon, who is well known in this city as the star of the Rutgers College Glee Club. Then a bountiful lunch was served, ending with ice cream.

There were nearly a hundred cyclists present, and the run was voted the best of any of the league runs. Each visitor was presented with a souviner of the occasion ere he left.

The Plainfield riders were under the command of Thomas A. Cuming. There was no scorching and the run was a delightful one both ways, but the moon came out in time for the return, which made it all the more enjoyable. There were no accidents to mar the pleasure of the occasion.

DEATH OF JOSEPH BEACH.

Suffered a Severe Stroke of Paralysis From Which He Did Not Rally.

The death of Joseph Beach occurred this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. William A. Woodruff, East Second street, after being unconscious since Tuesday last, caused by an attack of paralysis.

Mr. Beach was born at Newark. Shortly after marriage he went to Boston and entered into the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company. He remained there until 1849 when he moved to Jersey City. He still remained in the service of the company and made Jersey City his residence until 1861, and then went to Rahway where he resided until 1885, when failing health compelled him to give up business and he came to this city and has made his home with Mrs. Woodruff since.

In Rahway Mr. Beach became quite prominent in life. He was one of the foremost men of the town and was an elder in a church there and just previous to his death had been re-elected an elder, to serve for four years. The deceased had a severe attack of paralysis last November and from then to last April was confined to his room. Since then he has been in the habit of taking short walks on pleasant days but only occasionally went off the block. He leaves a wife and two daughters, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff and Mrs. Howard V. Waters, both of whom reside in this city. The body will be taken to Rahway for burial, but the date of the funeral has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Beach was in his seventy seventh year.

Remove the Unsightly Fence.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Something like two years ago, or during the term of the Board of Education previous to the present one, there was a promise made to remove the fence in front of Bryant School building, provided a majority of the residents on same block removed theirs. This was accordingly done. We are led to believe the matter has been misrepresented to them as the cause of their noncompliance. They, however, go on spending money for repairs to the fence, while complaining of their need to retrench expenses. If they would but think a moment of the justness of the demand, especially when such a demand comes from those who helped to put them on the Board, perhaps they would act more to our desires than to be governed by prejudice. Honor.

It doesn't matter much whether sick headache, billiousness, indigestion and constipation are caused by neglect or by unavoidable circumstances; DeWitt's Little Early Risers will speedily cure them all. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

TOOK GRANDPA'S WATCH

A BELLE OF PARADISE ALLEY GETS HERSELF IN COURT AGAIN.

On Her Return From the County Jail She Stole, so Her Grandfather Alleges—Lucie Says Her Grandmother Gave It to Her.

One of Roundsman Mattox's "children," as they are called, Lucie Scudder, is in trouble again. The cause of her trouble is her grandfather's watch, and thereby hangs a tale. Lucie, as the Roundsman calls her, is a dusky-hued maiden who has graduated from Paradise Alley with honors and now lives on East Third street. The Roundsman first met her when he did duty on the beat that included Paradise Alley. The first of last May, he had to lock her up for some rash acts on the "Alley," including an attempt to brain Maggie Benford with a kettle. She went down the road for twenty days.

Andrew Jackson Brown is her grandfather and he lives with his wife in Westfield. Sorrowful to say, he often drinks more than is good for him and disgraces his gray hairs. He was in that condition when Lucie went up to see his wife soon after she released from jail. She wanted his watch, and as he was fast asleep and no amount of yelling could awaken him, she took it. She says that Mrs. Brown told her to.

At any rate it came to Plainfield with her while the old man looked in vain.

"I'd a little bit suspicioned her" grunted out Andrew Jackson Brown, as he told his story in Justice Nash's office yesterday "cause she took a watch from my wife once." After consulting a number of friends about the loss of his "val'abl' watch," it cost him five dollars and he was not willing to swear in court that it was $, he found out that the watch was in Plainfield and so yesterday afternoon he came to Justice Nash and swore out a complaint. Roundsman Mattox captured the offending Lucie, who seemed in high spirits to be in a court room, again and brought her over.

Lucie owned up to taking the watch but said Mrs Brown told her to. The watch she gave to John Bergen, of Battle Row, to have repaired and he took it to the little jeweler's shop on Somerset street, just off Front street. There it remains until somebody pays the $1.75 it cost to repair it.

Brown appeared in court in a rather unsteady condition, as if he was walking on the deck of a ship in a storm, and he ran his words together as if they tasted the same as his breath. He was very sure that his naughty grand daughter was entirely to blame and he wanted his watch.

"You bring your wife here," said the justice.

"I could, but that's neither here nor there. I want my watch," and he spoke with the determination of a man partially full of rum.

Then the Justice informed him in quiet but decisive tones, that he was to bring his wife to the court on the morrow. It finally penetrated his brain what he was to do and he declared that he would be there. Lucie was also ordered to appear this afternoon for trial and released on her own recognizance.

HOME FOR THE NURSES.

Work Will be Started on the New Building Very Soon.

Work is soon to be started on the nurses' house at Muhlenberg Hospital. Preparations are being rushed along so as to have it completed as soon as possible so that the nurses may take possession and the portion of the annex now occupied by them used by the patients, thus relieving the present over crowding of the hospital.

The final estimates on the structure are expected to be in this week. The nurses' house, which was designed by J. Evarts Tracy, of this city, is a two-story frame building, with clapboard siding and shingle roof on the style of the other hospital buildings. It contains accommodations for fourteen nurses, each having a separate room, a lecture room, a sitting room, bath rooms, etc. The building will be placed in one corner of the hospital lot so as to be as far as possible from the hospital proper. It is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy before January 1st, 1897.

The Board Organized.

At the meeting of the sewer assessment commissioners held Tuesday evening, the board organized by electJ. Parker Mason, chairman, and Geo. R. Cornwell, secretary.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

FORTY-TWO KILLED

Terrible Railway Accident on the Meadows Near Atlantic City.

SIXTY INJURED; SOME WILL DIE

Reading Express Crashes Into a Crowded Excursion Train at a Crossing—Cars Demolished and the Locomotive's Boiler Explodes.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 31.—A terrible railroad catastrophe took place on the meadows about two miles out of this city shortly after 6:30 o'clock last evening, resulting in the deaths of forty-two people, so far, and the wounding of eighty others. A train left here, consisting of seven cars, over the West Jersey railroad, bearing a special excursion of Red Men and their friends of Bridgeton, N. J., and Salem, and had reached the crossing of the Reading railroad when it was struck by the 5:40 down express from Philadelphia, demolishing two cars and telescoping the two following. The engine of the Reading train became a total wreck, killing the engineer and fatally injuring the fireman, and the car behind it was also thrown from the track and many of its occupants killed or injured. The responsibility of the collision has not yet been placed, but William Thurlow, the operator at the block tower situated at the crossing, has been placed under arrest by order of the coroner.

Boiler Explodes in the Wreck.

Leaving this city the tracks of the West Jersey road run parallel to those of the Camden & Atlantic until after they cross the drawbridge when they switch off to the south crossing the Reading road at an obtuse angle. John Greiner, the engineer of the West Jersey train, saw the Reading train approaching the crossing at a swift speed, but as the signals were open for him to proceed on his way he continued. His engine had barely cleared the track of the Reading when the locomotive of the latter train, which left Philadelphia at 5:40 p. m., struck the first car full in the centre, throwing it far off the track into a nearby ditch and completely submerging it. The second car of the West Jersey train was also carried into the ditch, the third and fourth cars being telescoped. The engine of the Reading train was thrown to the other side of the track carrying with it the first coach. A few minutes after the collision, to add to the horror of the situation, the boiler of the Reading locomotive exploded, scalding several to death and casting its boiling spray over many of the injured passengers.

A Gruesome Sight.

Darkness fell quickly, and the work of rescuing the injured and taking out the dead bodies was carried out under the lurid glare of huge bonfires. It was a gruesome sight presented to onlookers as the mangled and burnt forms of the dead were carried from the wreckage which bound them and were laid side by side on the gravel bank near the track with no other pall than the few odd newspapers gathered from the passengers. The wounded were quickly gathered together and carried by train and wagon to the Atlantic City hospital, where six of them died shortly after their arrival."

Some of the Injured Will Die.

The old excursion house at the foot of Mississippi avenue was converted into a morgue and thither the dead were taken. This city is terribly excited over the accident. The streets in the vicinity of the excursion house and the city hospital, as well as the road leading to the scene of the accident, being still packed with people anxious to learn the latest particulars. Bridgeton and Salem excursionists who escaped injury were brought back to this city and sent home on a special train several hours later in the evening. James W. Hoyt, secretary of the department of public safety, immediately upon learning of the extent of the catastrophe, telegraphed for the Philadelphia medical corps, fifteen of whom responded and hurried to this city on a special train which left Philadelphia at 10:45 p. m. About thirty of the wounded had their injuries dressed and were able to proceed on their way. It is expected that fully a dozen of those now lying in the hospital will not survive their injuries.

The Identified Dead.

The list of the identified dead are: Mr. and Mrs. Trenchard, Bridgeton; Edward Farr, engineer of the Reading railroad train, Atlantic City; Samuel Thorn, baggage master, Pennsylvania road, Atlantic City; P. S. Murphy, Millville, N. J.; J. D. Johnston, Bridgeton; D. Bonoughas, Bridgeton; G. S. Taylor, no address; P. H. Goldsmith and wife, Bridgeton; Samuel Smith, Atlantic City; D. E. Wood, shipping clerk, Philadelphia; John Creiner, Bridgeton; Charles Ackler, Salem; Charles McGear, Bridgeton; Franklin Dubois, Woodruff; Mrs. J. Earnest, Bridgeton.

The Injured.

Among the more seriously injured are the following: Howard Woodland, Bridgeton, arm broken; Mrs. E. A. Abbott, Rhodestown, leg and arm broken; Lizzie and Caroline Smalley, Bridgeton, arms and legs severely injured; C. D. Wraser and wife, Bridgeton, both badly cut on head; Irwin Dubois, 13 years, head cut and bodily injuries; Mrs. M. Keiger, Elmer, N. J., back badly hurt and head cut; Jacob Johnson, Shirley, head hurt, wife supposed to be dead and child badly hurt; Stanley Wenzell, Alloway, scalp nearly torn off; Howard Woodlawn, Bridgeton, arm broken; ex-Judge Hitchman, Bridgeton, internal injuries; Mrs. Hitchman, wife, concussion of the brain; Mrs. E. A. Abbott, Bridgeton, leg broken; Howard Smith, Bridgeton, back broken; D. Friese, address unknown, neck dislocated; C. Horner, Bridgeton, broken leg and internal injuries. Charles W. Horner, fractured leg and internal injuries; Weiley Lee, Bridgeton, internal injuries; Frederick Chenway, Bridgeton, internal injuries and scalp wound; Mrs. Faunce Fralinger, Philadelphia, broken leg (will have to be amputated); John S. Kelley, Camden, compound fracture of femur, internal injuries, probably fatal.

HOME MISSION BOARD.

The Investigating Committee To Submit Its Report in a Few Days.

New York, July 31.—It is expected the committee of nine appointed to investigate the affairs of the home mission board of the Presbyterian church will have its report ready for publication in a few days. Corresponding Secretary McMillan of the board, intimated this morning that the report would deal with facts and figures which would be interesting to the people at large. The secretary feels confident that the committee will find no reason for complaint as to the management of the home mission work. All the officers, he declared, court the fullest investigation. Rev. Dr. John L. Withrow, chairman of the committee of eleven, appointed to investigate the real estate affairs of the mission boards of the Presbyterian church is engaged in preparing a statement for publication. Secretary D. J. McMillan of the home missionary board, in speaking of the work of the committee of eleven, said: "The committee is bound to get at the exact facts regarding the real estate affairs of the two boards." He further declared that the committee had found the action of the officers in erecting the new building and the disposition of the old one commendable, also that the missinary work should be encouraged and financially sustained.

TWO LOST AT SEA.

A Fireman, Crazed by the Heat, Leaps Overboard—One of the Rescuers Drowned.

Baltimore, July 31.—Two men were lost overboard from the North German Lloyd steamer Roland, at this port from Bremen. While the vessel was in mid-ocean the heat was very oppressive and in the stoke hole almost unbearable. The firemen suffered terribly, and several of them succumbed and had to be carried on deck and restored to consciousness by the ship's surgeon. At last one of the men, who had been overcome by heat early in the voyage, became crazed. With wild yells he rushed up the ladder, ran across the deck and sprang into the sea. During the excitement a hitch occurred in the lowering of a boat, and two of the rescuing party were thrown into the sea. The boat was finally lowered, and one of the drowning seamen rescued. His companion and the crazed man were not found.

SPORTING MEN COMBINE.

They Form a League To Promote All Kinds of Professional Sports.

New York, July 31.—A meeting of prominent sporting men and managers of different athletic clubs was held in this city yesterday afternoon. The object of the meeting was to formulate a protective league. After considerable discussion it was decided to name the new organization the American Sporting Protective league, the object being to promote all kinds of professional sports. The organization will take in every prominent athletic club in the United States. The league will be run on the same plan as the National Baseball league. A meeting of delegates from each city will be held here about the middle of August, the object being to draw up by-laws.

DESPERATE STRIKING MINERS.

Hymera Mine in Indiana Set Fire To and Totally Destroyed.

Sullivan, Ind., July 31.—Yesterday a body of striking miners went to the Hymera mines. Covering the night watchmen with guns the strikers marched them to the woods half a mile distant, and while three stood guard the balance of the crowd set fire to the plant. It was totally destroyed. Burning timbers fell into the shaft and set fire to the mine below. Their work done, the mob left and went east, toward Clay county. The mines belong to the old Pittsburg Coal company of Chicago, and were probably the best equipped of any mines in this country. The loss is estimated at nearly $50.000.

Northern Pacific Foreclosure Sale.

New York, July 31.—Judge Lacombe of the United States supreme court has signed an order in the case of the Farmer's Loan and Trust company against the Northern Pacific Railroad company and others, confirming special master Alfred L. Cary's report of the foreclosure sale of the property rights and franchises of the company.

Cornelius Vanderbilts Condition.

Newport, R. I., July 31.—Mr. Vanderbilt's condition shows slow but steady progress towards recovery. He passed a comfortable night last night. The statement that he was able to walk about his room is entirely untrue and misleading. He is still confined to his bed.

Dangerously Ill from "Knockout" Drops.

Providence, R. I., July 31.—Harry A. Griffith lies at his home dangerously ill from the effects of "knockout" drops, administered at a place on Walker street. Griffith has been critically ill ever since he received the heavy dose, and at times his life has been despaired of.

John Stetson, Sr., Appeals.

Boston, July 31.—John Stetson, sr., has taken an appeal from the decision of Judge Grant of the probate court, who allowed the will of the late John Stetson, jr.

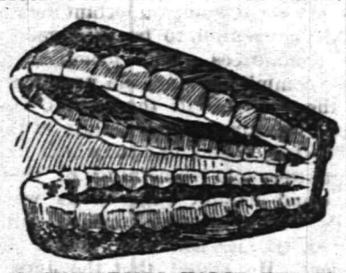
WASHINGTON'S TEETH.

Queer Relic of the First President Owned in Baltimore.

While the ranks of those who gazed upon the form of the father of his country in the flesh, and those old colored aunties who rocked him to sleep in his infant days are growing smaller each year, it is interesting to note that a valuable but not altogether lovely relic of George Washington is owned in Baltimore.

This memento of the first president of the United States is nothing less than a set of false teeth that at one time adorned the mouth of the commander of the American army and assisted him in masticating the menus that were features of the good old days when he was toasted, wined and dined and honored all over the 13 states.

It is eminently proper that Baltimore should be the custodian of these molars.



WASHINGTON'S FALSE TEETH.

for that city bears the distinction of being the first American town to erect a monument to America's greatest statesman-soldier.

These teeth, which are in an excellent state of preservation, are owned by the Baltimore College of Dentistry. The college has had possession of the teeth for some years. They were presented to the late Dr. Winder, one of the foremost dentists of the day and the first dean of the college, by the late Edmund Lee Laws, whose middle name will denote the fact that he descended from a family closely related to Washington.

Beyond the clumsiness of the construction of the teeth there is little to distinguish them from sets such as are turned out by the dentists of to-day. They are of medium size. On the top or roof there is a peculiar patch made of tin nailed on with tacks that look strong enough to hold down a carpet. This is explained by the statement that Gen. Washington at one time broke his set of teeth. The historian, who has so carefully preserved the tradition that the general, finding a break in his teeth, took them to a blacksmith to be mended, was not careful to chronicle other details. At any rate, while the blacksmith's work would not be passed upon as first-class by a modern repairer of teeth, it shows that he understood more delicate operations than those of shoeing horses.

It is also related that these teeth were not those ordinarily worn by Washington, but instead were only used on state occasions, he having another set for the mastication of plebeian food, only placing this set in his mouth when his country demanded his presence before the people.

DESPERATE BICYCLE THIEF.

He Runs Amuck at Providence, Wounds Two Persons and Escapes.

Providence, R. I., July 31.—A desperate and heavily armed bicycle thief was locked up in the store of Dawson & Co., 22 North Main street, yesterday, for the purpose of holding him until the arrival of a policeman, but he fought his way to freedom with a brace of revolvers. He carried a stolen bicycle to the store Wednesday and the Taunton authorities came after the wheel yesterday. The thief rode another stolen bicycle when he called at the store this afternoon, and when James E. Dawson and Frank Riggs, the latter a bicycle agent from Syracuse, attempted to apprehend him, the thief pounded a $200 plate glass window out of the front of the store with an Indian club, and reaching the street sent seven bullets from two revolvers at his pursuers. Riggs was shot in the leg and Henry Martin of this city was wounded in the head. Neither of the wounded men was fatally hurt. The thief was shot at, knocked from his bicycle and chased by a crowd of police, but he got away and passed through a residence, shifting hats in the hallway. Then he walked away, his two revolvers and a big knife being hidden by a long coat which he secured in his flight. Dawson & Co.'s store is in the middle of the business section of Providence, and crowds were in the street at the time of the shooting. The same young man, it is said, appeared in Westerly a few days ago and left a stolen bicycle there with Frank Girken. He is also believed to be the murderer of Frederick Strange, who was robbed of his wheel and killed by the roadside near Taunton a month ago.

RAILROADS BLOCKADED.

The Storm at Wheeling, W. Va., Causes Immense Damage.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 31.—The heavy rain of yesterday caused immense damage to property in this vicinity. Small creeks became raging torrents and bridges were swept away. Farm houses were flooded and crops irreparably damaged. On the Ohio side the Wheeling & Lake Erie, the Cincinnati & Pittsburg and the Cleveland, Lorraine & Wheeling roads were blocked by washouts near Martin's Ferry, and it will be several days before they can run trains. The Baltimore & Ohio suffered considerably. The worst trouble was on the Parkersburg branch, and as a result all trains are obliged to use the forth division in order to get to Cincinnati and St. Louis. Eatons tunnel caved in at both ends while a passenger train was going through, but fortunately the mishap did not cost any lives. A number of trestles were washed out also on this branch, and it will be several days before any trains can be run through. The tracks were flooded and all trains were delayed.

TWO HUNDRED HOMELESS.

A Disastrous Cloudburst Visits Steubenville, O., But No Lives Are Lost.

Steubenville, O., July 31.—Two hundred people in this vicinity are homeless to-day as the result of a disastrous cloudburst that occurred yesterday afternoon in the western part of this city. The people in the lowlands, alarmed by the recent floods, were prepared for disaster and fled to the hills. No lives were lost, although many were in imminent danger. When the houses in the track of angry waters were reached they went down like cardboard. Thirty or forty residences were wrecked. Two culverts of the Pan Handle railroad were carried away, and at Gould's there is 550 feet of washout. No trains are running. The damage done by the cloud-burst cannot be repaired for $100,000.

Many Engaged in the Conspiracy.

Havana, July 31.—The latest details of the rising among the political prisoners on the Isle of Pines show that 250 persons who had been deported from Cuba were engaged in the conspiracy. They had partially succeeded in their plan of making away with Col. Berriz, the governor of the island, having overpowered and bound him preparatory to hanging him, when they were interrupted in their work by a patrol which was passing, and which rescued the governor from their hands.

Big Merchandise Store Burned.

Hudson, N. Y., July 31.—The general merchandise store of William H. Rightmeyer, located at Canaan, Four Corners, Columbia county, was burned yesterday, together with contents. The total loss will amount to about $15,000. It is thought that the fire was started by an incendiary.

Consumers' Salt Company.

NEW PAPAL LEGATE

Rev. Sebastien Martinelli To Succeed Cardinal Satolli.

HIS SELECTION CAME AS A SURPRISE

He Is Sixty Years Old, a Learned Theologian and Thoroughly Versed in the Foreign Policy of the Vatican.

London, July 31.—The correspondent in Rome of the United Press telegraphs, that although the report that Mgr. Diomedo Falconio would succeed Monsignor Satolli as papal delegate to the United States had been hitherto entirely credited at the vatican, the pope has appointed as Monsignor Satolli's successor the Rev. Sebastiano Martinelli, prior general of the Augustins Chausses and a brother of the dead Cardinal Martinelli. The fact that the nomination had been made has been kept a secret, even from the most intimate associates of his holiness, and upon its becoming known occasioned a general feeling of surprise. The pope's choice is regarded as an excellent one. The Rev. Sebastien Martinelli is about 60 yeas of age. He is a learned theologian and is thoroughly versed in the foreign policy of the vatican.

WARNING TO FILIBUSTERS.

Significance of the Proclamation Issued by the President.

Washington, July 31.—The president's warning proclamation as to Cuban filibusters is understood to be one of the results of Secretary Olney's recent visit to Gray Gables, and is thought to be in some measure, at least, the answer of the administration to the petitions and complaints against Spain's treatment of Americans in Cuba, which continually pour in upon the state department. Many of these have contained pleas of ignorance of the laws under which the suspects were arrested and imprisoned, and it has apparently been deemed advisable to leave American citizens no longer in doubt as to the protection they may expect if they go so far in their sympathies as to violate United States statutes. Senor Dupuy de Lome has persistently tried to secure some such statement of the administration's attitude ever since the belligerency resolutions were adopted by congress, he desiring to offset the ill-effects in Spain of the debates in the senate. While the United States authorities have invariably displayed the activity required of them in enforcing the neutrality laws, it has been found almost impossible to secure any convictions for violations of the United States neutrality statues until recently.

Canada Wins in the Final Test Race.

Oakville, Ont., July 31.—The final test race between the yachts Canada and Zelma took place off this town yesterday afternoon over a six-mile course dead to leeward, with a northwest wind, and back, beating into the wind—twelve miles in all. The Canada got the lead at the start and gradually increased it, winning by nearly six minutes. The sailing committee deferred decision as to which boat is to sail against the Chicago yacht Vencedor in the international race next month, but there is no doubt the decision will be in the Canada's favor.

Strike Disorders at Lynn.

Lynn, Mass., July 31.—When the non-union men employed in the Thomas G. Plant company's shoe factory in the place of strikers left work last night a crowd gathered and started to follow the men with their usual cries of derision. Some stones were thrown, and John Tufts was arrested in the act of throwing one. Eddie Gallagher and James T. McNally, the latter one of the strikers, were also arrested for inciting a disturbance. These are the first arrests since the strike began.

Denies the Bond Issue Rumor.

Buzzards Boy, Mass., July 31.—The president and his private secretary spent all day yesterday fishing. When he returned he was asked with regard to the published Washington special concerning a bond issue in December or even during his administration. He replied that there was absolutely no truth whatever in the statement referred to. Further than this the president would not express any opinion in the matter.

Reported Patriot Defeat.

Havana, July 31.—Col. Perol reports that his command has had an engagement with the insurgents near Gabriel, province of Havana, in which the rebels were defeated, losing forty-five men, including their leader, Zayas. The Spanish loss was one man killed and three lieutenants and fourteen privates wounded.

Drowned in Shrewsbury River.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 31.—Frank Duke, 23 years old, of New York city was drowned in the Shrewsbury river at Highland Beach last evening. He got out beyond his depth and could not swim. His companions saw his danger, but before help could be secured he went down.

New Hampshire Conventions.

Concord, N. H., July 31.—At a meeting of the republican committee last night the following were fixed upon as the places of holding the several conventions. State, Concord, September 3; congressional, first district, Manchester, September 4; second, Concord, September 3.

Recognized by the President.

Washington, July 31.—The president has recognized Felix Aucaigne as consul-general of Paraguay for the state of New York, and W. E. Richards, consul of Paraguay at New York city.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Fair Tonight and Saturday; Stationary Temperature.

At 9 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 89 Degrees.

The Newark Board of Education have decided to abandon the use of slates in public schools and substitute paper pads. It is claimed that in addition to the new system being much more neater with the students, that it will be much better on the eyes.

The Republicans of the First Congressional district held a convention at Woodbury yesterday and for the third time nominated Henry C. Loudenslager, of Gloucester county. It was a walkover for the candidate, as he had no opposition.

Postmaster-General Wilson has issued an order to railway mail clerks directing them not to take an active part in the political campaign, such as would be involved in their attending political conventions as delegates, making political speeches, or assisting in the management of the canvass. The circular expressly states that it is not desired to control their opinions on political matters.

In county court yesterday there was taught a lesson to every person who harbors a vicious dog that it is his duty to protect other people from the savage attacks of these canines. A young lady who was attacked and injured by a vicious bulldog owned by a Linden man was granted $200 damages against the owner of the dog for the onslaught which was made by the cur.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

Chairman Franklin Murphy Calls It for Trenton, Thursday, August 27th.

Chairman Franklin Murphy, of the Republican State Convention, yesterday afternoon issued a call for the State Convention for the nomination of ten electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, to be held in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, at noon, Thursday, August 27th.

The basis of representation will be one delegate for each 200 Republican votes cast at the last Gubernatorial election, and one for each fraction over 100. The county representation will be as follows: Atlantic, 19; Bergen, 30; Burlington, 37; Camden, 64; Cape May, 8; Cumberlad, 27; Hudson, 105; Gloucester. 20; Hunterdon, 17; Mercer, 56; Middlesex, 36; Monmouth, 42; Morris, 30; Ocean, 13; Passaic, 58; Salem, 17; Somerset, 18; Sussex, 13; Union, 42; Warren, 17; and Essex, 147.

A Republican Bolter.

There is quite a stir in political circles in Rahway over the announcement by Wm. H. Miller, the Republican clerk of the Board of Education for the past two years, that he intends to vote for Bryan and Sewall next November. Mr. Miller's father is George Miller, alderman of the Fourth ward, and the son is a prominent member of the American Mechanics. His defection from the Republican party is due, so he declares, to his belief in free silver.

DUNELLEN.

Miss Minnie Handren, of New York, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. Schepflin, of Grove street.

Miss Gertrude Dabb, of Elizabeth, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Randolph, of Greenbrook.

Miss Timpson, of Newark, and Mr. Osmim, of Belleville, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bird, of West Dunellen.

Mrs. John Kitchen, of North Plainfield, accompanied by Mrs. Colthar, of the same place, spent yesterday as the guests of Mrs. T. J. Todd, of Front street.

NEW MARKET.

Joseph Kelley who has been visiting at Maryland, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall and family, of Hoboken, are summering at the Nelson House.

Miss Sarah Nelson has returned home from her vacation and has resumed her duties as postmistress.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Little, of East Ninth street, is visiting at Grandview-on-the-Hudson.

O. T. Waring and family, of Park avenue, leave today for Watch Hill, R. I.

The Misses Millie and Nettie Langdon, of East Ninth street, are at East Hampton.

A. D. Shepard and family, of East Front street, went to the Adirondacks yesterday.

Miss Edith VanDyke, of Linden avenue, North Plainfield, is visiting in Dunellen.

John H. Doane, of LaGrande avenue, leaves tomorrow for Moscow, Pa., to join his family.

Miss Sneider, of Reading, Pa., is visiting at the home of Mrs. Bowman, of West Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Raymond, of Central avenue, are spending a few weeks in the mountains

Mrs. F. E. Boardwell, of Watcum, Washington, is visiting Mrs. Amos. B. Gray, of Elmwood place.

Misses Maggie and Kate Henrehand, of Newark, are visiting Mrs. H. F. Bower, of East Front street.

Charles Wilcox, of West Second street, left yesterday morning for Elizabeth, where he will hereafter reside.

The Misses Margaret and Charlotte Cave, of Sandford avenue, are visiting at the home of their uncle in Elizabeth.

Mrs. U. B Crane and family, of East Second street, who have been at Asbury Park, returned home last evening.

Miss Kate Hennebred, of Newark, and her sister, Miss Maggie, are visiting Mrs. H. F. Bowers, of West Front street.

Frank Arthur Putnam, of Elm place, went to Westfield yesterday to attend the birthday party of his cousin.

Miss Nellie Backer, of Prospect place, left yesterday for Pickle Mountain, N. J., to spend the month of August.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Dunham, of East Fifth street, go to Liberty, Sullivan county, N. Y., tomorrow, for ten days.

Thomas U. Smith and Chas. Hazeltine, of Westervelt avenue, return today after a week's outing at Glen Cove, L. I.

A. H. Cornish, senior clerk in the law offices of Assemblyman W. R. Codington, begins his two weeks vacation on Monday.

General Secretary Manning, of the Y. M. C. A., returned yesterday with his family after an outing at Owen, Sussex county, N. J.

Miss Grace Lowrie has returned to her home in Dunellen, after a very pleasant visit with her brother, Clark Lowrie, of Linden avenue.

Miss Annie Martin and Miss Jennie Harding, of Raritan, have returned home after a visit with Miss Annie Daly, of West Third street.

Miss Mabel Gillies, of Putnam & DeGraw's, will start on her two weeks vacation next Monday. Most of it will be spent at Asbury Park.

Rev. Dr. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, will occupy the pulpit of the Somerville Second Reformed church on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Remstein, of New York, are expected here tonight to spend a week or two with Mr. and Mrs. S. Kline, of Plainfield avenue.

Herman Keller, of Somerset place, was able to go out again yesterday afternoon after a four days' confinement to the house with stomach and bowel troubles.

Harry Pond, of Newark, returned home yesterday, accompanying Miss Mabel Lines, of Duer street and Park place. Miss Sadie Lines also went along for a short visit.

Benjamin Perkins and Miss Frances Jones, who were united in the bonds of holy matrimony by Rev. P. S. Gibson last evening, both came from Scottsville, Va., on the James river, the former home of the pastor who married them.

Gilbert Stinus, member of No. 2 Truck Company, Newark, is visiting H. F. Bower, of East Front street. He has visited the local fire laddies and thinks that Plainfield's fire department compares favorably with that of Newark's, which is a paid one.

SOME POLITICAL GOSSIP

A NEW JERSEY WRITER INDULGES IN UNION COUNTY OBSERVATIONS.

Predicts That Foster M. Voorhees Will be a Candidate for Senator Again, and J. E. Marsine May Stand for Congress.

"Freeholder," the New Jersey political writer of the New York Press, has the following gossip in this morning's paper:

As the wind now blows, Foster M. Voorhees will be nominated by the Republicans for Senator in Union county. Frederick C. Marsh is the only logical candidate to be placed in opposition by the Democrats Higher aspirations on the part of Mr. Voorhees will not prevent his friends from keeping him before the people until the opportunity for larger game comes his way.

Without a doubt Charles N. Fowler will be renominated for Congress in the Eighth district. That old warhorse of Democracy, James E Martine, of Plainfield, will probably contest the election with Mr. Fowler, who defeated John T. Dunn in the landslide two years ago. Mr. Dunn would be the Democratic candidate this year if his health would permit of an active campaign.

Union County Republicans believe that it is safe to go into the Assembly contest with the winners of 1895, and will renominate Assemblymen Codington, Clous and Roll. But the Democrats will not put up putty men in opposition. William D. Wolfskeil, member of the Elizabeth Board of Education; John H. Green, of Westfield and John Crowell, ex County Clerk, of Rahway, have been selected for the nominations.

If the nominations for Senator in Union are given to the country, the candidate for sheriff will be selected in the city of Elizabeth, and vice versa. The office pays anywhere from $7,000 to $25,000 a year. Prominent among the Democratic candidates is William B. Sayre, president of the Elizabeth Board of Education. If he can be induced to run, the Republicans would have no easy thing in defeating him. Ex-Sheriff Hicks and Charles H. Moore, the latter of Elizabethport, are likewise under consideration for the nomination. The Republicans will select either Deputy Sheriff Clark, of Rahway, or Freeholder Hulskamper, of Elizabethport.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

A distictive local design has been selected by the committee in charge of the State convention of Christian Endeavorers for the badge which will grace the vast army of delegates who will attend the event. The material of which it is made is white celliloid modeled in the form of a scroll, on which will be engraved a vignette of Washington rock in relief and the valley below this historical spot. The representation is realistic in details and will be quickly recognized by any who ever visited the massive bowlder and picturesque summit thereby. In the lower left hand corner will be engraved the C. E. monogram while the upper right hand corner will be filled with the inscription anent the convention.

The old axiom of "In times of peace prepare for war" must be revised to "In times of hot weather prepare for winter" to be adapted to Assistant Cashier David Runyon of the First National Bank. Last night Mr. Runyon attended the auction sale at Laire's hardware store and when the auctioneer unearthed a snow shovel there was general consternation among the buyers at the temerity of a man offering such an article for sale when the thermometer was registering the nineties. The crowd wiped their brows in disgust, but Mr. Runyon boldly bid on the snow shovel and it was knocked down to him for a mere bit. He carried the implement home on his back with a total disregard for the eternal fitness of things.

I had always supposed that every part of the city and borough was a beneficiary of the free postal delivery system, but it seems not. At the present time the service does not extend in the borough any further than Regent street. Coddington avenue has been pretty well built up of late and Postmaster Hetfield, with an eye to all parts of the territory which may come within his service, has had a list of the residents of that street prepared and it is likely they will soon enjoy the benefits of free delivery.

FURROWS BY TROLLEY.

The Use of Electric Power in Farming Operations.

Chicago Man's Invention a Boon to the Man Who Raises Corn and Sweet Potatoes Provided Only That It is Practicable.

"Farming by electricity," is the name Isreal Hogeland has bestowed upon his 41st and latest invention. Mr. Hogeland declared to a Chicago Record reporter at a test of his invention that his new method of agriculture was bound to be a success and he also said it would be the last blow to the usefulness of the horse as a farm animal.

"Farming by electricity" does not mean, as its name might indicate, that by the Hogeland method a farmer may sit in his easy-chair and by manipulating a switchboard or pressing a series of buttons gather onions, plant corn, weed a strawberry bed, annihilate potato bugs or milk the cows, all without taking his eyes off his weekly paper. Mr. Hogeland's idea of tilling the soil with the aid of lightning is a trolley plow. His new invention is nothing more nor less than a four-wheeled truck equipped with from one to four plows and operated by a young man who turns a crank like the motorman of an electric car and who might as well be a motorman, except for the fact that he has no gong to ring.

About a year ago Mr. Hogeland hit upon an idea for an electric plow, to cost a medium amount and to do the work of ten men in such marvelously short time that it would be indispensable to the farmer and planter.

After months of labor in his workshop the veteran machinist at last evolved something which answers to this description:

A wooden platform six by three feet, mounted on four wheels. The front wheels are of solid cast iron, and are used as the steering wheels. These wheels are controlled by a wheel which looks like the brake on a freight train, and it stands just to the right of the operator. The man running the trolley plow has an iron seat like that on a mowing machine. At his left is the familiar barrel-like arrangement, with the crank at easy reach. Just behind the driver or motorman, or pilot or gripman, or plowboy, or whatever he is, rests the motor, concealed under an oval box constructed of zinc. The traction wheels are about 3½ feet high, of the skeleton design, and have long, broad teeth every few inches along the outer surface. There is a "plow lift," operated by a lever, also within easy reach of the person who does the plowing.

Now comes the odd part of this piece of machinery. A trolley wire, of course, couldn't be strung over a ten-acre cornfield, so Mr. Hogeland has fixed things so that an insulated trolley wire is carried on board the four-wheeled plow and is paid out by a reel. When the driver gets to the end of his rope—or, more fitly speaking, his trolley—he reverses his engine, backs up, makes a neat turn, and starts away in the opposite direction, the reel picking up the wire as it lies upon the ground.

The electrical circuit was supplied at the test by street car trolley wires which fed the Hogeland plow by means of a connected wire from the terminus of the Bowmanville electric car line at North Fifty-ninth street and Lincoln avenue. Only one plow was attached to the machine, but that one was enough to show that a stone quarry could be uprooted if four shares were at work and a full head of electricity were turned on. Mr. Hogeland's assistant rode around an uncultivated plat of ground for an hour or so, and when he was called off the lot looked like a portion of the sanitary canal. Everybody seemed pleased and hastened to tell Mr. Hogeland what a great thing the plow was sure to be. Then somebody said, innocently:

"But, Mr. Hogeland, what if you are in a state, or a section of a state, that doesn't have trolley wires convenient to the farm?"

"Oh, that's all right," said Mr. Hogeland. "There's always a corporation in every neighborhood which uses electricity, and farmers may get their supply that way. It's very cheap. Then, again, a storage battery may be used. Such a battery would not be too heavy, in my opinion. Another good scheme would be to have farmers club together, buy their own engine, and take turn about using the plow."

Photograph of the Eye.

At a recent meeting of the Paris Academy of Medicine M. Guinkoff stated that he had successfully photographed the inetrior of the eye. The advantages of this method are important, since it enables actual pictures of the diseases of the retina to be secured and compared from time to time to determine whether disease processes of the eye progress or not. The picture is made in two seconds. The apparatus can thus serve as an ophthalmoscope, and any number of persons can observe the results.

Snow-Melting Machine.

In preparation for next winter an Italian has invented a snow-melting machine. In this machine a lift receives the snow gathered up by a shovel, subjects it to the heat of pipes filled with boiling water and allows the liquid thus obtained to flow into a tank and then into the street gutter. The machine is driven by a motor and a brush at the rear sweeps to the side whatever escapes the shovel.

—Albert L. Rawson, an artist of Woodcliff, who was fined $200 and costs recently for producing letters from Mme Gaudin, an alleged $17,000,000 heiress, and publishing them, has brought suit against the latter, claiming she employed him to write the story for a newspaper.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

A BRICK WALL CAVES IN.

The Weight of a Car Load of Oats Causes a Warehouse Wall to Collapse.

Nearly twenty feet of the rear wall of the storage warehouse of the Plainfield Produce Company fell this morning, but no one was injured. The warehouse belongs to the Hetfield estate, and is located beside the railroad between Madison and Park avenues, facing Arlington avenue. A car load of oats was being emptied into the bin in the rear of the building when the weight of the oats forced out the rear end of the wall, allowing a large quantity of the oats to escape into the ditch beside the railway embankment.

A Dispute Over Board.

The trial of Gustavus A. Weidenmeyer against Frederick R. Meserole, was brought up before Justice Sutphen, at the Somerset, last Saturday morning. The plaintiff boarded with the defendant, who lives near Dunellen, and paid $10 a week in advance. He left, and brought suit to recover one week's board. The defendant claimed that Weidenmeyer owed him $35. The plaintiff failed to appear and Messerole was granted a judgment for $35. There were forty-four witnesses present from Oceanic to testify to the character of the plaintiff. James J. Meehan represented the plaintiff and Gerald R. Cushman the defendant.—Somerville Messenger.

Preparing for the Campaign.

The Republican city executive committee met last evening and discussed several important matters. It was decided to enlarge the committee by adding three more persons from each ward. It was determined to secure a McKinley and Hobart banner and a transparency. Just where the banner will be hung has not yet been decided. The transparency will be placed in front of the association rooms on East Front street. Other matters of a preliminary nature were discussed regarding the coming campaign.

MAGNETS THAT LIFT TONS.

Growing Use of Electro-Magnets and Electric Cranes.

An Immense Saving of Labor—No Slings Required—Especially Convenient in Handling Heavy Shot—Safe and Effective—Details of Construction.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

By means of the electric crane and the electro-magnet which were introduced into this country and recently exhibited before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers it is claimed that three men can now do in 15 minutes the same amount of work which formerly taxed the strength of six men for 90 minutes. It is found invaluable in working with pig iron, heavy castings and immense boiler plates.

It is believed by engineering experts that these lifting magnets will soon replace the present forms of the derrick and traveling crane. Preparations are being made to introduce this device in the great Carnegie works at Pittsburgh, and its practical workings are being very carefully watched by at least half a dozen large manufacturers throughout the country.

At first sight, it appears odd that a small coil of metal weighing about 45 pounds can, by that strange force known as magnetic influence, aided by the equally mysterious power of electricity, lift tons of iron with no apparent grip upon the weight to be lifted. It has been proved, however, that such an electro-magnet can lift 722 times its own weight.

In England the electric crane and electro-magnet are in use in a number of places—in particular, at the Woolwich arsenal and at the Sandycroft works. Those in use at the Woolwich arsenal were designed by an officer in the British army and greatly simplify the work of lifting and moving heavy shot and plates of iron and steel. Particularly is the electro-magnet of value in lifting heavy shot, as previous to their use workmen experienced no end of trouble in getting slings securely around the shot. It was a long and heavy task, and required the labor of many men.

THE ELECTRIC CRANE AT WORK.

Now the electro-magnet is lowered by the magnetic crane and simply laid on the side of the shell to be raised; the turning of the small lever at the base of the crane switches on the current, and the work is done. Here the new apparatus enables three men to do the work which formerly required nine men.

The construction of the crane and magnet is peculiar, and its inventors claim that there is less chance of a break than when the old-fashioned tackle was used. Indeed, so far as is known no accidents with the new method have thus far occurred.

The electric crane looks very much like an ordinary swinging crane. It is constructed of the best steel, the frame being comparatively light, but of a strength far in excess of any strain which will ever be put upon it. From the base of an upright steel beam a long steel arm projects, first upward at an angle of 45 degrees; then, with a bend upward and outward, it extends for a distance nearly twice the length of the supporting beam. Two steel rods reaching from the top of the beam to the crane act as supports or holds. One is attached to the crane about a third of the way from the base and just at the bend, while the other is attached to the upper end of the crane.

The wire through which the electric current is carried from the battery at the base of the crane to the magnet runs up along the upright beam and across the upper support to the end of the crane, then over a small wheel to the end of the chain to which is attached the lifting magnet. Duplicate wires are used to prevent any possible accident in case the wire should foul with anything or in any way be broken. The switch-board governing the current is placed at the base.

In lifting a weight of 3,600 pounds a current of from three to four amperes at from 20 to 30 volts is used. The magnets vary in size and weight from comparatively small ones weighing 45 pounds to those having a weight of 250 pounds, but the lifting power of the magnet is not always in proportion to its size.

The body or core of the magnet used in lifting steel shells or circular pieces of metal is shaped like an inverted "U" and closely bound with wire, the winding being protected by brass flanges and by a thick covering of brass. The two ends of the wire winding are led to duplicate terminals, where they are joined to the two wires from which they receive the current. Through the center of the magnet run two bars to which are attached the rings by which the magnet is attached to the hook at the end of the pulley of the lifting chain.

There are a number of different patents already out on electro-magnets and electric cranes. Some of the cranes are intended to be permanent fixtures in mills and iron works, while others, for lighter work, are known as movable cranes, and can be used on flat cars or in yards. The movable cranes are balanced by a counter weight placed at the base of the upright beam, but the general idea is the same in all.

The magnets differ more than the cranes, those in use in rolling mills and foundries being very different in shape from those used in arsenals and other places where the greater part of the material to be lifted is spherical or cylindrical in form. For use in factories and yards the magnets vary in size from 100 to 275 pounds. They are usually made with what are known as limbs, which are simply two projections from a steel cross bar. Such is the one in use at the Sandycroft works in England. In this magnet the limbs are wound with wire, and on the cross bar is a switchboard for throwing the current on and off. It is used in lifting pieces of iron and steel varying in weight from 100 pounds to two tons. Before the advent of the electro-magnet the packing of such masses of metal was work of the hardest kind; but now two men can do in a quarter of an hour what it formerly took six men an hour and a half to do. Attached to the cross bar, between the limbs of the magnets, is a hook from which a sling can be suspended for use in lifting nonmagnetic substances.

A Javanese Temple.

The temple of Boeroboader is one of the largest of the ancient temples in Java. These temples consist of vast masses of sculptured stone, built on enormous mounds covering sometimes two or three acres of ground. They are built terrace upon terrace, with stone passages running round the entire structure, which is conical in shape. The walls of these passages are a mass of extraordinary sculpture, whose subject is often of a very indecent character. The stones themselves are of immense size, and the whole is in a wonderful state of preservation. The age of these Mohammedan monuments is estimated at 1,200 years, and their gigantic construction is ascribed to the immigrants from India and Ceylon. Huge statues of stone, mostly headless, adorn the corners and pinnacles of the temples, to which there is no interior beyond a few small cells.—Westminster Review.

Good Story of a Beaver.

All animals inherit an education which in common language goes by the name of instinct. A Canadian professor convinced a friend who did not believe in this inherited faculty in this way: He bought a baby beaver of a hunter, and sent it to his skeptical friend. The creature became a great pet in the house, but showed no signs of wanting to build a dam until, one morning, a leaky pail full of water was put on the floor of the back kitchen. The beaver was there. He was only a baby, to be sure, but the moment he saw the water oozing out of a crack in the pail he scampered into the yard, brought in a chip and began building a dam. His owner was called, and watched the little fellow, very much astonished at what he saw. He gave orders to have the pail left where it was, and the industrious beaver kept at his work four weeks, when he had built a solid dam all round the pail.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

HANNA'S MOVEMENTS

Rumors Regarding His Visit to Whitelaw Reid's Mansion.

PROBABLY OF LITTLE SIGNIFICANCE

Intimated That the Factional Trouble in New York State Was Discussed—Will Leave for Cleveland To-morrow and Go to Chicago Monday.

New York, July 31.—Nothing positive is known as to what transpired at the conference between Mr. Hanna and Whitelaw Reid at the latter's mansion, Ophir Farm, White Plains, N. Y., last night, but there are all manner of rumors as to what the meeting signifies. That the present factional fight in this state was talked over is generally believed, and it may have been the principal subject of discussion, but the impression most general is that Mr. Hanna was simply continuing the policy he adopted when he reached this city, to get all the information and advice possible in conducting Major McKinley's campaign in the east from anyone who might be able to give him valuable points. Of course, rumor has already picked out a cabinet position or a choice diplomatic post abroad for Mr. Reid, but this is all idle gamon. Mr. Hanna, it is understood, will return to Cleveland to-morrow, and, after spending Sunday at home, he will go to Chicago to look after the headquarters there and brace up the campaign in the west. Major McKinley's manager has received many callers at the Waldorf during the past twenty-four hours. Among them were Senator Proctor of Vermont, ex-Gov. A. B. Cornell and J. A. Chase of Florida.

VETERANS ORGANIZE.

Non-Partisan Association To Work for McKinley and the Gold Standard.

New York, July 31.—In response to a call sent out by Gen. Daniel E. Sickles and Col. L. Edwin Dudley, formerly secretary of the veterans national committee, there was a meeting of veterans yesterday in parlor H of the Murray Hill hotel. The meeting was for the purpose of forming a non-partisan organization of union veterans to work for McKinley and the existing gold standard. Those present at the meeting were Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, Gen. Horace Porter, Gen. Charles R. Brayton, Gen. James S. Negley, Commissioner C. H. T. Collis, Col. S. C. Warriner and Col. L. E. Dudley. Gen. Sickles was chosen president, Gen. Porter vice-president and Col. Dudley secretary. These officers will meet at Gen. Sickles' house on Tuesday evening next to prepare an address and organize for the campaign. Among those who sent letters declaring their willingness to join a non-partisan veteran association and regretting their inability to attend the meeting were Gen. Selden Connor, Gen. Franz Sigel, ex-congressman Elijah A. Morse, Col. Alfred S. Roe, United States senator Redfield Proctor, Major H. A. Hall, Col. A. M. Edwards, Gen. Maxwell Woodhull, Gen. Allan Rutherford, Gen. R. S. Foster, Gen. John C. Robinson, Gen. W. F. Draper, justice Harry White, Gen. Oliver O. Howard, ex-Gov. H. H. Wells of Virginia and Gen. John P. Nicholson.

New Jersey Republican Convention.

Newark, N. J., July 31.—Chairman Franklin Murphy of the republican state committee has issued a call for the state convention for the nomination of ten electors for president and vice-president of the United States to be held in Taylor's Opera house, Trenton, at noon, Thursday, Aug. 27. The basis of representation will be one delegate for each 200 republican votes cast at the last gubernatorial election and one for each fraction over 100.

Delegates Claimed by Both Factions.

Kingston, N. Y., July 31.—The delegates to the state convention chosen at the republican assembly district convention at New Paltz are Jacob Lefever, Nelson Smith, Willet I. Vandemark, George Deyo, J. T. Mann, and Samuel Waring. They are claimed by both the regular organization and the anti-Platt men.

KILLED HIS FAMILY.

W. E. Burt of Austin, Tex., Murders His Wife and Two Children.

Austin, Tex., July 31.—W. E. Burt, a member of one of the best families of the city, murdered his wife and two children, aged 2 and 4 years, last Friday night, and placed the dead bodies in a cistern. The crime was not discovered until yesterday. His residence adjoined a business block, and a foul odor led to an investigation. He left the city Saturday night after committing the terrible deed, and informed several of the neighbors not to drink the water as it was polluted by a dead cat. The wife was asleep. He bound her in a blanket and dropped her struggling body into the cistern. Both children had their brains knocked out. A reward of $300 has been offered for Burt's apprehension.

Rolling Mill Company in Trouble.

Reading, Pa., July 31.—Sheriff Schmech levied yesterday upon the machinery and a large stock of finished and unfinished iron of the Reading Rolling Mill company on an execution for $146,561.10 issued against the company at the instance of the Security company of Pottstown. The defendant company have been in trouble for some years, and only recently emerged from a receivership.

WILL NOT WITHDRAW

Sewall Has No Intention of Resigning in Favor of Watson.

RUMOR NOT WORTHY OF ANSWER

Knows Nothing About Mr. Bryan's Intentions Regarding the Populist Nomination—The Nebraskan To Visit Mr. Sewall at Bath.

Bath, Me., July 31.—Arthur Sewall was interviewed last evening regarding the rumor that he was about to resign in favor of Watson, and said: "Any man who for a minute would entertain such an idea is not worthy of being answered." Mr. Sewall then continued: "I cannot say whether or not Mr. Bryan will entertain a place on the populists ticket. He will come to Bath immediately after his notification which will probably take place in New York. I will induce him to make his headquarters at my house while in Maine. Mrs. Bryan will accompany her husband."

Information on Financial Questions.

Washington, July 31.—In view of the great number of requests for information on financial questions, the treasury department has prepared a pamphlet of fifty-four pages, answering as nearly as can be foreseen the questions asked and expected to be asked. The book gives a history of United States bonds from the time of the earliest issues and how they were disposed of; coinage of all sorts and treasury issues of paper money of every description now in circulation; the world's production of gold and silver, and other financial information.

Democratic Campaign Map.

Washington, July 31.—The democratic congressional campaign committee has issued, as a campaign document, a map showing all the states of the union, with the electoral vote of each. The letterpress explanatory of the map claims that free silver will carry all the states south and west of Pennsylvania, with a total of 330 electoral votes. New England, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, with 117 electoral votes, are claimed as doubtful states.

English Bimetallists Enthusiastic.

New York, July 31.—Henry White, former secretary of the American legation at the court of St. James, was a passenger on the steamer Germanic, which arrived last evening from Liverpool. Mr. White said that the English bimetallists were enthusiastic over the possibility of Bryan's election. "They think," Mr. White said, "that in case Americans declare for the silver standard they will force other nations to do the same. The politically educated on the other side are for sound money."

Democratic-Silverite Headquarters.

W. P. St. John, treasurer of the national democratic committee, is busy to-day putting the rooms in the hotel Bartholdi in shape. The statement given out that these rooms are to the headquarters of the two parties with which Mr. St. John is connected has been qualified by calling the rooms the treasurers' headquarters. There are twelve rooms altogether, as the entire parlor floor of the hotel has been taken. Mr. St. John explained that these rooms are to be used by by both democrats and silverites, but that the location of democratic headquarters rested with Chairman Jones, and that Chairman Lane of the national silver committee will select the headquarters for that party. These gentlemen may locate national headquarters in Washington, Chicago or New York. Strong efforts are being made by Chicago and Washington to have their cities selected. It is not improbable that a compromise may be hit upon, giving one or both of these cities a headquarters equal in importance to that located here.

Herbert Goes Home To Vote.

Washington, July 31. — Secretary Herbert left last night to vote in the Alabama state election next Tuesday. He will stop in Birmingham to-night and go to Montgomery on Saturday. He will return immediately after voting for Johnson, the free silver democratic candidate for governor, but will not support the Alabama populist ticket.

Maine Populists.

Lewiston, Me., July 31.—At the populist congressional convention held in Auburn yesterday afternoon the platform of the national populist convention was endorsed and Hon. Chas. E. Allen of Dresden was nominated as candidate for congress.

Democratic Jollification Meeting.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 31.—The democrats of Broome county ratified the Chicago ticket and platform at an enthusiastic meeting at Stone Opera house last night.

Guns Seized in Canada.

Toronto, Ont., July 31.—Sixteen cases of guns containing 320 pieces from Belgium, consigned to various Canadian points, were seized at the custom house last evening at the instance of the Spanish consul in this city, acting under instructions from the Spanish consul-general at Montreal. It is stated that the arms were to be reshipped to Cuban filibusters by way of New York.

Heavily Laden Barge Capsizes.

Halifax, July 31.—An imperial government transport barge with ninety tons of stores on board turned completely over at the Ordnance wharf last evening, the stores going to the bottom. Among the sunken stores are fifty tons of submarine cable.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, July 31.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $108,565,216.

SPORTS

FRIDAY, July 31. Sun rises 4:55 a. m., sets 7:17 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 8:17 p. m. and 3:55 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League of American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mr. Sader, of the Johnston farm, has purchased a bicycle.

Frank Cleves, of Coddington avenue, is riding a new Keating wheel.

Miss Sallie Gray, of Dunellen, has purchased a Crescent wheel from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

A Royal combination tandem has just been received by H. E. Rider, the sporting goods dealer of North avenue. It is for rental or for sale.

George Morton, son of ice dealer John Morton, was a proud lad yesterday afternoon when his father and mother rewarded him for being a good boy by presenting him with the wish of his heart, a new Niagara bicycle.

A party, consisting of the Misses Loretta Darby, Edith Darby, Mabelle Force and Charlotte Messersmith, and Messrs. Edgar Sheppard, Will F. Dunn, Ernest Millard and Charles Close, go to Elizabeth this evening awheel to hear the band concert there. Chas. Close and Miss Force and Ernest Millard and Miss Messersmith will go on tandems.

The Montclair Herald says that one of the men mentioned as a possible candidate for the office of Chief Consul of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W., is the present Vice-Consul, C. Frank Kirker, of the Tourist Cycle Club, of Paterson. Mr. Kirker is one of the leading lights of the Associated Cycling clubs of this State, and during the past year has taken a prominent part in the division work. If he will accept the nomination, his friends say, he will be a fitting successor to Robert Gentle.

It is surprising what a fraternal feeling exists between wheelmen on the road. It is rare indeed that a wheelmen will pass by some unfortunate brother who may have met with a mishap, such as a punctured tire, broken fork, or any of the many accidents which are likely to occur. As many as six bikers have been observed to stop and assist an unfortunate rider "on his feet" again. Many have learned by experience what it is to be so placed while on the road, with the nearest railroad station miles away, and a walk home with a wheel over their shoulder staring them in the face. It is these little instances in a wheelman's life which has been the means of bringing about chance acquaintances which have in a number of cases ripened into a strong and lasting friendship between the parties.

What the bicycle is doing for the good roads problem every one knows. The farmers have all along been the persons most interested in improving the country roads, and it seems a little strange that they left the work to the wheelmen so long. But a similar thing happened in photography. The professional photographers, working for their livelihoods, haven't developed their own business half so rapidly in some directions as the amateurs, working for fun. The bicyclists and the good roads advocates are working in unison. In many States the L. A. W. consuls even frown upon the construction of separate cycle path, partly hesitating to divert so much money from the common roads, partly fearing lest the construction of special paths may result in abridging the privileges of the wheel on the thoroughfares. This fear is probably ill-founded. Local authorities have always exercised the right to regulate and classify vehicles for the good of all classes, without impugning their rights where the classification ceases.

INS AND OUTS.

Tomorrow the crack Riverdale Athletic Club of New York, composed mostly of ex-college players, will cross bats with the Y. M. C. A. team on the Front street grounds. To secure this club, together with the New Jersey A. C., Staten Island Cricket Club and Elizabeth A. C., which clubs are to play here during the month of August, the management have incurred extra heavy expenses in anticipation of the hearty support of the followers of the National game. The game will be called at 3:30 p. m. The home team has been playing good ball since having struck their gait and warrant the presence of all the rooters to cheer them on to victory in the games to be played. Following will be the batting order.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneous relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THESE WERE NOT TRAMPS

POLICEMAN ARREST MEN WHO WERE SIMPLY OUT OF WORK.

Trying to Get to a Place Where They Could Find Something to Do, When They Were Lugged to Jail, But Let Go.

The lightning flashed in the distance last evening while two men of high stature and powerful build watched it from a Jersey Central freight. They were young men and their clothes had a respectable air that made it evident that they were not tramps. The hands of the clock in the Western Union telegraph office pointed to 10:40 as the train in which this car was included stopped before the North Avenue station.

Then the two passengers saw another flash close by but, this time, it was the badge of a policeman. The two train riders were promptly arrested and locked up in the stuffy little cells in the rookery.

This morning, both were arraigned on the charge of trespassing on the property of the New Jersey Centrail railroad. They gave their names as Frank Smith and George Howard, both from Cincinnati, and said that they were out of work and were looking for a job. After cautioning them to keep off the railroad in the future, unless they had money enough to pay their fare, City Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on both.

1,043 HAPPY PEOPLE.

A Continual Round of Pleasure Enjoyed by the Baptist Excursionists.

There were 1,043 persons who accompanied the First Baptist church Sunday-school excursion to Asbury Park yesterday, and it required twenty-three cars to convey them to the shore. Enroute one car was seized with a hot box and had to be thrown off. The excursionists arrived at the Park in good season, having a full day at the shore. Unfortunately there was a land breeze until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but at that hour the hearts of all were gladdened for a good stiff sea breeze took the place of the former. The day was passed in the usual way, and an exceedingly large number of people sought the water for bathing to relieve themselves of the oppressive heat. The bathing was delightful and many remained in the water nearly all day.

No accidents were reported among the excursionists to mar their enjoyment, but it was reported that four women had their pocketbooks taken, but this could not be verified. On the return Plainfield was reached about 8:15, and everybody said they had a good time, though they felt a little tired.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Samuel and George Neal and "Buck" VanName went fishing at Sewaren Wednesday and captured thirty two weakfish and innumerable porgies, at least so they say.

The quail and young rabbits recently put out on the reserve of the Plainfield Game and Fish Protective Society are doing nicely. The late rains have drowned a few of the rabbits, but the quail perched high and give promise for a good fall and winter shooting.

Never before in the memory of the "oldest inhabitant" has bluefish and porgies been biting as they are now at Amboy. Scarcely a day passes but some Plainfielder reports a heavy catch. Several of the business men of this city are planning a night drive to Amboy in search of the finny tribe, but as they do not embark until early next week, it is a little premature to mention their names.

Mrs. Adam Seals, of Watchung avenue, has returned home after a short visit in Somerville.

Miss Cora Richardson, of East Sixth street, gave a boating party to a number of her friends last evening at New Market pond.

Edward McMillan, of Newark, has returned home after a two weeks visit with Israel La Rue and family, of Liberty street.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Burt and children, Jessie and Charles, of West Seventh street, have returned from an outing at Nantucket.

Rev. P. S. Gibson preaches his last sermon before his vacation next Sunday. During his absence Revs. Boswell and Cramer, of York, will alternate in supplying the pulpit.

Mrs. Clara Spencer and daughter, Welka, of Baltimore, are on a three weeks visit at the home of her cousin, Mrs. Mickel Wunderlich, of Leland avenue. The visit is all the more pleasant, because Mrs. Wunderlich has not seen her cousin since she was a little girl in short dresses.

A Word or Two

to those suffering from catarrh or the thousands subject to severe attacks of cold in the head, will not be amiss if a sure remedy can be offered. Ely's Cream Balm has become a favorite in all sections of the United States, because of its effectiveness. Your cold in the head will be quickly relieved by it, and the severest attack of catarrh will yield to, and be perfectly cured by a thorough treatment. Catarrh is not a blood disease, but inflammation of the passages of the nose and throat, due to climatic changes.

The Art Of Buying Well

is the secret of success, domestic happiness and comfort, where your coal supply is concerned. No thoughtful man would buy coal just because it is cheap. A considerate man thinks of those who have to use it, and endeavors to save them trouble and annoyance by seeking quality. We have the combination of the best coal mined, and the very lowest prices.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Townsend Rushmore and L. H. Biglow, Jr., will take a two weeks' cycling trip over Long Island.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins, of East Front street, is the latest cycle enthusiast, and he can now be seen taking frequent spins.

H. E. Rider, of North avenue, has sold two more of the popular Richmonds. One was purchased by Mrs. E. E. Marshall and the other by George Gary.

Harry VanEmburgh and Harry Coward went riding on the new Hunter tandem late last evening, and were run into at the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street by a reckless driver from New Brunswick. Both riders were thrown from the wheel and badly shaken up, while the tandem was somewhat damaged. The man rode away as fast as possible, not stopping to see if any one was injured.

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

Crossman Will Have to Disprove the Charge of Misappropriating Funds.

E. R. Crossman, who claimed to have bought Hotel Netherwood and paid $85,000 for it, and who succeeded in getting money under these pretences, was arraigned in Centre street police court, New York, this morning, on the charge of getting money under false pretences as told in The Press of yesterday.

J. F. MacDonald swore that he never bought the hotel, and testimony refuting his claims was also received from Fred Hand, John Hensey, Carl Davidson and Rudolp Lerch. He was held to await the action of the grand jury under $1,500 bail.

Arthur Miller and S. S. Swackhamer represented the Plainfield parties, who will also commence civil suits against him to recover money.

—Holy Communion will be celebrated at Mt. Olive Baptist church next Sunday.

CORAL FORMATIONS.

They Are to Be Investigated by Prof. Agassiz, of Harvard.

Prof. Agassiz, of Harvard university, the worthy son of a worthy father, has lately commenced the exploration of that singular line of coral formations extending a distance of several hundred miles along the Queensland coast, and known as the "Great Barrier reef." He is accompanied by Dr. Woodward, one of the instructors in natural history at Harvard, also by a young student, Mr. Mayer, who lately took his degree in natural history at the same university. The professor, who is an enthusiast in the work of deep-sea dredging, having obtained promises of assistance from the Harvard university authorities, and from the American, British and Colonial governments, has made all the preparations requisite to insure the success of his undertaking. He has chartered a steamer in Sydney, and provided it with dredging and sounding machinery, together with all needful appliances, and purposes conducting his investigations, at depths of from 50 to 300 fathoms, as far north as Torres straits, his principal object being to secure all available information respecting the distribution of the surface animals, and the depth at which they are found. He is also desirous of collecting details which may aid in throwing some light on the origin of coral reefs, concerning which there are two theories, those of Darwin and Murray, each of which has a large number of supporters. The work of investigation will occupy several months, after which the party will return, by way of London, to the United States.

OUTWITTED A HAWK.

Clever Maneuver by Pigeons Which Fooled the Bird of Prey.

The Southern Sportsman told recently about a flock of pigeons that measured brains with a hawk and came out on top in the contest. H. S. Edwards owned a flock of pigeons which one day were cut off from their cote by a large hawk. The pigeons knew that if the hawk once got above them, one at least of their number would go to make the hawk a meal, and so up they flew in circles, perhaps hoping to go higher than the hawk. In the rising game they were no match for the hawk. The latter kept under the pigeons, and leisurely followed their laborious movements.

Then came a curious and unexpected sight to Mr. Edwards. Every pigeon closed its wings, when they appeared to be the size of sparrows, and down they came past the hawk at a terrific rate. That astonished the hawk. It actually dodged the dropping birds, and missed half a dozen wing strokes before it got in full chase of them. When it got down to the barnyard not a pigeon was in sight—some were in the cote, some in the porch, two in the wellhouse, and one was in the kitchen. The hawk had been outwitted completely. It is a question how the pigeons managed to check their fall, as they did not slacken up till they were about 16 or 20 feet above the ground, when they scattered in all directions to escape the hawk.

THE KANGAROO CAT.

One of These Strange Creatures Is Owned by a Chicago Man.

One of the most curious animals in the world is the kangaroo cat. These funny creatures are very scarce. You might easily travel all over the world without seeing one.

They have fur and claws and whiskers, just like any other cat, and they are fond of hunting mice, but otherwise they resemble the kangaroo.

The nose of the kangaroo cat is long and sharp, just like a shepherd's dog, and they sit up on their hind legs, and have a long, stout tail; they jump about just like a kangaroo, too, and you know the kangaroo is a famous jumper.

A Chicago man who owns one of these queer pets has had it since it was a wee kitten about six weeks old. This odd little fellow can jump from the ground to the top of a high board fence, and a blow from his thick, hard tail would break your arm.

You can see from the portrait of the kangaroo cat published with this what a peculiar feline the animal is, and how funny he looks when he is sitting down.—N. Y. Recorder.

ETIQUETTE NOTES.

It is not customary for the bride to present the bridesmaids with their dresses. The bride usually gives them some little souvenir of the day.

In acknowledging her wedding gifts, even if the bride is not acquainted with the givers, she should write her notes in the first person and not in the third.

In making a formal call on a married lady one leaves one of one's own and two of one's husband's cards. If the maid offers to take them they are all given to her at once, for during the daytime it is a recognized fact that the husband is usually represented upon such occasions by his visiting card.

Professional men or men in the army or navy have a right to their titles; consequently the invitation would be properly addressed if it read: "Capt. and Mrs. William Black." Initials are considered bad form; titles, such as doctor, captain or general, should be written in full and not abbreviated.

The fact that the man you are to marry is a widower need not prevent you from wearing white or being married in church. It would be perfectly proper to invite all your friends and acquaintances to witness the church marriage, and then only to have the immediate families and those close friends whom you wish with you at the wedding breakfast.—Ladies' Home Journal.
